Charles House Begins Series on Military Obligations Facing Youth

BY CHARLES HOUSE
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

The chubby-cheeked little boy with popcorn teeth is suddenly 17 years old. There is a suggestion of a baritone rumble in his voice and there may be fuzz on his chin. Startled parents regard him with surprise and tell themselves that it happened "almost overnight."

It didn't though. It required 17 years. Now he is indeed a young man. He is on the threshold of decision. One decision is — and should be — imminent. He should carefully consider the fact that he is soon to have the duty and the right to serve his country.

He owes six years of military duty to the United States. Next year, when he is 18, he will incur the obligation and commence the first phase of his six year duty.

If he acts now he may do so with wisdom. He may wish to consider joining the reserve forces of either the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Force, Coast Guard, or the Wisconsin National Guard.

He may be one of the rare young men who cannot or will not finish high school. If so, he may enlist in almost any of the services: Army (age limits 17-

Costello Branco Picked for Top Brazilian Post

Named President By Congress at Joint Session

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP)—Congress elected Gen. Humberto Castello Branco president of Brazil on Saturday.

Castello Branco will serve until Jan. 31, 1966, when a full-term president is expected to be elected.

He received 361 votes from a joint session of Congress.

Former President Eurico Dutra polled two votes and Christian Democratic Deputy Juarez Tavora three votes.

Seventy-two deputies abstained.

Shooting Incident

Senate President Auro Moura Andrade announced Castello Branco would be inaugurated Wednesday at the Planalto presidential palace here.

The election was preceded by pistol shots.

The shooting incident was touched off by a chance meeting in the congressional lobby of Deputy Osvaldo Lima Filho, a supporter of ousted President Joao Goulart, and Deputy Milton Cabral. Lima Filho accused Cabral of supporting the anti-Goulart coup, led by Castello Branco. The two went at each other with fists. Then, witnesses said, Lima Filho drew a pistol, fired three times but missed Cabral. The bullets hit a wall.

Guards and other congressmen separated the pair.

Striking Switchmen Return to Their Jobs

ROSEVILLE, Calif. (AP)—Striking switchmen at Southern Pacific's Roseville crossroads yards returned to work Saturday after earlier threatening to fire their union officers rather than comply with a 15-day nationwide strike postponement arranged by President Johnson.

The more than 200 switchmen had walked out Thursday before Southern Pacific could carry out its announced intent to post new work rules—target of the threatened strike.

Southern Pacific said it had managed to keep its freight and passenger trains rolling on schedule despite spread of the Roseville stoppage to other Northern California yards.

Johnson Backs Khrushchev In Efforts to Preserve Peace

The Coast Guard Cutter Mesquite, upper right, and the Toen tug John Purves, upper left, remained aground in upper Green Bay near Escanaba Saturday, despite efforts of another cutter, Sundew, foreground, to pull them free. A third cutter and another tug still were trying to free the ships Saturday night. The Mesquite was continuing to take on water through a gash in her hull before being freed later. Anyone for Cream Puffs, Family Asks?

When a gallon of milk turns out to be whipping cream, that's a bonus. But what do you do with three gallons of the stuff when you have milk-thirsty youngsters to satisfy?

That's the unusual problem which an Appleton family experienced Friday morning. Mrs. Leroy L. Vosters, 514 E. Coolidge Ave., was transferring "milk" from a gallon carton into a container easier to pour from. She and her husband noticed the frothiness. A taste led her to think the white liquid was "half-and-half."

Later, a whipping test convinced them they had a gallon of whipping cream on their hands. A second gallon purchased at Vosters Grocery, Kaukauna, also proved to be pure whipping cream. Still needing milk, Vosters stopped at her parents' store in Kaukauna and purchased another gallon of

Mesquite Pulled Off Shoal on Bay

ESCANABA — The Coast Guard buoy tender Mesquite, which ran aground near here while setting buoys Friday, was pulled free Saturday night and was to be towed here for emergency repairs.

The Mesquite was freed through the combined efforts of her sister ship, the Sundew, and the Toen Tug John Purves, which was pulled free of the same shoal earlier Saturday. The Purves ran aground Friday while trying to free the Mesquite.

Chief Warrant Officer Lowell Mead of the Coast Guard's Two Rivers command station, said the Mesquite was pulled off the shoal at 8:05 p.m. Saturday.

Mead said efforts to free the Mesquite proved successful only after her forward ballast tanks were pumped dry and

Surplus Food Assumes Vital Role in Policy

Does Many Jobs Abroad for Nation And Its Friends

WASHINGTON (AP) — Surplus American food is complementing—and in some cases replacing—the dollar in performing a multitude of jobs for the nation and its friends abroad.

Those jobs include bridge building, construction of American military and other housing, erection of schools, financing of research, translation of books, payment of American obligations in some countries and building of common defense facilities.

The extent to which food is being used in place of dollars is outlined in the government's recent report on what is popularly called the food-for-peace program.

Over $11.4 Billion

Under this program, farm surpluses — many accumulated under government price-support operations—are made available to economically weak countries under concessionary terms. In some cases, they are donated to help relieve famine and distress growing out of disasters.

Since the program was started in 1954, more than $11.4 billion in farm products have been moved abroad under the program.

In most cases, countries receiving the food pay for it in their own currencies. Uncle Sam uses these currencies to finance scores of activities designed to help both this country and the recipients of the food. He can do this without using his own dollars, and thus hold down his balance-of-payments deficits.

Without the food, this country could not have carried on all the activities abroad that it has without running into a very serious foreign exchange problem that might have forced a cheapening of the dollar.

Scarlet Fever, Mumps Add to Belgian Problem

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP)—Scattered outbreaks of scarlet fever, measles and mumps in three Belgian provinces goaded the government Saturday night to urgent new efforts to end an 11-day-old doctors' strike.

Strike leaders advised parents in Liege, Antwerp and Luxembourg provinces to keep their children home from school Monday to prevent spread of the infections.

A spokesman for the strikers said: "Emergency medical arrangements set up by the doctors are coping with the cases reported thus far. But there have been isolated cases in three provinces, and it would be impossible to deal with an epidemic in present circumstances."

Since the walkout began, all serious cases of any type have been taken to hospitals, where standby teams of doctors have provided treatment. This arrangement has packed hospitals throughout the country. There are no extra facilities available to take care of a major outbreak.

Barrell Rolling Race Result of Challenge

SALISBURY, Southern Rhodesia, (AP) — Justice Minister Clifford Dupont, in derby and striped pants, nosed out ex-premier Sir Edgar Whitehead, wearing shorts, in a downtown beer barrel rolling race. Dupont took up the challenge after Whitehead ribbed him about omitting an old law forbidding barrel rolling from a new criminal code.

Assures Soviet Leader Of American Support in Any Move to Prevent War

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson said Saturday Soviet Premier Khrushchev is "seeking to preserve peace in the world." Johnson said that, so long as Khrushchev "talks in peaceful terms, he will always have our ear."

This was Johnson's response, at another unannounced Saturday news conference, to a request for comment on Khrushchev's recent kind words about the American President and Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

"I am glad to see," said Johnson, "that Mr. Khrushchev is playing the role of peace and seeking to preserve peace in the world. That certainly is the desire of this country. When he talks in peaceful terms, he will always have our ear."

At the same time, the President gave scant encouragement to any who would call for an early summit meeting.

No Early Trip Abroad

Johnson said that because of the forthcoming election, his newness in office, the absence of a vice president, and a multitude of foreign policy problems he does not plan to leave the continental United States this year.

The only things that could take him abroad, he said, would be an unforeseen emergency or "some feeling that great advances could be made."

This did, however, leave the door slightly ajar for a possible 1964 summit session.

Not Entering Dispute

Aides said that in his response about Khrushchev, Johnson was not trying to get into the Sino-Soviet dispute on Moscow's side. The Kremlin accuses the Chinese of advocating nuclear war instead of Khrushchev's "peaceful coexistence."

Johnson was here referring to "complimentary" remarks—as the questioner put it—which Khrushchev made during his Hungarian tour, the U.S. sources said.

Khrushchev said in an April 6 speech that, "The United States is an imperialist country but its government judges the world situation soberly."

Secret Speed Records

Johnson also made an announcement that touched upon the technological rivalry between the United States and the Soviet Union.

"The world record for aircraft speed, currently held by the Soviets, has been repeatedly broken in secrecy by the United States aircraft AII," he said.

Relations with the Soviet Union also came up during the 20-

Personal Tour By President For Visitors

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson interrupted a quiet stroll around the White House grounds Saturday to order the gates opened and a flock of tourists admitted to join him on his trek.

Johnson left his office, headed for lunch, about 2:30 p.m. when, as he later told it, aide Bill Moyers suggested they take a walk.

With a handful of Secret Service agents and assistants in tow, Johnson headed down the asphalt driveway behind the White House. Nearby was a wrought iron gate behind which shouting tourists were massed.

The President ordered the gates opened and some 100 sightseers found themselves suddenly propelled into the usually unoccupied lawns at the south of the executive mansion, facing the Washington Monument.

With Johnson in the lead, the visitors made a slow tour of the circular drive behind the White House, winding up at the same gate through which they had entered so unexpectedly.

Appleton Party Investigates Southern Situation On Personal Tour of Conditions in Mississippi

Congregational Pastor, Lawrence
Students Relate Trip Impressions

BY W. R. DOBERSTEIN

Get into a car and drive about a thousand miles due south of the Fox Cities to see the "Southern situation" first-hand.

That's what a group of 20 did during Easter vacation week. Accompanied by the Rev. William Charland, assistant pastor of the First Congregational Church, Appleton, and Miss Roberta Hankamer, assistant dean of women at Lawrence College, 18 Lawrence students made the trip, which the church sponsored.

Purpose of the visit was to give northern students a chance

Governor Says New Fox Valley College Likely

Or Near Green Bay

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON—Gov. Reynolds believes the establishment of a new 4-year state-supported higher education institution in the Fox River Valley is probably inevitable, and that such an institution won't be an additional cost to the state budget.

If such 4-year college opportunities are not provided in the population centers of the state, the state government will be forced to expand the University at Madison and the other existing institutions, at a similar cost to the tax budget, but with higher costs to the parents of thousands of new students who will be clamoring for college admission during the next decade, he told a news conference.

"Given the vast numbers of new students in prospect, the movement for the establishment of more 4-year schools is natural," he said when he was asked about the tentative plan for an institution in the Fox River Valley.

'Children Are Here'
"The children are here. They are going to college. If we don't build the facilities in the other population centers such as the big Fox River Valley and the Racine-Kenosha area, we will be required to build them here in Madison," he said.

Reynolds said the pressure for such a decentralization of college level training opportunity will increase because in the average family the most important obstacle to college is the room and board cost for the parents of the student.

The prospect of a northeastern Wisconsin 4-year institution was highlighted recently by a proposal of a plans committee of the Coordinating Committee for Higher Education which concluded that a location in or near Green Bay should have priority over a campus in the Racine-Kenosha district. The University of Wisconsin's planning thus far has given the southeastern section of the state precedence.

Ordination Service

Set for Neenah Man

To Become Minister

NEENAH — Dr. Theodore Matson, president of the Wisconsin — Upper Michigan Synod of the Lutheran Church in America, will conduct an ordination service for Roger Gantzel, a son of St. Paul Church, at 2.30 p.m. on Sunday, May 24, at St. Paul's Lutheran Church. Dr. Matson also will preach the sermon.

Mr. Gantzel, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Burns, 1757 Brighton Beach Road, Menasha, is a graduate of Carthage College and of Northwestern Lutheran Theological Seminary. St. Paul's Lutheran Church Women will be hostesses for the reception after the service.

to see for themselves things they had read and been told about the learning atmosphere in Mississippi. Observation of the problems at Back Bay Mission in Biloxi, on the Gulf coast, was given major emphasis but the group also spent two days in Jackson and at nearby Tougaloo College.

Impressions
Impressions of things seen and heard have been recounted by the Rev. Mr. Charland and several of the students — John Sower, Richard Mewaldt, Marti Virtue and Jean Harrison.

At Tougaloo, where the group spent two days they quickly heard about heavy publicity all through the South given "Appleton's enthusiastic reception and support for Gov. Wallace."

They met the Rev. Ed King, white Mississippi native who shared a mock election ticket with Aaron Henry, NAACP official. As candidates for "Lt. Governor" and "Governor", respectively, they drew 80,000 straw votes — more than the plurality in the actual state election, the Rev. Mr. Charland was told.

Official voting is restricted to a minority because much of the population is unregistered. Besides a poll tax required of most voters (those past 21 and less than 60 years of age), a written test on the state constitution is required of registration applicants. It is strongly asserted that two standards are applied in question preparation and "grading" the tests (handled by circuit clerks) — one standard for white registrants, another for Negroes.

Training Negro citizens for voter registration tests is to be a major summer project of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee in which many Tougaloo students will be participating.

The Rev. Mr. Charland was told of two bills pending action by the state legislature there. One is to revoke Tougaloo's charter. The college is a stronghold for militant action for civil rights. This bill was still in committee.

Another bill, already passed by the Mississippi House, but not the state senate, seeks to legalize sterilization of any mother who has borne an illegitimate child. Mississippi, a state since 1817, has increased in population 40 per cent between 1900 and 1960 while U. S. population grew 116 per cent, according to 1960 statistics.

Segregated Church
In Jackson, the Rev. Mr. Charland sought to attend Methodist services accompanied by two Negro students. Ushers refused them admittance and an audience with the pastor was denied. Policemen were parked outside the church, as they were at other white churches in the city.

Three church bodies — Episcopal, Unitarian and Roman Catholic — conduct services without racial segregation there.

In Biloxi, community attitude toward the Back Bay Mission had changed since last year's visit, the Rev. Mr. Charland said. Last fall a former director of the Mission attempted "overt acts" in behalf of civil rights. They boomeranged.

"Wade-In"
The previously substantial mixed membership, involved in an active program for all age groups, has shrunk to about one fifth what it was before a NAACP "banquet" was held at the Mission on Halloween and the previous director led a "wade-in" demonstration at a public beach.

A 27-mile stretch of beach on the Biloxi waterfront is classified as "public beach." The Lawrence students or any whites could use it all they wished. If Negroes try to use it, white residents adjacent to the beach bring charges of trespassing because they technically retain legal ownership of it. This "dual-rule" was the object of the wade-in demonstration which involved two Negro staff members and the Mission director.

The Appleton pastor encountered two instances of the aura of caution which has become a part of the Mississippi scene. One day in Biloxi, while raking leaves, he saw a car falter and stop. A Negro in Air Force fatures got out and made a pretense of asking directions. After guarded conversation revealed the pastor as not being a native, the airman identified himself as a NAACP leader.

Hidden Press

When he visited the offices of the Mississippi Free Press, a side image was reflected in a group visit with Mayor Dan Guice. His careful answers to questions bore out the economic importance of Biloxi's tourist trade and revenue from nearby Keesler Air Force base. Gambling activities there have attracted many out-of-state visitors. And, although Mississippi is by law a "dry state," there is little restriction of the sale of alcoholic products. In fact, a recently passed law taxes liquor sales, the group was told.

"White Only"

The many paradoxes in the state, between outside image and local practice, occurred to Lawrence student John Sower. A "dingy, ramshackle general store (in Biloxi) had a "White Only" sign posted.

"Until you've walked into a grubby, greasy looking store like that, it's hard to understand the prejudice. You wonder who could possibly be not good enough to enter such a place of business," said Sower.

Miss Virtue was wryly amused by a large billboard which read "Peace Shall Come to the Proceeds of Party Sent to Anchorage

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP)—The letter contained $4.65, proceeds from a circus given by Man Who Searches for It." Another student's reaction seemed to be typical of impressions brought home:

"You get a feeling of helplessness as to how to change their (southern white) thinking."

pupils of the Jefferson Elementary School in Carlsbad, Calif.

"We were glad to do this for you and hope you are well. We put five weeks practice into our acts. We hope this will help. Yours truly, Karen, Mike Wohl, Jeff Edwards, Karen, Kirt, Joey, Mary and Terri." The Red Cross said Friday the money would be used to help earthquake victims.

Reid Brothers Left Mark On Lawrence, Appleton

BY MARGUERITE SCHUMANN
For a reminder that all flesh is indeed as the grass, one need only look to Alexander J. Reid and his brother Thomas.
Once these verbal Irishmen thundered in the editorial columns of the Appleton Post; they held political appointments that made them known throughout the state and as far afield as Ireland and Portugal where each served as consul.
Yet today, for lack of male heirs, the Reid line is extinct in Appleton; the name is remembered through the Reid Municipal Golf Course, a street on the western edge of the city, a number of prizes in literature at Lawrence College, and a circle of tombstones in Riverside Cemetery.

Various Evidences
Scattered around the Lawrence campus are various evidences that Alexander Reid was once a trustee, and several members of the family once students. The college catalogue annually lists the Alexander Reid prize in the literary sketch, and these scholarships for graduate work — the Thomas B. Reid scholarship in journalism, and Estelle Ray Reid scholarships in art and library work, endowed by the daughter of Thomas.
Mrs. Alexander Reid, the former Alice Foote Conkey, is recalled in a marble portrait bust, elegantly gowned in Victoriana, plus a slender volume "Personal Memorials and Poems" printed in tribute after her death in Dublin, Ireland, during the time her husband served as consul. A sample of A. J. Reid's own literary style is found in the Lawrence library, in a Chamber of Commerce promotional piece, "The Resources and Manufacturing Capacity of the Lower Fox Valley."

The Reid brothers, Thomas the elder by two years, were born of Irish parentage in New York state in the middle 1840s, and emigrated to an Oconomowoc farm in the 1860s. Thomas got a job on the Dubuque Times, where his coverage of Abraham Lincoln's second presidential campaign was considered outstanding, while Alexander finished high school.

Partnership
In 1865, the brothers began their first journalistic collaboration by founding the Oconomowoc Badger. "This paper was not classed as a back number in the field of Wisconsin journalism," a 19th century report on the 21 and 19 years old editors read.

In 1867, the brothers' paths diverged for more than a decade. Alexander enrolled at Lawrence University, but his off-campus interests were more compelling than the classroom, for in the spring of his freshman year he and a fellow student leased the Appleton Post. As a college junior, he bought half interest in the newspaper. "He still continued his college work, but not to the detriment of the paper, as the editorial and local columns during those years bear witness," a biographer notes.

Meanwhile brother Thomas had a more variegated career around the state — first as half-owner of the Waukesha Freeman, then in partnership with Col. J. A. Watrous (a Lawrence alumnus who had been adjutant of the Sixth Wisconsin Infantry in the Civil War) on the Fond du Lac Commonwealth Moving north, he established the Menasha Press, and crusaded vigorously for a consolidation of Neenah and Menasha.

In 1875 Thomas Reid was made assistant chief clerk of the state senate, then sergeant at arms of the state assembly and in 1877 was appointed consultant to Portugal for four years. When he returned to this country in 1881 he entered the Post with his brother. Thomas Reid's last political appointment was a nine-year term as U. S. Marshal for the Eastern District of Wisconsin.

One of the most significant happenings in Alexander Reid's less mobile life in Appleton was his marriage to fellow Lawrentian Alice Conkey. Mrs. Reid was conceded to be brilliant — "Under the stimulus of study her mind unfolded with the rapidity of a tropical flower," someone once said handsomely. She graduated from Lawrence in 1868, second youngest in her class, and continued her studies at Vassar. For two years she taught mathematics at Northwestern University, then held an assistantship in astronomy at a Chicago observatory.

Chicago Papers
Alice Conkey's prose was apparently as good as her arithmetic, and she took a turn at journalism for the Chicago Post and Mail, as well as corresponding for several publications in New York.

Alice Conkey Reid was no Victorian clinging vine. She was "self-reliant, persistent and indefatigable. Her pen was vigorous, argumentative and persuasive." She may even have been faintly quarrelsome, for some mentioned her "indignation against real or fancied wrongs." Mrs. Reid died of inflammatory rheumatism in Dublin in 1891, and her husband brought her across the ocean for burial.

Mrs. Reid's grave, bordered with a carving of ivy, is inscribed: "Lie softly on her, gentle earth, her step was light on thee." Alicia Park, the gift of her husband to the city of Appleton, commemorates Mrs. Reid's given name.

Alexander Reid ran both the newspaper and the Appleton Post Office in the 1880s, appointed to the latter by President Arthur. During the Spanish-American War he was captain on General King's personal staff at the Presidio in San Francisco, accepting no salary and paying his own army expenses.

"As an editorial writer he had no superior, and few, if any equals in Wisconsin," one of his competitors wrote in obituary tribute after his death in 1910. "His editorials were always able, fearless, dignified and truthful, as he understood truth."

FWD Corp. Fits Into Industrial Complex

CLINTONVILLE — The FWD long-established Seagrave Corp., a producer of heavy duty trucks, tractors and specialized equipment with flexible and unique multiple wheel drive capabilities, is only one division of the diversified manufacturing company known as Mount Clemens Industries, Inc., of Bala Cynwyd, Pa.

Listed on the American Stock Exchange, Mount Clemens Industries owns 52.6 per cent of the FWD Corp., which in turn operates plants in Clintonville, Portland, Ore.; Kitchener, Ontario, and Columbus, Ohio.

FWD in July, 1963, purchased the fire fighting apparatus division of the Seagrave Corp., Columbus, Ohio, and certain phases of the Seagrave operation are now being moved to the Clintonville plant. The fire engines produced by Seagrave are sold separately through the operation. Headed by its president, Charles H. Penneys, 46, Mount Clemens Industries hopes to reach sales volume of $45 million in 1964. Consolidated net earnings for the year 1963 amounted to $794,968, or $1.24 per share, as compared to a loss of $361,781 (62 cents per share) after special provision of $722,000 in 1962.

Earnings were $97,666 and $36,646 in 1961 and 1960, respectively. The company was founded in 1961.

Operating divisions of Mount Clemens Industries are Mount Clemens Metal Products Co., operating three plants in Michigan, producing fabricated metal components used by the automotive industry, and Andover Industries, Inc., Andover, Ohio, manufacturers of custom-molded plastics for the automotive and appliance industries.

The metal products company manufactures parking brake lever assemblies, brake and clutch pedal support assemblies, hood locks, hood hinges, door window regulators, transmission control levers and similar items for all major auto producers.

Andover Industries manufactures, among other things, camera interiors, channel selectors for TV sets, decorative wall clocks and washer and dryer selector controls.

For the third time in two days, firemen were called to the home at 3:55 p.m. Friday when a chair in a garage that caught fire the day before started burning. Mrs. Wolff had extinguished the blaze with a pail of water at the time firemen arrived.

The first call came in at 11:58 p.m. Thursday when a bundle of paper in the Wolff's garage ignited, and the blaze began spreading to other areas of the garage. Firemen put out the blaze, but were called for a second time at 11:55 a.m. Friday when steam was mistaken for smoke.

Fumes from a chemistry set ignited by the flame of a candle started plastic and papers afire in the basement of the home of Harold Weiland at 11:55 a.m. Friday. Firemen were called, but Mrs. Weiland had extinguished the blaze with a pail of water before firemen arrived.

Appleton fire crews made another call at 5:59 p.m. Friday when grease in a pan overheated and ignited at the home of Ronald Groves, 1422 W. Lawrence St. Firemen extinguished the blaze.

Palmer Shoots 69, Has 5-Stroke Lead

Devlin Second in Masters
Hogan Hits Third-Round 67

BY WILL GRIMSLEY
AUGUSTA, GA. (AP) — A gambler, charged up Arnold Palmer exploded three straight birdies in a thunderclap finish for a three-under-par 69 Saturday and shot into a five-stroke lead with one round to play in the Masters Golf Tournament.

Consecutive rounds of 69-6-69 over the demanding par 72 Augusta National course gave the comeback marvel from Latrobe, Pa., a 54-hole total of 206, 10 under par, and made him a virtual cinch to become the first ever to win four Masters.

A wiry Australian outsider, Bruce Devlin, knocked in an eagle on the 15th hole for a 67 which put him closest to Arnie's heels at 21.

Other of Palmer's sternest challengers, including defending champion Jack Nicklaus, fell by the wayside in an epidemic of late, pressure-proved bogeys — and it looked like a one-man show.

Record Throng
Arnie's Army, making up most of the record throng of 40,000, was delicious.

Nicklaus, his big, booming game wild and unwieldy, shot a 71 and found himself tied at 215 with a ghost out of the past, Ben Hogan, who thrilled the gallery with some of his old wizardry for a third round three-under-par 67.

The new champion and the old had nine strokes and six other players separating them from the front running Palmer.

Dave Marr, a young pro from New Rochelle, N. Y., was in third place at 212 after a third round 69, followed by hard-luck Gary Player of South Africa, whose game cracked up on the final two holes to give him a 72, and little known Peter Butler of Birmingham, England, and Jim Ferrier, each with a 69 for a 213 total.

After firing three birdies on a stretch of five holes on the incoming nine—the 13th through the 16th—which put him within five shots of Palmer, Player suddenly went into a disastrous tailspin.

He bogied the final two holes, bunkering his second at the 17th and hitting a spectator's chair with a drive on the 18th. The ball caromed deep into the woods and all he could do was play it back to the fairway and thank Heaven for a bogey.

Devlin, a 26-year-old master plumber from Caberra, only three years out of amateur ranks, came out of nowhere to move into top contention.

Strikes Big Blow
He struck his big blow on the 520-yard 15th where a long drive and four-wood put him on the green 25 feet from the cup. He sank for an eagle. On the 18th, he trapped his second but exploded to within 18 inches to save his par.

Palmer, the slumping golfing capitalist who hasn't won a tournament since last October, was slow getting off the mark and had to scramble to play the first seven holes in par.

He rang in his first birdie at the eighth, chipping to within three feet, but lost another shot at the 11th where he duck-hooked his second into the water. He dropped out and chipped to within inches for a bogey that could have been much worse.

His birdie explosion started on the 4th. He ran in a putt from 25 feet.

While the cheers of his vast army were still ringing in his ears, he ripped into the long 15th reaching the green in two and added a third straight birdie on the 16th where he ran the ball in from 12 feet.

"I didn't get the ball as close to the hole as I did Friday," he said philosophically. "But I was satisfied with the way I played."

Even with his long lead, he never ceased to play bold, gambling golf. He hit all out from the tees, went for the greens even with threatening water staring him in the face.

Asked what his strategy was to keep his big lead, he said: "I went out to make it bigger if I could."

A Heavy Favorite
Nicklaus, who entered this 28th Masters a heavy favorite to become the first champion ever to repeat, was plagued by constant frustration.

He three-putted the third hole, banged his tee shot into the trees at the seventh and on the 12th hit a real hacker's shot—a shanked eight-iron off the tee.

This is a relatively easy par 3 of 155 yards over water. Nicklaus' shot was so poor it didn't reach the water.

He laughed afterward, remarking in a Churchillian phrase: "Never have I tried so hard and produced so little in a tournament."

Of the first six leaders, four are foreigners although Ferrier, a 49-year-old Australian, is now an American citizen.

Butler is 32, the reigning British PGA champion. He and Ferrier both made late charges with 69s in the third round.

One of the day's major collapses was that of Dow Finsterwald, former PGA champion who was beaten in a playoff for the Masters crown by Palmer in 1962. He had five bogeys on the last eight holes for 75 and 218.

Hogan played his round in almost semi-privacy while most of the fans trooped and yelled at the heels of the popular Palmer.

Marquette Picks McGuire As New Basketball Coach

Chosen From 50 Aspirants;
Lowe Athletic Director

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Al McGuire, coach at Belmont Abbey College in Belmont, N.C., the past seven years, Saturday was named head basketball coach at Marquette University, succeeding Eddie Hickey, who was fired March 26.

Dr. Thomas R. Abbott, chairman of the Marquette athletic board, said the 35-year-old McGuire was chosen from more than 50 applicants, only three of whom were interviewed personally.

Stan Lowe, a member of the school's athletic department since 1924, was named athletic director. Hickey had held both posts until he was fired after the most dismal season in Marquette's 47-year basketball history.

Toronto Wins Opener of 'Cup' Series

Pulford Scores Last-Minute Goal Against Wings

TORONTO (AP)—Speedy Bob Pulford broke loose for a dramatic last minute goal while his Toronto team was shorthanded Saturday night to give the Leafs a 3-2 decision in the opener of the Stanley Cup hockey finals with the Detroit Red Wings.

A happy crowd of 14,075 fans saw the Leafs, who had trailed from the opening moments of the game, come from behind to tie the score early in the third period setting up Pulford's winning dash.

Allan Stanley of the Leafs had gone to the penalty box at 19:17 of the final period and Detroit was pressing hard around Leaf goalie Johnny Bower. Pulford sizzled between Gordie Howe and Norm Ullman of the Wings and skated 90 feet for a close-in blast that beat Detroit goalie Terry Sawchuk cleanly with only two seconds of play left.

Signs of Wear
The penalty-marked game was tame in comparison with the bruising semifinal series and both teams showed signs of wear.

Both teams were short a man when they traded opening goals in the first period.

Bruce MacGregor tallied for Detroit at 4:31 and it took the Leafs only 12 seconds to tie things up as George Armstrong scored.

Howe, who had not scored against the Leafs in 14 games of regular season play, finally made it at 10:25 of the opening period with Eddie Shack in the penalty box.

St. John Captain McGuire Was Captain of the 1951 St. John's University Team Which Finished Third in the National Invitation Tournament. He Played for the New York Knickerbockers of the National Basketball Association and then served as an assistant coach at Dartmouth from 1954-56.

McGuire's Belmont Abbey Teams posted a record of 120 victories and 60 defeats. Five of his seven teams went to small college tournaments.

Terms of his Marquette contract were not disclosed.

A Marquette source said that McGuire applied for the Marquette post at the suggestion of Frank McGuire, his coach at St. John's who now is at South Carolina. They are not related.

Lowe, who is 60, became director of ticket sales while a senior at Marquette. He moved up to athletic business manager in 1947 and became assistant athletic director under Hickey in 1962.

Hickey became Marquette's eighth basketball coach in 1958 after successful years at Creighton and St. Louis. He was discharged last month after the Warriors managed only five victories in 26 games.

Carty's Hit Gives Braves 2-1 Triumph

Alou Homers; Sadowski and Tiefenauer Stop Yankees

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Ricardo Carty, a rookie outfielder, drove in Milwaukee's winning run with an eighth-inning double off Hal Reniff Saturday for a 2-1 victory over the New York Yankees.

Jim Bouton had his longest outing of the spring, seven innings, and performed creditably. The only Milwaukee run off him was a leadoff homer by Felipe Alou in the first.

The Yanks tied the score in the seventh on Tom Tresh's bunt single, an infield out and Elston Howard's single. Bob Sadowski was the winner and Reniff the loser.

Tony Kubek missed his third straight game due to a sore back. Mickey Mantle and Bobby Richardson had the day off.

Ty Cline, a standout this spring, set up Carty's decisive blow by greeting Reniff with a single to start the eighth. Len Gabrielson, who is bothered by a sore leg, forced Cline and then came all the way around on Carty's smash down the left field line.

Carty's double in his lone trip to the plate wound up the Grapefruit League season with a .408 batting average, tops on the team. His 20 hits and 13 runs batted in also were high marks for the Braves.

Might Change Mind
Manager Bobby Bragan said that Carty still hadn't beaten out veteran Lee Maye for the left field job. However, Bragan said, he might change his mind if Carty continues his hot hitting.

The victory over the Yanks enabled the Braves to finish their Grapefruit League campaign with a 17-6 record. They boarded a plane immediately after the game and headed for Salt Lake City for an exhibition with the Pacific Coast Bees Sunday.

Sadowski, tuning up for his initial regular season start at San Francisco next Wednesday, allowed only six hits, struck out five and didn't walk a man in seven innings. Bob Tiefenauer, the knuckleball relief artist, surrendered two harmless hits in the final two innings.

Roy McMillan, veteran shortstop who won his duel with young Denny Menke for the opening day starting shot, celebrated by leading the Braves' 10-hit attack with a double and a pair of singles.

Roy McMillan Wins Berth in Starting Lineup

Torre Will Open At First Base Against Giants

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Veteran shortstop Roy McMillan won a berth in the starting lineup announced Saturday by Manager Bobby Bragan for the Milwaukee Braves opener in San Francisco Tuesday.

The selection of McMillan over Denis Menke, who is making a strong bid for the shortstop berth in his sophomore year, was the only surprise in the lineup for the opener.

With right-hander Juan Marichal pitching for the Giants, Bragan plans to use Joe Torre at first base with Ed Bailey catching.

Warren Spahn was announced Friday as the Braves starter at Candlestick Park.

Here is the starting lineup announced by Bragan Saturday as the Braves closed their Florida stay with a 2-1 victory over the New York Yankees and headed for the West Coast.

Carlos Ortiz Wins Decision Over Lane

Retains Crown On Unanimous 15-Round Verdict

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) —Lightweight champion Carlos Ortiz, who had won three previous defenses by knockouts, turned crafty Saturday night and carefully carved out a unanimous 15-round decision in his title bout with veteran Keny Lane.

Each fighter came in at 135 for the bout in outdoor Bithorn Stadium, but Lane, a 32-year-old veteran from Muskegon, Mich., had to make three tries at the scales before hitting the lightweight limit.

Has Slight Cut

Each fighter sustained an eye cut. Lane was cut over the left eyebrow in the seventh, and it was opened again in the 11th. Ortiz had a slight cut in the final round. Neither wound appeared to be a major factor.

Pantaleo, from Philadelphia, scored it 144-141 for the champion, while Puerto Rican judges Roberto Carrasquillo and Edmundo Fernandez called it 148-144 and 147-143, both for Ortiz. The AP scored for the champ 147-140.

Lane, the self-proclaimed better boxer who had been campaigning for a year for the title shot, simply found himself out-boxed as Ortiz solved his awkward, left-handed style and scored repeatedly with a looping right.

Lane, on the other hand, just couldn't seem to get started. He finally penetrated Ortiz' carefully-constructed defenses in the 11th and 12th rounds, but took heavy punishment in return.

The 13th was slow and the crowd of about 21,000 started whistling for action. Ortiz responded in the 14th with his best showing, driving Lane to the ropes with a two-handed flurry and later dropping him with a left hook.

It was Ortiz' fourth successful defense of the title he won from Joe Brown two years ago. For the veteran Lane, who had been chasing Ortiz for a year, it was a severe disappointment.

It was his second unsuccessful title shot—he lost a 15-round decision to Brown six years ago—and possibly his last. Ortiz had a guarantee of $62,500 and Lane $12,500.

Crandall Blasts 4-Run Homer

Giants Score 12-7 Win in Exhibition Tilt

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Del Crandall belted a grand slam home run in the third inning that paced the San Francisco Giants to a 12-7 victory over the Cleveland Indians Saturday.

It was the National Leaguers' 12th triumph in 13 tries against Cleveland this spring and moved their over-all spring record to 25-6.

Crandall's four-baser was his first since he was traded to the Giants last winter in a major deal with the Milwaukee Braves. It came with Jim Hart, Willie McCovey and Orlando Cepeda on base.

The home run victim was Tommy John, a rookie left-hander who departed in the third after the Giants had run up a 7-2 lead.

McCovey Homers
McCovey blasted his fourth exhibition home run in the seventh inning with Cap Peterson on base.

Three new Giants shared the first six innings and was within one out of a reasonably effective three-run performance when Woody Held rapped a two-run homer that temporarily narrowed the margin to 8-5.

Max Alvis and Fred Whitfield slugged bases-empty back-to-back homers in the eighth off Bob Shaw, who, like Hendley, came from Milwaukee along with Crandall.

Ken MacKenzie, acquired from St. Louis, retired the Indians 1-2-3 in the ninth inning.

St. Norbert College's Chuck Hoch became the first base-runner of Saturday's doubleheader against the Titans in Oshkosh. The first baseman is Don Lehman. OSC won the opener, 10-2, but lost the second game, 3-1. (Post-Crescent Photo)

NOTES and NOTIONS

Even though it's getting almost as difficult for a champion to repeat in the National Baseball League race as it is in the Masters golf tournament, the proprietor of this space is moving out on the limb to pick the Dodgers as the 1964 titlist. This appears to add up to a rematch of the 1963 World Series foes, since I haven't become bold enough to earmark anyone but the Yankees as American League kingpins. Five straight NL champs have sought vainly to repeat. No one has done it since the Milwaukee Braves won back-to-back flags in 1957-8. We pick the Walt Alston-led Dodgers to edge out a flock of bonafide contenders—San Francisco, Milwaukee, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Philadelphia — because they continue to have in greatest abundance that most precious baseball commodity, strong pitching. In view of the ever-shrinking roster of .300 hitters, pitching seems to be becoming increasingly effective and important—and no other NL team has as many proven blue-chip mound artists as Los Angeles. The best that can be said about the AL race is that the Yanks probably won't win by as big a margin as their 10½-game spread of 1963. Some of the other clubs—notably Minnesota, Chicago and Baltimore—appear to be gaining on the Yanks in either pitching or power, or both, but they aren't ready to close the gap completely.

No other club can match the Dodgers' big four of Sandy Koufax, Don Drysdale, Johnny Podres and Ron Perranoski. Though they'll probably be outthit (in average and homers) by four of five clubs, the Dodgers can count on clutch hitting from Tommy Davis, Frank Howard, Ron Fairly and Jim Gilliam. And, with the likes of Maury Wills and Willie Davis, Los Angeles has the speed that can break up ball games. If John Roseboro is out longer than expected, the Dodgers could be vulnerable behind the plate. A trade could patch up this weakness, however. A Dodger intangible is the confidence picked up by landing a 4-straight-win blow on the Yankees' chin last October.

Phillies Have Made Tremendous Strides

Because of the uncertainties of baseball and the over-all strength of the NL, the Dodgers rate only a slim choice. To be reckoned with strongly are the Cardinals, who were pennant-bound until their showdown series with Los Angeles last September; the Giants, who still have most of the players responsible for the 1962 pennant; the Reds, who still have the nucleus of the '61 pennant team; and the Braves, who appear to be the most improved club. Further complicating the reckoning are the Phillies, who have made tremendous strides in the last two years under Manager Gene Mauch.

If Dodger pitching falters in the least, San Francisco appears ready to move in on the big prize. The Giants, major disappointments last season, appear to be back in form. They continue to have power to spare (in Willie Mays, Orlando Cepeda and Willie McCovey) and have beefed up their pitching with the addition of Bob Shaw and Bob Hendley from the Braves. Del Crandall won't do the catching any harm, either. Speed and defense may be the only question marks for the Al Dark-managed team.

Although exhibition - season records have often been misleading, it doesn't appear that the Braves' strong Florida showing is a fluke. Look for Manager Bobby Bragan to bring the club in third. Whether Milwaukee can finish even higher than this—or even drop a couple of notches lower—will depend on the young pitchers behind Warren Spahn. They have a world of promise but are limited in experience. Pitchers like Denny Lemaster, Bob Sadowski, Tony Cloninger and Hank Fischer could be baseball's next great staff—but the date of their "arrival" as a group remains uncertain.

Braves, Giants Both Benefit From Deal

The Braves, like the Giants, figure to benefit from their winter trade that brought in a topnotch outfielder, Felipe Alou; a dangerous left-handed hitter, Ed Bailey; and a potentially good reliever, Billy Hoelt. In addition, the acquisitions from last summer's deal with St. Louis, Sadowski and Gene Oliver should continue to pay dividends. The Braves are perhaps the only club in the league with three probable hall-of-famers in the 1964 lineup. They are Spahn, the ageless wizard; Henry Aaron, generally considered baseball's best hitter; and Ed Mathews, a consistent home run threat. If the Braves play up to their capabilities, a 1964 attendance revival is almost sure to follow.

Rating a strong St. Louis club no better than fourth gives an indication of the probable intensity of the '64 race. The Cards have baseball's best infield. And, if Roger Craig wins the close ones he lost with the Mets, the pitching will be close to Dodger quality. With Stan Musial and George Altman (traded in the Craig deal) both gone, outfield power is the biggest Card question - mark. Philadelphia and Cincinnati could both make a strong race of it if doubtful quantities in the hurling department come through. Let's pick the Phils to edge the Reds for fifth place. The Phils must get a comeback from Art Mahaffey and a strong comeback from Art Mahaffey and a strong showing from Jim Bunning, for whom they sacrificed Don Demeter in an inter-league trade. The Reds, though blessed with such stalwarts as Frank Robinson, Vada Pinson and Jim Maloney, need about-face performances from Joey Jay and Bob Purkey. Chicago will be troublesome but will find it difficult, or impossible to replace the late Ken Hubbs this season. The Cubs also have a couple of battery weaknesses, which may keep them from being in the pennant fight, but they could finish above .500 for the second straight season. Pittsburgh, Houston and the Mets figure to bring up the final three places, in that order.

The Yanks have switched managers again, but it probably won't have any more effect on their flag as Joel Ungrodt and Dave Brainard, two of Lawrence College's three double winners Saturday, are shown enroute to victories in the 120-yard high hurdles (upper photo) and 220-yard dash. pirations than did the change from Stengel to Houk. On the basis of his shrewdness as the regular Yank catcher for years, Yogi Berra should be able to change pitchers and juggle his platoons to the best advantage—and he has baseball's best-rounded cast to direct. Any number of Yank regulars had off-seasons or injury-ridden seasons in '63; but the great bench came through. Most of them—from Mickey Mantle on down—should have more productive seasons this time. The Twins, with power to equal the Yanks', should make it interesting—and could even take it all if Camilo Pascual gets sufficient pitching help. Harmon Killebrew, Jim Hall and Bob Allison figure to enable the Twins to swap places in the standings with last year's runnerup, Chicago. The White Sox have problems in Pete Ward's back and Dave Nicholson strikeout-proneness, but Al Lopez has the pitching and defense to make it interesting all the way. Baltimore has enough "plusses" in the likes of "Boog" Powell, Brooks Robinson and Steve Barber to rate a nod over Detroit in the battle for fourth place. The Tigers should be improved with the addition of Jerry Lumpe and Demeter. Cleveland should head the second division, followed by Boston, Kansas City, Los Angeles and Washington.

England's Mal Batty Sets 10-Mile Record
HURLINGHAM, England (AP)—Mel Batty, 24-year old English electrician, bettered the world record for the 10-mile run Saturday with a time of 47 minutes, 26.8 seconds. His clocking clipped 20.2 seconds off the listed world mark set by Basil Heatley, also of England, in 1961.

Twins Win on Hall's Homer

Collect Only 4 Hits Off Regan, Lary and Rakow

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Jimmie Hall smashed a two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth Saturday to give the Minnesota Twins a 4-3 baseball victory over the Detroit Tigers.

The Twins' victim was reliever Fred Gladding, who gave up a single to Bob Allison and saw his first pitch to hall sail out of the park after the Twins had collected only four hits off Phil Regan, Frank Lary and Ed Rakow.

The Tigers went ahead with a pair of starter Jim Kaat and made it 3-0 in the seventh inning on three singles off Jim Perry.

The Twins broke through in the eighth after being held to two harmless singles by Regan and Lary. Rakow let in the runs on a hit batsman, two singles and a pair of infield outs.

Pro Net Meet Slated for Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A pro tennis tournament with 12 of the world's top players competing for $10,000 in prizes will be held in Milwaukee June 24-27, it was announced Saturday.

The tournament will be sponsored by a Milwaukee brewery (Schlitz), the River Tennis Club and the Wisconsin Tennis Patrons Association.

Robert A. Uihlein Jr. said the field was being arranged with the help of promoter Jack Kramer. Uihlein said Ken Rosewall, Lew Hoad, Andres Gimeno and Rod Laver definitely will be on hand. Play will be in the Milwaukee Arena the first two days and then moved outdoors to the Milwaukee Country Club for the semifinals and the finals. The pros and leading amateurs will play exhibitions on June 28. "Tennis enthusiasts in this area seldom get a chance to see the top stars in action," Uihlein said. "This meet will present 12 of the best and also give sports fans an opportunity to witness the future of tennis in Wisconsin."

All proceeds will go to the Tennis Patrons Association to promote the sport for young players.

Courtesy Ruins Viewers' Chance To See Palmer

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — A bit of golfing courtesy ruined the chances of millions of television viewers to see Arnold Palmer finish his round at the Masters golf tournament Saturday.

Arnold was signing his score card after completing his 18 holes when the cameras were switched on.

It wasn't planned that way, but the timing went off on the fourth hole, early in the afternoon. Bob Charles, the New Zealand left hander who was playing in the twosome in front of Palmer, hit his ball into the trees over the green at that hole.

It was an unplayable lie, so Charles had to trudge all the way back to the tee. He found Palmer there, waiting.

"Why don't you play through?" Charles said.

"All right, if you don't mind," said Palmer, and he did.

As a result Palmer reached the 18th green ahead of schedule.

OHS Opens Season At Neenah April 14

Bill Gogolewski to Start For Indian Baseball Squad

OSHKOSH — Lanky Bill Gogolewski has received the starting nod from Coach Harlan Quandt for the Oshkosh Indians' opener Tuesday at Neenah. The 6-4 righthander was "very impressive" in an intrasquad game Friday, Quandt said.

The OHS mentor said he would use at least three pitchers against the Rockets and would probably go with Greg Wood behind Gogolewski, with the third hurler coming from the group of Greg Seibold, Hal Malnory, Lynn Peterson or Jeff Harwood.

A big blow to Indian hopes was the loss of hard hitting third baseman Pat Schrage through scholastic difficulties. Schrage, a junior, was one of only five lettermen returning from last season, and had been counted upon to supply much of Oshkosh's power.

In the intrasquad contest, the Chiefs beat the Indians, 14-1, mainly because of 11 Indian errors and 8 walks. Gogolewski

Major League Season Will Begin Monday, Tuesday

Dodgers, Yankees Are Favored; Special Openers Again Slated For Washington and Cincinnati

BY JACK HARK

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite the efforts of Charles O. Finley, the big league baseball season opens Monday and Tuesday with the same cities that finished last year. Once again the New York Yankees and Los Angeles Dodgers are favored to win the pennants.

Finley was blocked in his efforts to move the Kansas City A's to Louisville or Oakland but there was no general embargo on the traffic of players. A shake-up of talent by trades and the addition of a thin but talented band of rookies add zest to the long season that will run from April 13 to Oct. 4.

The Las Vegas oddsmakers and the sports writers agree that the World Series will open Oct. 7 in Dodger Stadium with Sandy Koufax and Co. opposing Lawrence Peter Berra's pinstriped Yankees. If the Yanks do it again it will be their fifth straight — and under three different managers, Casey Stengel, Ralph Houk and Yogi.

The writers predict little trouble for the Yanks but expect a battle royal in the National with Los Angeles just edging San Francisco and with St. Louis close behind. In Las Vegas, the Dodgers are 6-5 to win, the Giants 3-1 and the Cards 5-1. The Yankees are odds-on at 1-3.

But then wasn't Sonny Liston 7-1 over Cassius Clay?

Berra's debut as Yankee skipper promises to be one of the most interesting developments of the year. To a lesser degree, Hank Bauer's handling of the Baltimore Orioles where a firm hand is needed will command attention.

Berra already has proven his ability to command the respect of his former playmates during spring training. How he will work out under stress of battle conditions remains to be seen.

The only other new manager in the majors is George Strickland, a stand-in for Birdie Tebbetts with the Cleveland Indians. Strickland moves up from coach to manager for the duration of

As usual, there will be the customary special openers Monday in Washington and Cincinnati. The rest of the teams start their seasons Tuesday. The two-day, 10-game schedule is expected to draw about 330,000 if the weather is agreeable.

Among the familiar names who have changed uniforms since last season are Felipe Alou, Ed Bailey, Roger Craig, Del Crandall, Bob Shaw, Jim Bunning, Gus Triandos, Nellie Fox, George Altman, Bill Skowron, Norm Siebern, Rocky Colavito, Jim Gentile, Leon Wagner, Jerry Lumpe, Willie Kirkland, Larry Sherry, Joe Adcock, Al Smith, Don Demeter and Eddie Kasko.

The best of the new crop includes Richie Allen of the Phillies, Don Buford of the Chicago White Sox, Tony Oliva of Minnesota, Willie Horton of Detroit, Tony Conigliaro and Bill Spanwick of Boston, Jim Hart and Jay Alou of San Francisco, Chido Ruiz of Cincinnati, Jim Stewart and Billy Cowan of the Chicago Cubs and John Werhas of the Dodgers.

President Johnson is due to throw out the first ball at Washington Monday at D.C. Stadium where a crowd of 45,000 is expected to see the Senators open against the Los Angeles Angels. Claude Osteen, a talented lefty, will pitch for the home club, whose most important new asset is Skowron, the ex-Yank and Dodger, at first base. Ken McBride will pitch for the Angels.

Cincinnati will turn out some 30,000 strong for the 80th in the series of traditional home openers. Fred Hutchinson's Reds will send either Jim Maloney or Jim O'Toole against the Houston Colts' Ken Johnson.

The hospitalization of Frank Robinson for an infection of the upper left leg has the Reds anx-

Cubs Defeat Red Sox Fifth Straight Time

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—The Chicago Cubs batted around twice during a six-run first inning and a five-run fourth Saturday to defeat the Boston Red Sox a fifth straight time 12-3.

Rookie center fielder Billy Cowan drove across five. Cub runs on two hits as the Cubs won their 22nd victory in 31 varsity games. Cub third baseman Ron Santo, batting 3 - for - 3 slammed across four runs.

The Tuesday games will provide an interesting early test of the Dodgers and Cardinals, who meet opening night at Dodger Stadium. Sandy Koufax, a 4-1 performer against the Cards last year when he won 25, will go against Bob Gibson and a line-up that will not include Stan Musial for the first time in over 10 years. The Dodgers will have Werhas at third base. The San Francisco Giants open at home against Milwaukee, another prime pennant contender, with Juan Marichal, the Giants' 25-game winner, due to oppose Warren Spahn, 42-year-old winner of 350 games. The Giants will be showing rookie lefty Jim Hart at third while the Braves will have ex-Giant Felipe Alou in center.

Lefty Bob Veale gets Pittsburgh's opening assignment at Forbes Field against the Chicago Cubs' Larry Jackson. Jim Stewart appears to have taken over at second base for the late Ken Hubbs and rookie Billy Cowan is the Cubs' new center fielder.

The Yanks bow in at home against Boston with pitcher-coach Whitey Ford due to start his new career against Bill Monbouquette. The Yanks have the same cast with the possible exception of Joe Pepitone, who has been nursing an injured hand. Center fielder Conigliaro and possible second baseman Dalton Jones may crash the Red Sox line-up as rookies.

Have New Look
Dressen's new look Tigers, with Jerry Lumpe on second, Don Demeter in center and rookie Willie Horton in left, will send Phil Regan against Orlando Pena of Kansas City. The A's have added Rocky Colavito and Jim Gentile, plus rookie Dick Green at second base.

Bauer's debut as Baltimore manager will be made at Chicago, where the Orioles will send Milt Pappas against either Ray Herbert or Gary Peters of the White Sox. Norm Siebern at first base is the most important new face with the Orioles as American League rookie-of-the-year.

Floyd Patterson Plans For a Fighting Future

Former Champion Wants to Meet Liston Again

BY JIM HACKLEMAN

HIGHLAND MILLS, N. Y. (AP)—Floyd Patterson, the celebrated wunderkind of boxing just a few years ago, is approaching athletic middle age at 29, with the prestige and prospects in a once glorious career at a low ebb.

But the former world heavyweight champion is letting neither age nor past failures and frustrations dim his plans for a fighting future. He continues to prepare, hope and point—mainly for another meeting with Sonny Liston, the man who dealt him his most humiliating defeats.

"Boxing's still in my blood, I love it and I'm still willing to make the sacrifices," Patterson said the other day at his secluded, austere training camp here. "After 14 years of fighting I haven't reached the point where I feel I'm going down instead of up. When I reach that point, I'll know it, and that's when I'll quit. But it's entirely up to me."

At this stage of his roller-coaster career, Patterson has nowhere to go but up. The one-time Olympic champion became the youngest ever to win the heavyweight crown, at 21, and the first ever to regain it, with his upset triumph over Ingemar Johansson in 1960. But the two one-round knockouts by Liston, in 1962 and '63, shattered Floyd's image in the eyes of most of the public and press.

Patterson is accustomed but more than a shade embittered about this fickleness of public opinion.

"If you win you're a hero and if you lose you're nothing," he says. "And actually there's no difference as a person. But they put all that stress on winning. They have contempt for losers."

"They said I was nothing after I lost, and they said the same about Johansson. And look what they're saying about Liston. They built him up as a superman and now they say he was over-rated as a fighter and they're playing up his trouble with the police. But the man they're talking about is the same person he was before he lost."

Since his second loss to Liston, Patterson has fought once—kayaking Italy's Sante Amonti in Stockholm three months ago. Next comes Eddie Machen of Los Angeles, also in Sweden, in July. He plans another bout toward the end of the year.

These proposed bouts and the ever-present possibility of a title match against Cassius Clay are not uppermost in Patterson's mind, however.

"The biggest reason I keep going is to fight Liston again," says the proud and sensitive champ. "Not a grudge fight, or not necessarily to prove I can beat him. But I know I can do better. I don't want to be remembered for those other two."

To keep going, Patterson spends nine or 10 months a year at camp, about an hour away from his home and family, putting in the long and arduous hours of training.

"The two most important things I've found are the willingness to sacrifice and the refusal to be brainwashed," he said. "That second thing is very important, refusing to give in to outside influences and opinions."

KING PIN capers

Bowlers in the Twin Cities last week included six strikes in succession and his 634 series was the best 3-game total in the league.

The latest big count turned in was by Joan Schneider, Neenah, in the Food Queen Afternoon League Friday at Lakeroad Lanes. Joan's 607 set included a booming 244 game. Another kegger with a big count was Alice Patterson in the Trinity Couples League at Lakeroad. Her previous high series was a 512 before she came along with a 604.

Gary Zarter clubbed the first Menasha men's national honor count of the season when he posted a big 747 in the Germania League Tuesday night. He had games of 257, 243 and 247.

Twin City women have had 10 national honor sets so far and men have had eight. The odd part of it all is that there have been no repeats. Each national count belongs to individual keglers.

Carol Schumacher, who bowls in the Tuesday night Ladies League at Michiel's Bowl in Sherwood, pounded her best game ever, a 215. Her league average is 113.

Evelyn Myers has taken a 1-national honor count lead in her personal duel with Pat Lutz for bowling honors in Appleton. Evelyn smacked her fourth national set of the season in the Women's Classic League last week with a 618.

Mrs. Lutz has three over-600 marks as the pair continues to dominate city keglers.

The Van Vreede TV and Appliance outfit had us down by 28 going into the final game, but they ran into split troubles. Yours truly had a 536 so we have to wait another season for that 600.

Split cleanups reported recently included: Ruth Mendelsohn, 4-6-10; Welcome Wagon Couples League; John Koester, 3-7-8-10, Cigarette Couples League; Howard Theissen, 4-8-10, Tri-City League, 41 Bowl; and Lois Buss, 4-10, Football Couples League.

'64 Season Will Be Similar to '63, Says Frick

Commissioner Calls Player Development Next Big Problem

BY FORD FRICK
Commissioner of Baseball For The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP)—The outlook for the new baseball season is very similar to last year. It would be ridiculous for me to predict that all of the big league clubs will beat their attendance records in the coming season. I think we have reached the leveling off point. I will be pleased if we level off the same as last year. I see no great increase nor any danger of a drop in interest.

People always ask me how I feel about the threat of football to baseball. I am not anti-football. In fact, I like it. This building up of a keen rivalry between football and baseball is imaginary. There is room for both.

When it comes to a showdown, there is no comparison. Organized professional baseball out-draw all football, college and professional. The great point is that in our American plan of team sports there is a place for each.

12-Team Leagues

Eventually, I think the majors will expand to 12 teams in each league—which I think is sensible. I would say this will happen in a reasonable time. That could mean in five or six years or even sooner. When it does come, I believe we will go the 26-week schedule, instead of the 25-week schedule we now have.

The problems of baseball are age-old. We have gone far in modernizing and streamlining the game from the organizational point of view in the last 10 years. We are over the hump with a little way to go. We have handled expansion, set up roles for future expansion.

In the next four or five years our big problem will be the development of players. We have made a good start with the player development contracts in the minors, changing the draft, setting up rookie leagues and improving our relationship with the colleges.

If and when we can set up a free-agent draft I think we can help ourselves by re-establishing a proper balance between the clubs and eliminating crazy competition for talent.

We are working on a free-agent draft, somewhat similar to that of the football people. We must be very careful that we do not deny the right of a boy to bargain freely.

The minor leagues can be maintained only as a necessity to train players for the majors ment, at the Bowling Bar.

The Hairs and Marsh Berge finished in a tie for first place with 20-8 records and will roll off the tie in a 3-game match at 1 p.m. April 18. The annual league awards party will be held at the Youth Center of the high school at 3 p.m. April 25.

Other high scores were hit by Dennis Hilgenberg, 217; Don Hilgenberg, 212; Joe Pieters, 208; Tom Carter, 208; Dennis DeBruin, 195, and Al Keberlein, 195.

In the Girls' Teen League a tie developed between the Alleycats and Knickers, both with 23-13 records, and a roll off will be held at the same time as the boys. The group will also join the boys for the awards party.

Kris Fahrback hit a 192 game and Lynn Patterson rolled a 2-game set of 318 to lead the final afternoon of action.

unless there is a decided change. When the majors expand to 12 clubs we will need more minor league clubs than we have now.

9 Major League Pilots Feel They Have Good Chance for Pennants

Dressen Says Tigers Are Most Improved Team in the AL

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
It must be the air in Florida and Arizona. Or maybe it's the water. Whatever it is, it sure acts as a tonic to major league managers.

While it was hardly expected that any of the 20 big league managers would paint a dim picture for his club at this time of the year, there is such a thing as carrying optimism too far. After all, nine clubs cannot compete in the World Series. And never yet has a pennant race ended with all clubs in the first division.

An Associated Press poll of the managers showed this Saturday that nine thought they had a good chance to win the pennant. Eight more believed they would finish in the first division. The remaining three were convinced their clubs were improved over last year.

Positive Opinion
Yogi Berra said unequivocally that his New York Yankees would repeat as American League champs. Gil Hodges was just as positive his Washington Senators wouldn't remain in the league basement.

Five National League managers, San Francisco's Al Diers, Cincinnati's Fred Hutchinson, Philadelphia's Gene Mauch, St. Louis' Johnny Keane and Milwaukee's Bobby Bragan, refused to yield an inch to the defending champion Los Angeles Dodgers. And Walt Alton of the Dodgers insisted his team was stronger.

Here are the capsule comments:
Berra, Yankees: "We'll win it even if Mickey Mantle doesn't play 100 games. There are no ifs. We've got the best eight starting players and our pitching is the best in the league."

Sam Mele, Twins: "We have a real good chance to win if pitchers Jerry Arigo, Jim Roland and Jim Kaat come through. We are decidedly better than last year."

Charlie Dressen, Tigers: "The Tigers are the most improved club in the league. Our pitching is going to be better. Frank Lara has looked sharp in Florida."

Al Lopez, White Sox: "I think we can win it. Our pitching and defense is outstanding. Our offense is better than people think."

Hank Bauer, Orioles: "Two weeks ago I picked the Yankees to win and the Orioles to finish third. That's because they have fewer ifs than we do. But if everybody plays up to his capability, we have a good chance to win."

George Strickland, Cleveland Indians: "We're greatly improved and definitely a first division team. Our pitching should be better. Leon Wagner gives us more power. Our defense should be at least adequate."

John Pesky, Boston Red Sox: "I am hoping our improved pitching could move us into the first division. We lack speed but have good power."

Ed Lopat, Kansas City A's: "If our big men, Rocky Colavito and Jim Gentile, have the kind of season they are capable of having, we could finish as high as fifth. If they don't, we're in trouble."

Bill Rigney, Los Angeles Angels: "We're shooting for the first division and I think we can probably do it. Our strong pitching should help. We are also counting on our extra speed and an improved defense."

Hodges, Senators: "We'll be better. We won't finish last. Our outfield is better than that of a lot of clubs, we're better organized and have a better mental attitude."

Alton, Dodgers: "I think our chances to repeat are good. Just about every club in the league has strengthened and that includes us. We have every reason to believe four or five of our players should have better seasons."

Dark, Giants: "We have a definite shot at the pennant. I've never seen better morale on the team. The least improved of the six leading contenders are the Dodgers."

Hutchinson, Reds: "I think our club is as good as anybody. We have a better mental approach this spring. We had it in 1961 and 1962 but lost it last year."

Mauch, Phillies: "We can win as many games as anybody if we play up to the hilt. The addition of Jim Bunning has improved our pitching and there is every indication we have found something special in our new third baseman, Richie Allen."

Keane, Cardinals: "We have an excellent chance. The race shapes up as so close an injury or two could be the deciding factor."

Bragan, Braves: "I think we're stronger than in the club's pennant winning years of 1957-58 — with one big exception — pitching. We have better power, a better defense and more speed."

Danny Murtaugh, Pittsburgh Pirates: "We're going to be a much better club. The improvement should come from our second year regulars, Bob Bailey, Donn Clendenon, Will Stargell and Dick Schofield."

Bob Kennedy, Chicago Cubs: "I am impressed by the comeback of Ernie Banks and the showing of rookies Jimmy Stewart and Billy Cowan. We must bear down all the way to improve on last year's 82-80 record."

Harry Craft, Colts: "I feel we have improved if our pitching holds up as well as it has in the first two years. Our infield is greatly improved with the addition of Nellie Fox and Eddie Kasko. Our outfield remains the big question mark."

Casey Stengel, New York Mets: "We and the Colts are going to fight it out for the bottom. We ought to do better against that club. They've been lucky against us in the past. We're going to make more runs."

Finley Says He Won't Remove New Fence

A's Owner Will Appeal to Baseball Rules Committee

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Charles O. Finley, owner of the Kansas City Athletics, defied baseball's top officials Saturday after they ordered him to remove the fence he had erected in Municipal Stadium to make right field the same depth as that in Yankee Stadium.

Finley, here for an exhibition game, confirmed he had received telegrams from Joe Cronin, president of the American League, and Ford Frick, baseball commissioner, directing him to take down the fence.

Finley said he had been warned that unless he complied any games played here would be forfeited to the visiting team. The season opens here with Cleveland, April 21.

"You can say for me," Finley said, "that the fence will be up when the season opens."

He added he would appeal to the baseball rules committee. "The rule book permits me to do what I am doing," he said earlier in Chicago. "I have read it thoroughly and I know what I am saying."

The A's owner ordered the fence built last week to conform to the right field barrier in Yankee Stadium after his demands on Cronin and the Yanks for a screen to stop easy home runs at New York.

The distance from home plate to the foul pole in New York is 26 feet. The fence at the stadium here starts at the 325-foot mark, which conforms with the rules, but the 26-foot mark, the point of the VN is only two feet in fair territory.

It was in the bleachers near that point that Finley took his seat today as the A's faced the Cardinals.

Finley termed his fence the "K.C. Pennant Porch."

"Kansas City ceased to be a farm club of the Yankees when I purchased the club in 1961," Finley said. "Now, if we can eliminate the 'pennant porch' in Yankee Stadium the other clubs in the league for the first time in 40 years will have an equal chance to win the pennant."

He said the 40 years goes back to the time the stadium was built. "Playing the Yanks in Yankee Stadium is like shooting craps with loaded dice," he continued. "You don't have a chance of winning."

"If the American League will permit me to keep this fence we can compete on equal terms with the Yankees and, I believe, battle them for the pennant this year. So can the Detroit Tigers, White Sox, Minnesota Twins and others."

He added that with his own "pennant porch," he thought Jim Gentile, his newly acquired hitter "could very well break Babe Ruth's home run record this year."

Then the talkative owner continued: "I defy anyone in baseball to prove to me I am operating illegally and not according to the rules. If the Yankees can have a 'pennant porch' then I want one, too, and I feel entitled to it. And now I have the one here completed and we have painted on the name: 'K.C. Pennant Porch.'"

"Yankee domination has been going on ever since I was a boy. It's got to stop."

Halas, Joannes Will be Honored At Green Bay Elks Fete Monday

Post-Crescent News Service

GREEN BAY—Monday night Chicago Bear owner-coach George Halas will be honored along with Packers veteran executive Lee Joannes at the third annual Elks Club sports banquet at the Elks clubhouse. George has been a faithful friend of the Packers despite his fierce efforts to beat them on the field.

The two teams have engaged in 89 league games and one Western Division playoff and Halas came out ahead in 52 of them. Six ended in ties.

Halas has dedicated himself to winning — and over the Packers, in particular. This hit home — right in Green Bay, during the past season when the Bears handed the Packers their only two losses and then made off with the Western Division championship and the world championship.

Vince Lombardi, the Packers' head coach and general manager, sounded the keynote for the Halas salute only moments after losing to the Bears in Wrigley Field last fall when he said: "I'm happy for Papa George. He's a fine fella."

Halas, now pushing 69, is approaching his 45th season of professional football and his 36th as head coach of the Bears, the team he founded at Decatur, Ill., in 1920. They were known as the Staleys but became the Bears after the move to Chicago in 1921.

Halas' personal coaching record shows 295 victories, including the first six games of 1942; 120 defeats, and 23 ties. He has been head coach four different times, 1920-29; 1933-November, 1942; when he entered the Navy in World War II; 1946-55; and 1958 to the present. George is a native Chicagoan who graduated from Crane Tech high and the University of Illinois where he was a 3-sport letterman, including football under Bob Zupke.

St. Louis Edges Kansas City, 9-7, In 10 Innings

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Julian Javier's 10th inning home run, one of four roundtrippers by the St. Louis Cardinals, lifted the Redbirds past Kansas City 9-7 in an exhibition game in Municipal Stadium Saturday.

None of the six homers hit by the two clubs landed in owner Charles O. Finley's new-fangled pennant porch in right field.

A high wind helped boost five homers over the left field barrier at least 353 feet distant.

Rookie Geoff Long, Cardinal outfielder, hammered a two-run homer over the center field fence that has been shortened of the stadium to try to approximate what he calls the New York Yankees' pennant-produce-ing stadium with its 296-foot right field foul line.

Waupaca '9' Nips Menasha, 4 to 3

Jays' Last-Inning Rally Falls Short; Kolb Gets Victory

BY GEORGE MANCOSKY

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

MENASHA — Menasha's 3-run last-of-the-seventh rally fell one short of tying and the Blue-jays dropped a 4-3 decision to Waupaca in the baseball opener for both clubs here Saturday afternoon. The Menashans had the tying and lead runs on base when the final out was made.

Junior righthander Doug Kolb set the Jays down with one hit in the first five innings, striking out nine, including the last five hitters to face him. Meanwhile, the Comets had built up a 3-0 lead.

Reliever Rick Riddle put two Jays on base in the last of the sixth but got out of trouble. Waupaca then added what turned out to be the decisive run in the top of the seventh an in-field hit by Jim Strebe, two errors and Dave Peterson's run scoring single.

Bases Loaded
With one out in the last of the seventh, Mike Vindhurst, who had the Jays' lone hit up to that time, came up with a single. Tim Leopold and Rick Zimmerman walked, loading the bases. Shortstop Raul Reyes went into short center field to grab Bob Wendt's flyball, Vindhurst scoring Menasha's first run and the other runners moving up a base.

Don Steffin delivered a single, bringing home Leopold and Zimmerman. Mike LeRoy's hit put the tying run on second and the lead tally on first, but Riddle forced Terry Haack to ground to him, ending the game.

Scored Run
Waupaca had scored a run in the first on Strebe's triple and a single by Gary Johanknecht; one in the second on two errors, a stolen base and Johanknecht's second hit; and another in the fifth on a two base error and a single by Warren Mather.

Menasha starter Stan Ostrowski worked four innings and was the loser. He gave up three runs, five hits, walked two and struck out four. Vindhurst tossed the last three frames, permitted one run, three hits, struck out five and didn't walk anyone. Menasha fielders committed four errors, while Waupaca had two.

Vindhurst's second-inning double provided the only base runner off Kolb in his five innings. No other balls were hit out of the infield. He also stroked two doubles. Riddle gave up three hits, three runs struck out one, and walked two in his two innings.

Tommy Brown Sent to Nats' Farm Team

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP)—The Washington Senators reached the 28-player limit Saturday by optioning pitcher Don Rudolph to Toronto of the International League and sending infielder Tommy Brown to their York farm club of the Eastern League.

The irony of Rudolph's release, on a 24-hour recall basis, is that he was the Senators' opening-day pitcher last year against the Baltimore Orioles. He had a 7-19 mark in 1963 and gave up 27 home runs.

Brown, who delayed in signing his second baseball contract because of an attractive offer from the Green Bay Packers, still may switch from baseball to pro football in mid-summer if he does not think he is making satisfactory progress. Brown was a baseball and football star at Maryland.

Duffers Take Heart — Even Jack Nicklaus Shanks Drive

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—All you duffers, take heart. Next time you shank a drive, remember it once happened to Jack Nicklaus.

The defending Masters golf tournament champion all but put himself out of contention with his bad drive on the 155-yard 12th hole Saturday. A good recovery saved a bogey.

"It couldn't have come at a worse time," said the chubby Columbus, Ohio, strongboy. "I had birdied eight and 11 after two bogeys. I figured I could birdie this one, then 13 and 15 and maybe one of the finishing holes."

"That would put me four under and at that time Arnold Palmer was within reach," he continued. "I'd never seen the pin in a better position on that hole. Nicklaus shanked his eight iron far to the right, bringing an astonished gasp from the gallery around the 12th tee who couldn't imagine Jack Nicklaus flubbing a shot.

"I nearly hit the boys coming up on the 13th tee," Nicklaus said with a rueful grin. "At least I played it short of the water. But it doesn't put you in a good frame of mind, to say the least."

Nicklaus went on to birdie 12 and 15, but his bad shot at 13 left him with a 71 for the day. He wound up at 215, one under par but nine strokes behind Palmer.

Trappers Find Good Luck in Area Waters

9 Points for Discussion At Hearing

Conservation Congress Parley Set April 20

The game questionnaire up for discussion at the County Conservation Congress hearing, Monday, April 20, at Outagamie County Court House Annex will include more questions than the past few years.

Following is a brief resume of matters that will be on the questionnaire:

1. Allow year-round hunting of raccoon in the north.
 2. A split duck season.
 3. Allow two trips to the Managed Goose Hunt at Horicon.
 4. Increase the blind fee at Horicon to $4.00 per day.
 5. A nine day buck deer season with a considerable expansion of quota zones.
 6. A special bear season September 5-20.
 7. Allow carrying of strung bows in cars.
 8. Liberalized trapping hours, and Saturday opening of trapping season.
 9. Zone the state for trapping seasons on muskrat and mink.
- In addition to these items, persons may present and discuss any items they wish that affect the state as a whole, or just your area.

11 Players Named To AAU Squad for Russia Cage Tour

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Dose, Stanford's basketball star, didn't make the recent Olympic trials but he will get a trip abroad, anyway.

Dose was one of 11 players named by the Amateur Athletic Union Thursday to play two games in Poland and eight in Russia. The tour opens in Warsaw next Friday and ends in Tbilisi, Russia, May 3-4. In between games will be played at Lodz, Poland; Moscow; Leningrad, and Kiev.

The other 10 players named by Donald F. Hull, executive director of the AAU, were Jim (Bad News) Barnes of Texas Western, Bobby Edmonds of Tennessee State, Ray Bob Carey of Missouri, Jerry Shipp and Charlie Bowerman of the Phillip Oilers, Pete McCaffrey, Larry Brown, Dick Davies and Lloyd Sharrar of the Akron, Ohio, Goodyears, AAU champions, and Tom Bowman of the Brownstown, Ind., Marion Kay club.

28 Lakes, Streams In State Treated

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — The conversion of unproductive lakes to productive fish species through chemical control has become a more important phase of the fish management program of the state conservation department.

Thus far 28 lakes and two streams have been rehabilitated through the complete removal of all fish life and restocking with desirable species. Many additional lakes and streams need such treatment, the fisheries division says.

Beavers Not Plentiful, but Provide Interest, Excitement For 4 Clintonville Area Men

BY DAVE DUFFEY
Post-Crescent News Service

CLINTONVILLE — Deer hunting "right around" home has become a popular and profitable venture for sportsmen in the central Wisconsin counties in the past 20 years. But beaver trapping? Around here? Could be.

At least four Clintonville area outdoorsmen had a go at beaver trapping which closed March 31 in this part of the state. The take wasn't tremendous, but there was no lack of interest and enjoyment.

Willard Sasse and Larry Nass made up one trapping team and came in with eight beaver and two otter. Their prize was one huge "blanket-beaver" stretching 78 inches, which weighed 63 pounds.

Got One Otter

Dennis Steinke and John Westfahl made up the other team and trapped five beaver and one otter. Their biggest thrill came on the last weekend of the season when they had a pair of young beaver in separate traps in the same setting.

The four men have their traps in many of the same streams since the areas the beaver frequent are limited. They often check each other's traps and advise the other trappers if their sets have connected. This is what happened when Steinke and Westfahl got their pair in one setting. Nass, checking his traps in the morning, had seen blood on the ice, and informed the other two trappers when he got back to town. When they finished work at noon they went out and picked up a pair.

But while beaver trapping is nothing new in Wisconsin, most of it is done in the far north or in the western river counties. But the Clintonville trappers haven't wandered far from home at all. They've been picking up their pelts in Waupaca and Shawano counties.

Trout Streams

That there should be beaver, is no surprise. There are good trout streams in the area and quite a bit of popple and birch beaver don't chisel down just for the fun of it, but gnaw for nourishment, making feed beds of tree branches and limbs out in the stream. This fresh running water and food makes a good combination.

Why beaver are rare here, about a few decades ago is hard to say. Perhaps more land clearing, more small farms and consequent activity in areas that have now reverted to second growth pulp and timber stands providing food have something to do with it. But beaver have increased in the last five years.

Two kinds of beaver are generally recognized by trappers, "bank beaver" and "house beaver." Bank beaver are generally found on larger streams, live in holes in the stream bank and are no real problem. But the house beaver are the construction crews and they become a problem in agricultural and timber lands. For their marvelously engineered dams do hold water and the ponds flood over crop and pasture land or kill timber stands.

Effect on Trout

Some trout fishermen can be found who will argue pros and cons of the detrimental effect beaver have on trout fishing, but the consensus is that the ponds warm streams and the warmed and sluggish water hurts trout fishing in the long run.

Be that as it may, in their early years, beaver ponds provide the chunkiest, most colorful brook trout of any place on the stream. These small flowages also provide resting places for waterfowl and it has always seemed a crime that conservation authorities couldn't harness the energy and ability of these animal engineers to construct waterfowl impoundments where they were desired.

The conservation department spends considerable time and money having its game managers and wardens live trap beaver in areas where they get complaints from farmers and lumber growers and dynamiting dams. But the wily animals are not easy to live trap and the most effective and cheapest method is to turn a good beaver trapper into the area with steel traps.

Few Big Ones

Steinke grins when he says, "You know, there's still a few big ones left that have been fooling all of us. But we're still learning. We only had about 25 traps out and got out only on weekends." Westfahl added, "These aren't like rats and mink. You have to learn a lot all over again."

Nass, who has beaver trapped for a number of years, and Sasse, had about 50 traps out. "On that one creek in Shawano County, where they had the complaint about flooding timber, I must have got them all out of there," Nass said. "I heard the state men came back with live traps and agreed they were cleaned out."

Nobody expects that the residents of Shawano and Waupaca counties are ever going to be up to their ears in beaver, but with the increase in numbers it's a good thing there are residents who enjoy the sport of trapping, since nothing else in the area preys on beaver to any extent.

Bow Hunters Took 2,194 Deer Last Year

MADISON — Bow and arrow deer hunters last fall bagged a respectable total of 2,194 animals, according to final registration figures reported by the state conservation department.

But the bow hunter has a negligible effect on the game population, as shown by such incidental kills as those attributable to traffic accidents.

Last year department field men found 5,995 deer kills resulting from automobile collisions.

Fish Stocking Expansion Seen

MADISON — The increase in public recreational demands in the next two decades will require a huge expansion of the artificial fish propagation and stocking program of the state, according to a long-range planning report.

Among the projections: a 300 per cent increase in the present production of state muskellunge hatcheries and rearing ponds, and only slightly smaller expansion of production of other principal game species. Trout propagation facilities probably won't require a corresponding increase because of improving techniques of rearing and distribution, it was said.

SINGLE SHOT

If that little motor inside of you races a bit at the sight of big flocks of geese drifting across fields at tree level height, take a drive to the area around Horicon Marsh some Sunday afternoon when you don't know what else to do.

Was passed through that area last Sunday on a trip to the southern part of the state and it was hard to keep the driving eyes on the road.

Huge flocks of honkers were moving about from one field to another and at times it seemed that they must have been just above the car.

In addition to the geese, a good many mallards were seen in a couple of potholes along the roadway.

The dryness of the spring weather also was evident in that part of the state. Marshy spots which normally would be filled with water were all but dust bowls.

Last Sunday's heavy rain helped somewhat. On the trip back home some of the ditches alongside the road were beginning to collect standing water by evening.

Reports from the Wolf River say that the water level has increased somewhat, but still more rain could be used to fill spawning beds in the marshes.

Officials from the conservation headquarters at Oshkosh have advised that the best walleye fishing this weekend and possible for the next week or so should come in the Fox River in the Omro and Eureka area.

Boon shocking has shown that a good many pike have moved up to the dam at Eureka and warmer weather should make them cooperate with the fishermen.

We had a short telephone visit with good friend Jay Reed, former Post-Crescent outdoor editor, the other day. He was just back from a try for trout in the early season on the Brule and other northern rivers.

Jay said the ratio in the north has been better than some years, but still not spectacular. "It's mighty hard fishing and sometimes it gets plenty miserable as far as the weather goes," Jay related.

Several reports of excellent panfish angling in northern lakes have been received in the last week.

Pickrel Lake, which has been a hotspot through the winter, still is producing some fine catches of good-sized perch. Ice still covers practically all of the northern lakes, but fishermen are advised to use extra care when going out.

Group wishing to obtain a couple of color films free for use at meetings can get the latest from the Klekhaefer Corporation at Fond du Lac.

The films are "Florida Fishcapade" and "Ski-Ways to Safety." Both are 16mm and run near the 15-minute mark. The company also has a library of other outdoor films that are available on request.

Big Increase in Rural Land Value

MADISON — Inflation of rural land values is worrying the administrators of the state conservation department, as they direct the broadened program for the acquisition of recreational tracts for public use.

A current study shows that during a 12-year period ending with the 1960 fiscal year the average cost of lands bought by the state for outdoors recreation rose from just under $16 an acre to more than $36, for an average of $26.57.

Game 'Watching' Becoming Popular Sport Around State

MADISON — Game watching, as distinguished from game hunting, is a rapidly growing form of public recreation in Wisconsin.

If the trend continues, according to some state conservation department observers, it could conceivably become a recreation for greater numbers of persons than hunting itself. The department cites the enormous growth in the number of persons who in recent years have driven to the Horicon marsh area to watch geese, and says it is a growing trend on all wildlife lands near population centers.

Brook Trout Prefer 55-65 Temperature

MADISON — There are preferred temperatures for brook trout, as every seasoned angler knows. State experimental studies have shown that the preferred range is between 55 and 65 degrees.

A fisherman can measure the prospects of a particular stream, accordingly. Thus Lawrence Creek, one of the most favored and best known streams in central Wisconsin, has been shown to measure up well. Records there over a period of a year showed that on 42 per cent of all days the maximum temperature was within the preferred range.

Restrict Setting of Gill Nets Along River

Fishermen Win Round in Dispute Along Mississippi

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Sportsmen have won a round in their dispute with commercial fishermen about management of the fishery resource of the Mississippi River.

The state conservation commission has approved an order restricting the operations of the fishermen by prohibiting the setting of gill nets for the taking of carp and other commercial species within 300 feet of any stream tributary to the Wisconsin-Minnesota boundary waters of the Mississippi river and Lake Pepin.

The decision followed a recommendation of the state fisheries division, which in turn acted on the basis of testimony at a recent hearing in Pepin where sports fishing spokesmen said the sports fishing in the river and tributaries has deteriorated and blamed the competition of the commercial operators for the decline.

Destroy Fish

The claim was made that the gill nets destroy game fish and interfere with spawning of the prized species such as walleyes and bass.

Pay-as-You-Camp System Scheduled

National Forests Program Set For June 15 to September 12

MILWAUKEE — Pay-as-you-camp systems are scheduled for operation from June 15 through September 12 this year on 12 National Forest campgrounds in Michigan, Minnesota, and Wisconsin.

Attendants or vending machines will accept the $1 service fee and issue permits, according to Regional Forester George S. James of the Forest Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture in Milwaukee.

The daily fee will be $1 for camping parties using the designated campsites. He stressed that the fee applies to camping only.

In Michigan's upper peninsula, attendants will issue permits at Monocle Lake campground in the Hiawatha National Forest. The same service will be offered in Wisconsin, at Anvil Lake and Boot Lake campgrounds in the Nicolet National Forest, and at Nemekegon Lake campground in the Chequamegon National Forest.

A self-service system will be operating in upper and lower Michigan, Minnesota, and Wisconsin. Campers, when they have selected and occupied a campsite, can buy permits at a machine centrally located in the campgrounds.

This service will be offered in Michigan's upper peninsula at Brevoort Lake campground.

Bear Becoming Important Target

MADISON — The bear is becoming a more important target for Wisconsin sportsmen, the conservation department's game kill figures show. The 1963 registered total of bears taken by hunters was 559, including 121 taken by bow and arrow hunters. The figure is one of the highest in recent years.

The conservation commission, following experimental programs last fall, is considering a liberalization of the hunting rules to allow pursuit of the bear with hunting dogs in limited zones next fall.

Mathiak says his own demonstrations on behalf of the game division convince him that the new technique provides a fruitful method for economical conversion of marginal aquatic areas into game producing and holding lands.

With the restoration of vegetation around the potholes, they attract breeding ducks. The potholes also improve opportunities for jump shooting and their extensive use will have the result of helping to distribute hunters who now concentrate on and near large bodies of open water, he suggested.

"There is an opportunity for private owners to make their wetlands more useful at low cost, without going in for risky drainage ventures," reported the game man who like others of his profession is concerned about the erosion of wetland resources through agricultural drainage developments.

"Pothole studded wetland will provide satisfaction on various counts, whether the object is to hunt, trap, photograph, observe birds, or perhaps collect hellgrammites for a fishing trip," he promised.

Chances Are Slim

A young cottontail rabbit in Wisconsin has only about one chance in 20 of reaching its first birthday, according to the Conservation Department.

Two Clintonville Fishermen proudly display their limits of walleyes caught on the Wolf River out of New London. Two of the pike weighed five pounds each and were 21 inches long. The fishermen are Larry Yunker, left, and Fritz Fandrey. (Laib Photo)

Movement to Revive Annual Osbervance of Arbor Day

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — A movement to revive the observance of Arbor Day in the schools as a means for encouraging the planting of trees and the study of nature has been given the enthusiastic endorsement of the state department of public instruction.

Cooperating schools will observe Arbor Day this year on April 24, reminded State Supt. Angus Rothwell in a bulletin urging the "setting aside of a day for planting trees and developing a love for and appreciation of birds and trees."

The idea of Arbor Day dates from the late 19th century, but there was a lag in the observances starting about 20 years ago, Rothwell recalled.

Last year a revival movement began, and this year schoolmen and civic organizations are working together to make the observance general.

While the observances traditionally have centered around the actual planting of a tree by school children, the school superintendent said such a project should culminate formal study emphasizing the appreciation of nature.

both elementary and high schools and the state department suggested somewhat more elaborate works for high school students.

High schools could profitably work out plans for school land use, such as the creation of an arboretum near the school for the study of biology, conservation and agriculture, the state agency said.

Rothwell said schools should feel free to alter the date for the observance, according to their own needs, but that they must remember that "Arbor Day is more than planting a tree."

Johnson Signs Wheat Crop Control Bill

49.5 Million Acre Allotment Kept in National Program

WASHINGTON (AP)—A new wheat stabilization program, established under the farm law signed Saturday by President Johnson, will retain the 49.5 million acre national planting allotment which had been set earlier for this year's crop.

Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman acting soon after Johnson signed the bill, announced provisions of the new program as they affect growers, millers and exporters.

Growers will be divided into two categories — those who plant and harvest within their acreage allotments, and those who overplant and overharvest allotments.

Cooperating farmers will be eligible for price supports at a national average of $1.30 a bushel, but noncooperators will not.

Cooperating farmers will be required to devote wheat land diverted from the grain under their allotments to a conserving use — that is, not another cash crop — as well as to maintain their normal acreage in conserving uses.

Cooperating farmers will not be allowed to exceed acreage allotments assigned them on other crops grown on their farms. Nor will they be permitted to exceed the wheat allotment on any other farm in which they have an interest.

Cooperating growers will earn government-issued marketing certificates on 90 per cent of the normal yield of wheat on their allotments. Half of these certificates will have a value of 70 cents a bushel and the other half 25 cents.

Millers and other wheat food processors will be required to buy equivalent 70-cent-a-bushel certificates to cover all wheat they use for food products, including flour for export, beginning July 1. They will be able to buy these certificates from the government or from farmers or from elevators which might buy them from growers. But the department expects most farmers to cash their cer-

Governor's Plans Would Delay Lawmakers' Return for Month; State Tax Reduction on Agenda

BY JOHN WYNGAARD
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

MADISON — Gov. Reynolds is preparing recommendations to the State Legislature for delivery next week that will require lawmakers to stay in Madison at least a month if the two houses under Republican control give them serious consideration.

The Democratic governor disclosed at a news conference last night that this program will be keynoted upon a proposal for state tax reduction reflecting unexpected improvement in state revenue receipts and a "get tough" program of highway accident prevention.

"There is a lot of work and the legislature probably will stay longer than I previously thought," Reynolds remarked. He spoke with the knowledge that the Republican legislative commanders have said they want to confine the recessed session to only two or three weeks, with most of the time devoted to working out a reapportionment act.

Reynolds said his minimum tax cut proposal will be the elimination of the 3 per cent sales tax on household electricity bills, which will probably be appealing to the election year legislative campaigners even without the governor's intervention. The governor said, however, that he does not yet have a firm figure on the size of the anticipated state revenue surplus.

The governor said he will ask the legislature to enact a law for compulsory motor vehicle inspection and for the voluntary transfer of county highway policemen into the state traffic patrol to provide better coordination of highway accident prevention.

Both proposal have had frosty receptions in the legislature in the past.

He said he will insist upon settling the quarrel about the management of the outdoors recreation land acquisition program on his own terms, without the legislative representation on the administrative board that legislators have sought, and will again urge favorable action on a bill to up-grade county mental hospital programs through a revision and increase in state aids.

He indicated that he will attempt to salvage his accelerated highway construction program in spite of the heavy vote against it in the referendum last week, with a plan for borrowing against anticipated future federal aids for the immediate completion of interstate highway construction in Wisconsin.

The governor said the state highway accident problem has worsened so rapidly that a dramatic new approach to highway safety is required.

"I don't care who gets the credit for it," he said, saying that he would back the Wisconsin Chamber of Commerce if it chose to take the initiative in a new effort to communicate the gravity of the problem.

Reynolds anticipated the objections of some critics who have held that if the state has a surplus, it should be put aside against the inevitable budget balancing problem next year.

"It is not the function of the state to save money for the people," he said.

Reynolds said he believes the state should require periodic re-examination of motor vehicle operators, although he did not say he would bring in a bill on the subject.

"I was licensed when I was 14 years old, and without an examination. I have never been called up for an examination since," he commented.

Major Provisions Of Civil Rights Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are the major provisions of the civil rights bill which is currently being debated in the Senate:

Voting rights — State and local officials, in registering voters for federal elections, must apply uniform standards for all applicants, and cannot deny registration for immaterial errors, and must use written literacy tests unless the applicant requests otherwise.

In voter discrimination suits brought by the attorney general, a presumption is created that an individual who has completed the 6th grade possesses sufficient literacy to vote.

Either the attorney general or the defendant could request a three-judge federal court to hear the case.

Public accommodations — Lodging places except those with five rooms or less, restaurants, places of amusement and gasoline stations are required not to discriminate because of race, color, religion or national origin. Also covered are establishments connected with one of these four categories.

Any establishment required to segregate or discriminate by state or local law shall be open to all comers.

The attorney general may seek injunctions to enforce this title but first must try to get state or local agencies to take corrective action. He also may use any available agency to try to win voluntary compliance.

Public facilities — The attorney general is authorized to file suits to ban discrimination or segregation in public facilities such as parks, playgrounds and libraries.

School desegregation — The commissioner of education is authorized to conduct surveys on any lack of equal educational opportunities because of race, to give technical assistance to school boards which are desegregating their schools, to make grants to school boards for the training and hiring of personnel to deal with desegregation problems, and to help universities set up special institutes to train school personnel to deal with desegregation problems.

The attorney general is authorized to file public school desegregation suits.

Civil Rights Commission — The commission's life is extended four years to Jan. 31, 1968. The agency is authorized to serve as a national clearing house for information on equal protection of the laws.

Federal Grants — U. S. Agencies must refuse to make grants or terminate present assistance to recipients who discriminate in administering

Week of Mourning Ended as MacArthur Is Laid in Crypt

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Taps sounded in Norfolk Saturday for General of the Army Douglas MacArthur, and his widow wept when the plaintive notes of the bugle signaled farewell.

MacArthur's body will rest in a sunken marble crypt beneath the battle flags he followed in three major wars of this country.

The last rites fell on the 13th anniversary of a supremely bitter moment for MacArthur.

On Apr. 11, 1951, President Harry S. Truman removed MacArthur from all his commands in the Far East. Truman dismissed him because of a dispute growing out of his strategy for fighting the Korean War after the Chinese Reds entered the conflict.

Ceremonies Saturday ended nearly a full week of extraordinary tributes to MacArthur in New York, Washington, and Norfolk.

Well over 100,000 persons filed past his open coffin. In Norfolk alone, 61,781 viewed his body. The figure came from mechanical counters used by the Army.

Other thousands stood outside the MacArthur Memorial Museum and St. Paul's Episcopal church Saturday to see the last rites.

At the funeral, 10 foreign governments were represented. They were Australia, Belgium, Canada, Nationalist China, France, Japan, South Korea, Monaco, the Philippines and Nicaragua. Japan and South Korea, the two countries where MacArthur met triumph and disaster, sent the largest delegations. Former Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida, who held office during the American military occupation of Japan, led the Japanese delegation.

Rites in 3 Parts

Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy represented President Johnson. More than 400 civilian and military dignitaries, old comrades in arms and relatives of MacArthur sat in the 224-year old church.

The ceremonies were in three parts, two in the rotunda and the other at St. Paul's.

At 9:25 a.m. clergymen, pallbearers, the escort commander and special honor guard assembled at the rotunda. They escorted Mrs. MacArthur to the church, two blocks away.

Hens Live in Luxury, Pay For It With Perfect Eggs

MUZZANO, Italy (AP)—There is a chicken welfare state up here where the hens are real eggheads. They wear glasses and prefer Beethoven to the Beatles.

The hens are easily bored, sensitive and quarrelsome. But the eggs they lay are beautiful, uniformly large and with more yolk than white.

They're just the kind of eggs pastry firms in Milan, north of Muzzano, want for their mass production. Chicken experts say they found out the only way to get such eggs on a regular schedule was to give hens the best of everything.

The result is the Aurora Poultry Farm, a Utopia where no hen has to scratch for a living. At Aurora specially prepared mash is delivered every day at the same time on an electronically controlled belt.

The hen house never gets hot or stuffy. It's air conditioned.

Least any hens become disturbed by changes in the weather, a lighting system creates the illusion of an endless summer day.

The experts also learned that nothing helps egg production so much as music. They found out that catchy rhythms like rock 'n' roll tend to disturb the chickens but the hens take to the classics like ducks to water. As a result the chickens get a daily diet of Beethoven, Bach and Chopin piped over hen house loudspeakers.

For some reason, however, this life of luxury has made the hens so irritable they can't stand the sight of each other. To avoid pointless bickering the chickens are fitted with special rubber blinders that look like eyeglasses.

I was at a loss. There were so many problems I never expected, financial matters I had no experience with. If it hadn't been for the understanding helpfulness of our AAL man, I don't know what the children and I would have done. His prompt settling of claims gave us assurance, and courage. As a fellow Lutheran and friend, he handled many small matters and counseled me about the larger problems. Believe me, his service was so extra special I'll never forget how he and AAL remembered us as members.

Parking Rules Waived for Some Village People

KIMBERLY — With street construction underway, residents of Third and Joseph Streets, affected by the work, will be permitted to park cars on streets adjoining the area without penalty, provided the cars are legally parked, according to Quentin Williams, chief of police.

Permission to park on streets away from construction is granted solely to persons affected by the construction and police will continue to ticket persons violating the off-street parking ordinance.

Williams requested cooperation of parents in the construction area in keeping children from playing near the heavy equipment both during the day when crews are working as well as evenings and weekends when no one is around.

He indicated a serious injury and perhaps a tragedy could result as workmen are attempting to keep on schedule and have no time to be constantly on the lookout for children who may be trying to get a better look at the heavy machinery.

Candidates Reminded To Submit Expense Accounts to Clerk

KAUKAUNA—City Clerk Karl Marzahl issued a reminder to all candidates who ran in Tuesday's election that state law requires filing of post-election expense accounts.

Both winning and losing candidates are required to list expenses, noted the clerk. Deadline for filing at the clerk's office is 5 p.m. Tuesday.

Marzahl also issued a reminder that 1964 tavern license applications are due by 5 p.m. Wednesday.

Says Filipinos Back U. S. in Freedom Fight

MANILA (AP) — President Diosdado Macapagal of the Philippines says that if there is another war for freedom, Americans will find Filipinos fighting alongside them.

Addressing a program marking the 22nd anniversary of the fall of Bataan to the Japanese, Macapagal said Americans, who once ruled the Philippines, had engraved in the hearts of Filipinos an intense desire for education and a love of independence.

Communities in State Urged to Build Airports

MADISON (AP) — Wisconsin communities are urged to build airports to attract new industry.

The theme was struck at the opening of a two-day state aeronautics conference by Col. A.B. McMullen, executive director of the National Association of State Aviation Officials, and Joseph T. Geuting Jr., manager of the Utility Airplane Council of the Aerospace Industries Association of America. Both are from Washington.

About 150 persons attended opening sessions of the conference, sponsored by the State Aeronautics Commission, the County Boards Association, the State Chamber of Commerce and the League of Wisconsin Municipalities.

McMullen said that communities should look on airports as an investment. He cited one town with a population of 6,000 that added 600 jobs when it met the demands of a new industry—an airport with a 3,000 foot runway.

Geuting said that "aviation is not just a fancy toy or status symbol" and listed examples of industrial growth that followed airport construction. He said resistance to airport construction was due to a lack of understanding of their values.

Sophisticated Voters

Starting the Gate

Post-Crescent Photos by Ralph Acker

Post-Crescent Women's Editor

Wisconsin voters have been called among the most sophisticated in the nation. How they get this way is an interesting combination of the influence of home, school, the press, one's friends, and events that stimulate their interest.

At age five, children already have some opinions. With a week of political activity at its peak in Wisconsin and much-discussed campaigns taking place in the Fox Cities, it seemed quite natural to go to one of the oldest schools in town, which, only incidentally, has a most appropriate name—Washington.

At five, children can flawlessly recite the 'Pledge of Allegiance'. They have an acquaintance with the great names of American history, know the colors of the flag, are willing to argue the number of stars, and in their innocence, have some unintentionally sage comments on the politics of our time.

The children are in the morning kindergarten class of Mrs. Robert Brown. Tuesday morning they went down to the polls and watched, at first hand, America in action.

Steve Mytton, left, knows his school "was named after Washington and when he was a little boy he chopped a cherry tree and his father came and said 'Who did that?' and he said 'I did' and he didn't lie and I don't ever lie 'cause when you lie you get spanked and the reason they call it Washington School is just because he chopped a cherry tree." Steve, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Mytton, also knows that Johnson is president, and the Father of his Country is God.

Mary Lou Becker, left, hasn't voted yet—"you have to be 11 or 10 and I'm only five now". She's getting ready, though, and she knows our country is 10 years old, that Washington was the first president and Lincoln the 16th. Lincoln's contribution was that "whenever he had certain papers, he stuck 'em in his hat". President Johnson is father of his country and the 15 stars in the flag stand for America. Mary Lou's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Becker.

"America is around the whole world," comments Mark Schleitwiler, above, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Schleitwiler. "Washington was the first president and the father of his country was some of Abraham Lincoln's friends." Lincoln's accomplishment was that he went to all different cities. Johnson is president now, Kennedy was before, and next, he hopes, "My dad. He'd be good."

"I know all about Washington and fathers of countries and all those things, but every time I forget", says Patty Parker, right, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Parker. She's pretty sure Lincoln was the first president and the country is 100 years old. She thinks she'll vote when she's about seven, and, to be president, a person has to be at least 30. A lady could never be president, 'cause she never gets old enough. The stars in the flag are to make it pretty. She never heard of LBJ and Washington's face is on a penny.

"America is a country", says Leslie Ann Simon, below, but she doesn't know where and she doesn't live in it because she lives over there across the street. "Washington was a president, the very first, and Lincoln was the father of his country about 40 years ago in the Civil War. The flag stands for America and has 13 stars because there were 13 states. Now there are 90. Leslie is the daughter of Mrs. LaVerne Simon.

Randy Ponshock, below, insists there are 18 stars in the flag. He knows about Lincoln, who lived 15 years ago, and about his state, Appleton. Randy is uncertain about what voting involves, because his daddy and mommy, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Ponshock, haven't let him do it yet.

"My daddy doesn't vote — he's a plumber. He works, and all that stuff," says Tim White, left, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert White. Tim never heard of Lincoln, but he knows a flag has about 100 stars and has got all different colors in it. War is when you shoot and fire bow and arrows and everything. He says he knows who the president is but he always forgets. A president should be 110 years old, and should stay president for 14 years. He doesn't have to know a lot, just work and have a war.

"Wisconsin is a different kind of world," says Cheryl Monyette, above, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Monyette. The young lady can recite the 'Pledge' without a mistake, and indivisible, she says, means, "you can't see it". There are 20 stars in the flag, and an election is "a place we get stuff". Cheryl says that a Minute Man is "a man that stopped in a minute."

Career Girl Plans Home on a Budget

A new job in a city far from home — a new apartment — and not a stick of furniture for a guest. Since the faced this problem had never furnished an apartment before and had a budget that needed time to grow. The start she made is shown by the pictured corner of the apartment as it is now, a first-time try that plans a pleasant and practical presence for a long future.

First furnishing chosen was the long sofa bed, a trim latex foam rubber-filled convertible that promises long-term seating comfort and is so easily changed-about for sleeping. Only half of it need be touched to produce one bed, but the second sofa seats four, seating for six needed completion by no more than the single arm chair, and a little table which takes a cushion part-time.

Cabinets Replace Drapes Then money spent for additional furniture bought basic necessities and extra decoration that couldn't be had otherwise, at the same time. The coffee table provides lengthy convenience, and its tortoise shell finish top on a dull copper-colored base makes it an eye-catcher as well. Cabinets needed for storage have superstructures which not only add handy shelves, but finish the sides of simply curtained windows impressively — draperies aren't missed. A third cabinet, matching but without the superstructure, centers extra storage smoothly under the window. Although more furnishings are to come, the apartment is most satisfying for the young careerist so busy on her job — it's easy to care for and nice to come home to.

Until they begin counseling, those who have been divorced are unable to see the role they themselves played in the destruction of their marriages. Little by little, they get to see themselves. Some run from the sight, going so far as to move from the county to escape the counseling that forces them to look. Those who stay, who want more insight, are better prepared to make good second marriages. They have a sense of right, of the good in the world, and a desire to strengthen society.

In the last two years over 15 women have stepped into clerical positions, trained for them in vocational schools, about 10 have become practical nurses, many have gone into telephone work, in either places of business or their own homes. Few go into domestic labor or cleaning jobs. The object is to try to find jobs that elevate them, make them feel a sense of their own worth, of ability to compete with others and enable them to take pride in accomplishment.

Community Support

Handling this program in family rehabilitation are two half - time caseworkers, two caseworkers - supervisors, six caseworkers and two intake workers. They are helped, Mr. Eggert believes, by the excellent community attitude toward the department. People believe the job can be done, that it will be, and that they will support the effort.

Mothers who apply to ADC for help do not leave their troubles with the department. Instead, they are given a more objective way of looking at their lives, and the tools for accepting responsibility. They are made to know that the homes for which they seek help are, after all, their own homes, that they and their children are the ones who gain by what they accomplish on their own. They are given the opportunity to achieve.

Dependent Children Aid Aims To Give Tools of Independence

Post-Crescent Women's Editor

In a quiet room on the first floor of the Outagamie County Courthouse, a woman with brown hair and brown eyes goes to a file cabinet and takes out a blank check. With a stack of forms in hand she then, at her desk, thoughtfully goes over all the information in a folder. Carefully, she fills in the check and prepares it for mailing.

Because of what that check, and many others, represents in housing, food, school expenses, lights and heat, 433 children in the county live a free - from - want childhood. In March $25,000 was paid in 136 cases of Aid to Dependent children.

There are many reasons mothers apply for ADC funds. At the present time there are 19 cases where the breadwinner has been incapacitated from gainful employment; 54 where divorce is the basis, and although the father may contribute to support, his portion is not adequate to cover need; 13 where the father has deserted and his whereabouts are unknown; 15 unwed mothers, including those who have been married and the husband has disavowed the child and deserted and illegitimate births; 10 where the father has been incarcerated for a long period; 4 due to the father's death; 12 where death or desertion of both parents has taken place or both are receiving mental or physical care and the child is placed in a home away from his parents; and 9 involving legal separation, a broadened phase of general relief sanctioned by the courts.

Knows Cases Well

Alfred Eggert, director, knows every case handled every week by every worker. With this information at hand, he can act either for remedy or control on any situation in a matter of days.

Not every mother who applies for ADC receives help. The ineligibility of about 50 per cent can be determined at intake, where two full - time workers are trained to spot the frauds quickly.

Need Apparent

The obvious need of the other half can also be ascertained at once. The first interview, done at the time the mother applies, covers social problems as well as financial need, for it is clear that those who come for help are caught in dilemmas too complicated to be solved only by money. The extensive interview usually lasts an hour and a half. At its conclusion, the information given is verified, and a case-worker who has the strengths and skills needed by the particular family assigned to the case.

To the often - raised question, why don't ADC mothers work? the answer is complicated. Mr. Eggert says that the goal is not to keep the families in groceries, but rather to rehabilitate them to self - sufficient assets to the community. There are many factors to be considered — the most important being the best possible care for the children. While the department is constantly reviewing and alert to every potentially employable ADC mother, many are clearly better off at home. They are needed to care for preschool children; have large families and are needed to keep it going; do a good job with their children and cannot be taxed beyond capacity or health won't permit them to work. Mr. Eggert feels the first job is to make the home as solid as possible.

Motivation 'Key'

Every mother who is potentially employable is being worked with by case worker toward that end. Some require motivation; some need force. Motivation is a key word in rehabilitation. Five years ago many had the attitude, 'why work? It's easier this way.' The department director believes that this has all but vanished in the last two years. If, buried deep, some women still have this feeling, it is never permitted to become dominant. Firmer policies at intake account for the change as does stronger effort at rehabilitation. Mothers are imbued with the feeling that they want to do all they can to help themselves, and that whatever they are able to do for their families, they should be willing to do. The mothers, many of whom have never been able to see beyond today, are asked to think of what life will be like for them when their children are grown, what their homes could be, what they want their children to be.

They are shown that what matters is not what others do for them, but what they do for themselves that elevates them above their past and its problems. Many, with no opportunity in their lives for testing or indication of ability, have surprised themselves at what their potential actually is. Awareness often comes slowly, after many hours at a Vocational School course, or many months of counseling. But, when it does come, it lifts the mother out of the dismal depression that has ruled her outlook and sets her off in new directions of achievement and confidence.

Finalists Prepare for April 19 Pageant at High School

The setting is informal. A group of 12 or 15 men and women converse quietly along one side. At the end, across the center of the room, are four men. Jaycee members seated at a table. Before them are papers, and, with them, lies the decision.

The young women are called into the room, one at a time. They smile and try to appear calm and poised. Yet their hands tremble. They are asked to walk toward the judges, smile, turn, walk back to a chair and be seated.

Again they are called before the judge, to answer two questions—one humorous, one serious. They are told to consider their answers before speaking. The occasion is the preliminary judging of the Miss Appleton Pageant finalists. As they go through their answers, each girl realizes that the event is almost an impromptu staging of the event itself. Each is as much on parade, as much tested for what she does and says, as are the finalists at Jersey City. This stage, the Appleton Elks Club, is as important in the journey toward Miss America as any other along the way.

Choos Their Way
All the young women are asked about their talents. Those who can give an actual presentation. Some sing, others dance, give readings, play musical instruments, twirl batons or simply tell what they intend to present when they are fully prepared. The girls choose their words carefully, groping for that elusive correct grammar, trying to impress. When told they may sit down again, they heave a sigh of relief—this test is finished.

Only the results were left to be tallied. As the judges discussed and deliberated the young women wandered off, one by one, to wait for word. For some, the answer was of monumental importance. For others, with a more casual attitude, it was not earth-shaking. But it mattered.

Named by the Appleton Jaycee committee to compete for the Miss Appleton title in the April 19 competition were Miss Ellen Larson, Miss Linda Langley, Miss Leann Siedschlag, Miss Sharon Prichard, Miss Lynn Kellogg, Miss Virginia Seipel, Miss Barbara Schubert, Miss Sharon O'Leary, Miss Julie Bassett and Miss Sandra Bruehl.

Will Play Oboe
Miss Larson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frans Larson, 540 N. Outagamie Court. A talented musician, Miss Larson will play the oboe as her pageant presentation. A junior at the Lawrence Conservatory of Music, she attended Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., for two years after graduation from Appleton High School. Considering a career as a professional performer or music teacher, the young woman also plays flute, English horn, bassoon and piano. In high school she was a member of Cur-tain Call, band, orchestra, pep band, Ushers Club, Pep Club, Latin Club, Student Council and the National Honor Society. Her hobbies, when there is time, are golfing, tennis, swimming and bowling. Her pageant sponsor is Newman's.

Linda Langley, 408 W. Seventh St., will give a humorous 'chalk talk' as her talent offering at the 8 p.m. pageant. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Langley, Cambria, Calif., is a freshman at Wisconsin State College, Oshkosh, and lives with her grandmother, Mrs. Irene Gill. A sports enthusiast, Miss Langley was a ski instructor at the Post-Crescent Ski School in 1963, and loves swimming, trampoline and water sports. While living in Oshkosh she was a and studied speech at both Appleton High School and OSC. She is entered in the pageant as Miss Fox Cities Foxes.

A Dramatic Reading
The friendliness of all the people involved and the challenge of participation prompted Miss Leann Siedschlag to enter the pageant. She will present a dramatic reading from "Tale of Two Cities". The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Siedschlag, 2312 N. Union St., is a senior at Appleton High School and will enter the University of Wisconsin in the fall. She plans to be a social worker. Her varied interests include spectator sports, particularly basketball and football; swimming and folk music, for which she has learned to play guitar and sing. Her pageant sponsor is American Homemakers.

Sharon Prichard, who lives at Lawrence College's Colman Hall, will play the piano as her pageant talent presentation. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Quinn Prichard, Roselle, Ill. The young woman, a senior, has three younger sisters and says she entered the pageant for the experience of meeting people and testing her own talent. Sponsored by the First National Bank, she lists among her hobbies reading, drawing, sketching, painting and swimming.

Urged by Friends
Lynn Kellogg, sponsored by the Appleton State Bank, is employed there as a receptionist. The young woman, an Appleton High School graduate who attended the University of Wisconsin for two years, was prompted by friends to participate in the competition. Her talent entry will be folk singing, accompanied by her guitar. As a career the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Kellogg, 1311 Lehman Lane, is interested in languages.

plans a talent offering from "The King and I", giving the declamation, "Shall I Tell You What I Think of You?" The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bruehl Jr., 1806 W. Lakeshore Drive, Menasha, is sponsored in the pageant by Frank and Pat's Pizza Palace. A graduate of Menasha High School, Miss Bruehl was a member of the National Honor Society, Quill and Scroll, and was associate editor of the school paper, a post she is repeating at the Center. She is also active in dramatics and has been named to the dean's list. Her hobbies include swimming, water skiing and badminton.

For all ten girls, pre-pageant days are exciting as they polish their talent offerings, learn the fine points of grooming and poise, and prepare for 'the day'. No matter who wins, each will take with her something she may not have learned otherwise, and, like all former contestants, will probably recall the pageant with memories of friendship and hard work.

It's a time when they can all enjoy 'being girls'.

Oshkosh School for Deaf and Hard of Hearing Schedules Open House Today

BY JUDY RUSSELL
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

OSHKOSH — "The work involved in teaching one deaf child is equivalent to that of teaching five youngsters who can hear normally. It takes about 60 repetitions of a word before that word becomes a part of a deaf child."

The gentleman speaking was Leonard Becker of Oshkosh, principal of the Oshkosh School for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing. This school, serving 11 counties, has an enrollment of 65 students, ranging in age from 3 to 18. Founded in 1888, the school operates in the Webster Stanley Junior High School.

Today at 2 p.m., the public may attend an Open House at the Deaf School. Philip Schmitt of the Department of the Deaf, University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee, will address about 28 Future Teachers of America groups, describing the techniques and training available to those who want to enter the field of deaf education.

On Monday, two practice teachers from UWM, Miss Karen Crowe, Appleton, and Miss Mary Reley, Oshkosh, will begin working at the school for five weeks. This will be the first time that such students have taken training outside the Milwaukee area. The girls are seniors in the education of the deaf school at the University.

Instructors

They will join a staff of seven instructors, five of whom are trained in special techniques: Mr. Becker, principal and teacher of the advanced class; Mrs. John Tucker, Mrs. Lyman Tanty, and David Thomas, all intermediate instructors from Oshkosh; Mrs. William Kiser, Oshkosh, primary; Mrs. Norman Sitte, Oshkosh, lower primary; and Mrs. Garwood Ferris, Menasha, kindergarten. Mrs. Ferris is assisted by Mrs. Frank Beck.

The 12 children in the kindergarten class meet in the mornings at Longfellow School. Five other classes meet at Webster Stanley. "The kindergarten class has eight students who are profoundly deaf and four who can hear some," Mrs. Ferris explained. One student who has attended the school for three years can now pronounce 12 words, but her lip reading is extensive.

Stress Lip Reading

Mrs. Ferris stressed the fact that the Oshkosh school "is an oral school, stressing lip reading, speech and language development. No sign language is employed as a teaching technique." Many children have no concept of a word when they first go to the school. The kindergarten class uses lip reading. The children first learn commands: "sit down, stand up, run, jump, walk." Vowels are taught through the use of symbols, pictures, and by actual pronunciation by the instructors while the child feels the teacher's face. The child, in turn, feels his own face as he pronounces the word.

In intermediate and primary classes, distance microphones are used to raise the intensity of the instructor's voice and response of the students. The school also has regular and portable audiometers for hearing tests.

The curriculum of the school is the same as that in any other elementary or junior high school with the addition of speech, lip reading, auditory training and language. Integration with normal hearing children is an important part of the school program. Children are integrated primarily at the junior high school age in physical education, home economics, manual arts and art.

Before students are accepted into the deaf school they must be referred to the school by the Bureau for Handicapped Children at Madison. The child in question must not be able to get along in a regular class situation. He must have a medical examination by an otologist. The handicap does not have to be too severe in order for the child to be referred to the school, although the school has students who are totally deaf.

Causes of Deafness

"Many of our children became totally or partially deaf as the result of childhood diseases which attacked the auditory nerves," Mr. Becker commented. He cited meningitis, whooping cough and measles as principle causes. "In some, deafness was caused by an injury at birth, an RH factor, a brain injury, or illness of the mother during pregnancy. Some students also are cerebral palsied," he added.

Mr. Becker likes to limit the Hearing Tests Are Given regularly at the School for the Deaf. Above, right, Mrs. John Tucker, instructor of an intermediate group, tests the hearing of Barbara Bruggink, Appleton. Waiting their turns are Douglas Priester, Neenah, and Mike Fahley, Oshkosh. In addition to a portable audiometer, the school also has a regular-sized one. Below, are children in the kindergarten class. Mrs. Garwood Ferris, Menasha, teacher, tells Heidi Burghardt, Appleton, to 'jump'. She obeys while the other children watch. Commands are among the first words taught children in the Oshkosh School for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing.

At Left, Mrs. Garwood Ferris uses a mirror, pieces of paper with letters attached, and toy animals to get a point across to Shirley Chouinard, Menasha. Shirley has been attending the school for three years. She has extensive lip reading ability and can pronounce 12 words. At right, older girls, now in regular junior high classes, work in the home economics department under instructor Mrs. Joseph Jatner. Ready to sample chocolate cookies are Janet Baker, Oshkosh; Judith Engelman, Campbellsport; Paula Millard, New London, and Donna Thorp, Fond du Lac.

Learning to Speak involves the senses of touch, sight and sound for youngsters at the Deaf School. instructors about their particular problems.

Test Your Safe Driving Quiz Rating

BY VIVIAN BROWN

Why not aim for a safe driving record in 1964?

Lots of young people are thought to be too hostile on the road. Too aggressive for their own good. They rack up speeding tickets, and other traffic violations. Their record becomes accident - blemished. Sometimes it's because they just don't understand automobiles and how they perform.

A true and false examination given to 30,000 students in 210 schools in 29 states and the District of Columbia, in connection with a safe driving program illustrates that a wrong attitude and lack of knowledge about cars does exist among many of the 6½ million licensed teen-age drivers in the United States.

One estimate is that there are 60 per cent fewer accidents among those who have taken high school driver education courses.

First Prize

The national first prize winner in this competition, David C. Rohlfing, 17, of Lewellen Rural High School, Lewellen, Neb., is now taking a course. He scored 96 on the true and false test to win a $5,000 scholarship.

The 100-question test was prepared by Leo Lieberman, director of Psychological Services at Suffolk University, Boston for a chemical products company (Union Carbide Corp.) who initiated the safety awards.

Here are 15 of the questions. Try your hand, answering true or false:

1. Slippery - surface skids kill and injure more people than do dry-surface skids.
2. Lowering the pressure in your tires improves traction on icy roads.
3. Most calls for assistance in highway breakdowns arise from tire troubles.
4. Doubling your speed doubles your braking distance.
5. When you double a car's speed you increase its kinetic energy three times.
6. The better - than-average driver can eliminate the reaction time in the formula "stopping time equals reaction time plus braking time."
7. Force of impact varies directly with distance it takes a car to stop after it hits something.

Which Lane?

8. On crowned curves a car in the outside lane tends to hold the road better than one in the inside lane.
9. Underinflation of tires in hot weather helps keep the tires cooler and preserve sidewall fabric.
10. If the brake pedal when depressed is one inch from the floor, it is a sign of brake trouble.
11. As you drive your automobile over the crest of the hill the only way you can prevent your danger zone from lengthening is to decrease your speed.
12. When I am held back by too many people and things sometimes I want to get behind the wheel of a car and forget everything in the excitement of driving.
13. The time to be most alert is while driving on a straight highway.
14. When other cars are rushing along the road beside me and I feel as if they are trying to push my car off the road I would try to outwit the other driver before they got me.

Speed Limit

15. When I see speed limit signs that I consider unreasonable and a nuisance I would use my own judgment about how fast to go.

Here are the correct answers. In percentages, for each question, with the percentage of students who answered incorrectly in the 100-question examination.

- (1. No - 70; 2. No - 66.6; 3. No - 65.3; 4. No - 59.7; 5. No - 59.7; 6. No - 52.5; 7. No - 52.2; 8. No - 40.8; 9. No - 34.5; 10. Yes - 32.6; 11. Yes - 24.7; 12. No - 21.3; 13. Yes - 16.4; 14. No - 11.6; 15. No - 8.4.)

A Striking Note in traditional-contemporary decor is made by the decorative black and white wallpaper used on one wall. This handsome Moroccan grill wallpaper would be suitable for a 'headboard' for a bed, as a room divider or as a stylized hall or alcove treatment. The carpet is red and the print chair cover is red, pink and green. Character and color interest is also added by the red and green striped planter. The desk table has many uses—desk, table, card or game surface or dining room table.

Your Problems

Ann Tells Procedure When National Anthem Is Played

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Last night my husband and I attended a meeting to hear a political candidate speak. There were about 1,500 people in the auditorium. From the balcony we had an excellent view of 1,000 people downstairs. When the national anthem was played what we saw made us ashamed to be Americans.

About a half dozen women remained seated. Most of the men stood bareheaded. A few men kept their hats on. Some of the women removed their hats. Most of the folks placed their hands over their hearts. I saw one man who didn't know his heart was on the left side. He placed his left hand over the right side of his chest. A few people saluted.

When I glanced around I saw several people who were faking or simply singing la-la-la because they didn't know the words.

Please print this letter and outline the proper procedure when the national anthem is played. — Red, White and Blue in the Face

Dear Face: Everyone should stand when the national anthem is played. If the flag is on display this means hats off for the men at outdoor events. Indoors, men are supposed to have their hats off. A woman's hat is considered part of her costume. She would not remove her hat any more than she would remove her shoes.

If the flag is not on display there is no reason to place the hand over the heart or to salute. People who do this are confusing the singing of the pledge of allegiance to the flag.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband works nights. He is supposed to get every other Friday off. Whenever I make plans his boss calls and asks him to come in and help out. Either someone didn't show up or they suddenly got more orders than they could handle.

I could scream when I hear my husband say, "Oh, I'd be glad to. I wasn't doing anything anyway." The minute he puts down the receiver he uses words I can't spell and you can't print. Yesterday he got so mad he kicked the dog.

I've pleaded with him to tell his boss he has already made plans. He says he can't do it. In the meantime I'm fed to the teeth with his ugly temper every time this happens. What can be done? — Boiling Over

Dear Over: Wives are favorite whipping girls for husbands who have trouble with their bosses.

What your husband needs is an outlet for his hostility. A punching bag, or a fast trot around the block could serve as a safety valve. Mature people take out their anger on things — not other people.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: That letter signed "Honest to Goodness Mom" made me honest to goodness sick.

Why should parents get mad when their children are not included in every invitation? A bride has the right to decide whether she wants kids at her wedding.

I've seen some of these terrors whose parents consider them perfect little angels. They descend on the sweet table like vultures, slide around on the dance floor, fall asleep on the hats and coats, and have to be carried to the car.

Your readers probably will be infuriated by my comments. Nothing burns people up like criticizing their children. But I had to let you know I am with you. — Home They Should Stay

Dear Home: Some readers may be infuriated but a great many of them are on our side. Thanks for writing.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope. (Copyright, 1964) discontinued and the Oshkosh school now serves the entire area. "The schools were consolidated to provide better education and to have different age groups in different classes, not all ages in one class," Mrs. Ferris explained.

Mrs. Ferris has charge of the Deaf Education Aid Fund (DEAF, a group that is seeking to incorporate as a non-profit organization to solicit funds for teacher scholarships which will be offered on the basis of individual need. "A problem existing throughout the United States is that 20 per cent of all deaf children are not getting the special training they need. In Wisconsin, UW-M is the only place giving special training. There are 46 other U. S. universities that provide training for those interested, and there is a federal school at the senior level for graduate study," Mrs. Ferris stated.

Children living within a 20-mile radius of Oshkosh are transported to the school daily. Those living beyond this area stay in boarding homes for the week and their parents pick them up on Friday. Some of the drivers are college students, others are cab drivers and some are furnished by the school boards.

The school is maintained and supported by the city of Oshkosh and the State of Wisconsin through the Bureau for Handicapped Children. A tuition fee is charged to a child's home county. Parents of children attending the school pay no tuition.

A distinguished alumnus of the Oshkosh School for the Deaf is Gary Viall, 1019 Oak St. Gary was graduated from Oshkosh High School, placing 23rd in a class of 526. He is now attending Gallaudet College at Washington, D. C., where he is an honor student and on the Dean's List.

Use Coated Utensils for No-Stick Pans

With pans coated for no-stick cooking you need to take one precaution to keep them from scratching. That is to use wooden, rubber or coated spoons, spatulas and utensils with them.

You also need to keep cooking temperatures no higher than medium. The coatings will stand high heat but some damage can be done, especially if an empty pan is kept on high for too long. Foods will burn in a no-stick pan that is coated with the finish just as in any pan. Of course, the burnt food is easier to clean out of coated pans.

Different Sizes
For a new homemaker, or someone that needs to replace old pieces or that wants to expand the number of pans she has, the no-stick cookware is a good choice.

You'll find many styles of pans that come with the no-stick coating. Several styles of dry pans and even an electric fry pan is coated. So is a top-of-stove and an electric griddle. In bake items there are muffin tins, bread pans, a utility pan and a jelly roll pan. For top-of-stove cooking there are one and two-quart saucepans.

April 12, 1964

Many of the pans come with coatings of gray, green, brown or black. The coating is the same whatever the color.

Sunday Post-Crescent C6

The biggest advantage of the no-stick pans is that you don't need to grease the bake dishes or use fat for frying. In any of the pans the food comes out easily without sticking and you don't need to scour to get the pans clean.

The coating, which is perfectly safe for cooking, has history of industrial uses and has been used in cookware in Europe in recent years.

"I WAS READY TO THROW IN THE TOWEL"

... Until my family started using Post-Crescent Want Ads ... Then things really got better around our place in a hurry.

Here's what happened. One day my mistress said she was tired of living with a budget that just wouldn't stretch enough to allow for any "extras". Then the boss said he couldn't understand why other families with incomes like ours always seemed to have enough money left over to do things . . . And, about that time, the kids came in and asked for new bikes. I'm telling you I led a dog's life around here for a while.

Shortly after that though, my family heard about money-making Post-Crescent Want Ads and decided to give them a try. I followed my mistress all around the house one day while she wrote down everything she could find that we didn't use or need any more . . . the kids outgrown toys, clothing and furniture; a camera; the musical instrument no one plays now; some appliances; sports equipment; tools; yard furniture; even the dog house I don't use (now that I'm older and wiser). When she finished her list, she went right to the phone. That night she told the boss about the friendly Ad Writer who'd made it so easy for her to place her ad.

For the next few days I nearly ran my legs off meeting all the people who came to the house to pay cash for the things they wanted to buy . . . And, from that day to this . . . the minute my family discovers we aren't using something, they sell it with an inexpensive Post-Crescent Want Ad.

Tradition of 19 Years Standing to End At Infant Welfare Circle's Spring Sale

A tradition and association of 19 years will come to an end at the conclusion of this year's Infant Welfare Circle Spring Sale. During that period the King's Daughters group has held its annual fund-raising event in the basement of the Lawrence College Chapel. After this season, the Chapel will no longer be available for that purpose.

Started in 1930

This year's sale is scheduled Wednesday and Thursday. The price-and-a-half sale will be from 1:30 to 3 p.m. Wednesday and the regular sale from 9 a.m. to noon Thursday. The rummage project, which includes clothing and household items, is now 34 years old. It was among the first major undertakings of the merger of newly formed circle and the Community Comfort Council in 1930. Members then staffed a re-sale shop on the corners of Durkee Street and College Avenue, open two days a week. Proceeds were then given to the maintenance of a free maternity bed at St. Elizabeth Hospital and the support of the King's Daughters Foundation.

During the years, almost all circle members have served as sale chairmen, and all have worked at gathering the rummage items, cleaning and polishing them, pricing them and getting them to the Chapel on time.

Recipients of funds raised in these, and special auctions and furniture sales held in the 40s, have been Appleton Memorial Hospital, St. Elizabeth Hospital Building Fund, the YMCA Building Fund, Community Guidance Center, Plamann School, Peabody Manor and the Morgan School Orthopedic Department.

Chairman, Committee Serving as chairmen this year is Mrs. Harold Adams; co-chairman, Mrs. Charles J. Lingelbach Jr., and committee members, Mrs. William Buchanan, Mrs. Paul Wesco, Mrs. John Reeve, Mrs. Elmer Root, Mrs. Arthur Denney, Mrs. C. I. Perschbacher, Mrs. William McGraw and Mrs. George Cameron.

An all day work session is planned the day before the sale. Workers will bring a box lunch and the committee will furnish coffee.

Women of the Service Circle of the King's Daughters will carry Spring Sale items into the basement of Lawrence College Chapel for the last time this year. For 19 years the sale has been held in this location and for the last six, Arnold Heinke, head custodian at the college, has made the event his personal project. He is shown above, right, holding the door for Mrs. Harold Adams, chairman, and Mrs. Charles Lingelbach Jr., co-chairman. At left, sorting and pricing, are Mrs. Leonard Pasek, Mrs. John Reeve, Mrs. Elmer W. Root, Mrs. Henry Bailey and Mrs. William McGraw. The sale will be Wednesday afternoon and Thursday morning. The man in the grey flannel suit may soon look about as modern as the man in the celluloid collar. The reason: men's suits, as well as their shirts, are now being made in a variety of colors. Modest Ranch Suitable to Narrow Lot

BY JULES LOH
No one can deny the convenience of one-level living. Ranch style homes not only are up to date in appearance but are in

H-24 Statistics
A one-story home containing three bedrooms, bath, living room, dining room, kitchen, full basement, covered patio, breezeway, garage. Basic area is 1,352 square feet. Over-all dimensions including breezeway and garage are 53' wide by 52'6" deep; without breezeway and garage width is less than 31 feet.

A Sheltered Patio just outside the dining room is located on the side of the house. The built-in barbecue shares its chimney with the living room fireplace inside, outdoor living with privacy.

The Basic House Floor Plan contains 1,352 square feet of living area. With the breezeway and garage omitted, the house would be less than 31-feet wide including the side patio — narrow enough for a 50-foot lot in many communities.

Today's House of the Week was designed by architect William G. Chirgolis to solve this vexing problem. It is design H-24 in the weekly series.

The house is so constructed that you can tailor it to suit your own lot—even if it's as narrow as 50 feet. By leaving off the garage and breezeway (the garage can be placed in the rear) the width of the house is less than 31 feet. Even if the lot size is large enough to accommodate the garage and breezeway they can be left off when the house is built and added later when the budget permits.

The exterior features a low-pitched double gable, brick veneer, hand split cedar shingles and a decorative brick planter at the attractive covered entry. The roof is asphalt shingle.

Additional Details
The outdoor living facilities are nicely arranged in this house—a feature which will be more and more appreciated as warm weather arrives.

Both the breezeway and side patio are covered, and the breezeway could even be screened. Behind the breezeway and right outside the kitchen door is a somewhat private nook ideal as a play area (because of the supervision from the kitchen) or as an open patio. Opportunities for creative plant arrangements are on all sides of the house.

There is no formal foyer, but a vestibule with a coat closet serves the function nicely if modestly.

The living room has wall areas well suited to furniture arrangements, and features a wood-burning fireplace. Architect Chirgolis suggests use of pine panelling around the fireplace.

Open Dining Room
The dining room adjoins in an open plan which is ideal for

Your Life Insurance

QUESTION: My $35,000 life insurance policy is now giving me nearly $300 yearly in dividends. Since I always deduct these from my premium payment, I've never regarded them as income for Federal income tax purposes, but someone told me that I should. Is he correct?

ANSWER: No sir. You are right in your regular practice. Life insurance policy dividends are not dividends in the usual sense. They are not "earnings." Rather, they are premium refunds. With a participating policy (a dividend paying policy) you pay a premium each year that is slightly more than will probably be needed and the excess is returned to you, determined on the basis of the company's actual experience. Thus, you are really getting back money you paid out and not receiving income. This was decided in the courts 50 years ago. If you were leaving the dividends to accumulate at interest (as many do) the interest earnings each year would represent taxable income, of course, but not the dividends themselves. You have probably received notice from your insurance company of its reporting this, as they are now required to do by law. This notice is probably what confused someone.

Have you considered using your dividends to buy additional paid-up life insurance? This has certain definite advantages which you might want to check out with your agent.

"Your Life Insurance" is presented each Sunday as a public service in cooperation with the Northwestern Wisconsin Chapter of the American Society of Chartered Life Underwriters. Address queries to "Life Insurance Editor" of the Sunday Post-Crescent.

Objective, Non-Objective Artists Split Waupaca Art Show Prizes

Sophisticated, Experimental Work Displayed

BY JAY JOSLYN
Post-Crescent Sunday Editor
WAUPACA — Representational and non-objective subjects split the top prizes in the Waupaca Fine Arts Festival Art Show last week as Fox Cities and Oshkosh artists carried away six of the eight crowns.
Although James A. Schinneller of the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee art faculty, acting as the show's sole judge, discounted the arbitrary value of his judgement, his selections went a long way in compiling a representative view of the scope of the show.
One of the most striking aspects of the show was the sophisticated character of many of the paintings along with the considerable amount of experimentation in the use of different and mixed media.

The Bright, Alert Color and the tension provoking sector lines won a first prize in the professional class for Mrs. John Checkis of Oshkosh. Mrs. Checkis calls the work "Dew Line."

Dramatic Presentation

Stage, Film Star From India to Appear at Lawrence Chapel

Zia Mohyeddin, the only Asian actor to have starred both on Broadway and in London's West End, as well as in films and television, will make a dramatic presentation titled "The Cream of Literature — Lyricism" at 10:40 a.m. Thursday in Lawrence Memorial Chapel.
Mohyeddin starred as Dr. Aziz in the Broadway production of "A Passage to India", a play written by Santha Rama Rau based upon E. M. Forster's novel.

Born in Lahore where his father was a professor of English at Punjab University, Zia made his theatrical debut at the age of 10 in the role of a Greek god in one of his father's plays.
Radio Work
After Zia's own graduation with honors from the University of Punjab, he took a staff position with the newly independent Pakistan Broadcasting Service. This position led to travels abroad, first to Australia and then to England. In Australia he wrote and directed a number of plays for the radio networks there. In England he studied at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art and served an apprenticeship with various acting groups.
Three years later he returned to England to direct a play for the Guildford Repertory Co. and was then offered the role of the focal character in the British production of "Passage to India." Next he starred in Harvey Breit's "The Guide." In the fall of 1962 he came to America to repeat the role of Dr. Aziz in "Passage to India."
Among Mr. Mohyeddin's films are "Lawrence in Arabia" and "Sunny Going South." He also narrates Caedmon's LP record, "Oriental Fairy Tales."
The program, a part of the regular Lawrence convocation series, is open to the public without admission charge. Seats in the fore part of the balcony are not assigned to students.

In 1956 he returned to Pakistan to organize a modern, professional theater and produced and directed a number of plays in both English and Urdu, ranging from Shakespeare to John Osborne.

Next he starred in Harvey Breit's "The Guide." In the fall of 1962 he came to America to repeat the role of Dr. Aziz in "Passage to India."

Library Week Little Care Can Extend Book's Life

BY THOMAS G. LEE
Words and Drawings

During this week — Library Week in the Fox River Valley and throughout the nation — take a closer look at your books, the storehouses of the world's culture. How is their health?
Books are like children: they require much attention; they respond to care and attention in early life, and they respond to environment. And like children, books in early life will be happier, their maturity longer and their death more distant if they have found their fate coupled with kindly, sympathetic friends.
If treated properly books will lead a long and useful life. It is the job of professional librarians to understand the preservation of books and thus from library literature come many tips that provide an effective guide to book-care for everyone.

1. OPENING NEW BOOKS. All new books should be opened with extreme care. A new book should be placed on its back on a flat surface and its covers pressed down. Then, holding the pages upright in one hand, a few pages in the front and then a few in the back should be pressed down alternately until the book lies open in the middle. If a new book is yanked open its binding is likely to crack, causing the pages to fall out.

2. MARKING YOUR PLACE. Never use a thick object, like a pencil, to mark your place in a book. And, never leave a book open and lying on its pages — the strain will weaken the binding. Above all, don't "dog ear" the pages.
3. SHELVING BOOKS. Keep books in an upright position by using bookends. Never shelf books on their fore edges. This is one of the quickest and surest ways to damage them since the weight of the book pulls by the force of gravity, from the back of its cover.
4. TURNING PAGES. Always turn the pages by grasping them at the upper right-hand corner.
5. PROPER TEMPERATURE. Keep books away from heat, especially direct sun light. An ideal temperature is between 65 and 70 degrees with a relative humidity between 50 and 60 per cent.
6. CROWDING. Avoid the crowding of books on shelves since it tends to rip off backs and bindings.
7. CLEANLINESS. Keep books clean. Hands should be clean when using a book. Books should be kept away from food.
8. PROTECTION. Protect your book. When taken outdoors in rain or snow see that they are properly protected.
9. TAKING FROM SHELF. Take a book from the shelf by grasping the center of the back rather than the top or bottom.

MacArthur Autograph 3rd Menasha Library Exhibit Attracts Top Area Artists

MENASHA — A wide range of skill, experience and subject matter will highlight the third Elisha D. Smith Public Library art show opening this afternoon.
Mrs. Dorothy Weber, head librarian, has gathered a representative collection of work by Fox Cities artists for the exhibit that is meant to attract attention to Library Week and the opportunities of study the library has to offer in the art field. Last year the Twin Cities Junior Chamber of Commerce sponsored the show. This year the library staff is handling the arrangements itself.
Perhaps of the most topical interest in the show will be a very early work of Mrs. George Skowronski of Neenah, the art instructor at the Bergstrom Art Center. In her teens Mrs. Skowronski drew a portrait of the late Gen. Douglas MacArthur and, through the intercession of Col. Marshall Graff, then director of the UW Center in Menasha, the general signed the work.
Historic Value
Works of special historic value have been supplied the show by Charles H. Beyer of Neenah. Beyer, who paints in the style of Grandma Moses, will have an 1895 view of Nicolet Boulevard which divides Neenah and Menasha drawn from his boyhood memories.

Along with many Twin Cities hobbyists who have learned much of their art from library books, Mrs. Weber has attracted some of the better artists in the valley to the exhibit.
Among these are Gerald King, Gary Fusfield, John Vlossak, George Kohanski, Mrs. Skowronski, Mrs. Roy Kuehn, Al Loehndorf, Henry Young, Harvey Jorgenson, Miss Milson Jackson, Mrs. Charles Steingraber, Mrs. Reynold Steintert and the Embrey-Russell pottery team.
Design Sketches
Also in this category, but in an unusual field, is Mrs. James Auer, who will hang several scenic design sketches.
Other artists include Mrs. Marie Schultz, Mrs. George Walker Jr., Mrs. Nels Wahlstrom, Sidney Wilson, Judy Christoffer, Mrs. Byron Clarke, John Lancaster, Mrs. Howard Anderson, Robert Paynter, Mrs. Mildred Jacobs, Mrs. Mary Crockett, Mrs. Lawrence Terrio, James Lawson, Mrs. Gerald Clark, Carol Ecker, Pat Safford, Mrs. R. E. Selle, Mary Bridges and Dr. Don Ryan.
The exhibit will hang at the library during the week. There will be a reception at the opening today.

Winnebago GOP In Quandary on Backing Van Pelt

Contradictory Action at Sixth
District Caucus May Cause Rift

OSHKOSH — Republicans in Winnebago County are wondering whether Congressman William K. Van Pelt's request for endorsement at the Sixth District caucus meeting more than a week ago may have precipitated a wound within the party that may not easily be healed.

Winnebago County Republicans pleaded for a "no endorsement" policy at that caucus since Jack Steinhilber, Winnebago County district attorney, had announced that he too was seeking the Congressional post held by Rep. Van Pelt for seven terms.

H. R. Moore, Neenah industrialist, pleaded at the meeting that no candidate be endorsed and that the people should decide at the September primary which candidate shall go on to the general election to combat the candidate being presented by the Democrats.

Endorsement Battle

"Let's not repeat the 1962 endorsement battle," Moore requested, referring obviously to the battle for endorsement at the state convention between Philip Kuehn, who won that endorsement, and Warren Knowles.

Wilbur Renk did not seek the convention endorsement, announcing in advance he would not seek it and that he would seek the nomination in the primary. He lost that nomination and Kuehn lost the governor race to the Democratic candidate, John Reynolds.

This year both Knowles and Renk seem to have the party's blessing with Knowles as the only announced candidate for governor and Renk as the only announced candidate for U. S. senator. Both seem likely to get the state convention endorsement for those offices in May.

Caucus Confusion

Confusion seemed to reign at the Sixth District caucus a week ago as to whether the delegates from the seven counties did or did not endorse Van Pelt for an eighth term. Winnebago county's motion not to endorse a candidate had carried on a roll call vote of county delegates.

However, later in the meeting and after some delegates had left the room, the resolutions committee presented a resolution endorsing Van Pelt and this was declared to have been approved by those present on a voice vote. Winnebago County delegates thought the strength of voices on each side had been about equal if not a bit louder in favor of their viewpoint.

The executive committee of the Winnebago County Republican party is scheduled to meet Wednesday night. One of the issues coming up at that meeting is whether Winnebago County funds should be sent to the district for use in promoting the candidacy of Van Pelt as the candidate endorsed by the caucus.

Nine-Year-Old Pulled From Mud In Fox River

LITTLE CHUTE — Volunteer firemen had a busy day Saturday beginning with the rescue of a nine-year-old boy from mud in the canal of the Fox River near Doyle Park at 11:15 a.m.

The youth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Strick, 617 S. Harrison St., Little Chute, walked on to the river bed and suddenly began sinking in the soft mud. He sank to his hips. Fond du Lac Teen Bar Club Controversy Builds Up Steam

'Beer Bar' License Fight
To Come Before Court Monday

BY WILLIAM C. CAREY
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

FOND DU LAC — The beer bar battle is brewing hot and heavy in the nearby Town of Fond du Lac.

Members of the town board have revoked the license of the Starlite Club, a tavern recently converted to a teen bar in defiance of town policy banning minor bars.

The dispute between the Starlite management and board will wind up in court Monday at 10 a.m. as result of developments over the weekend in the controversy which has attracted statewide attention.

Atty. Peter Porath, president of the corporation which runs the club on State 175 just outside the city's S. Main Street limits, obtained a restraining order and had it served on the board Saturday.

The temporary order, issued by County Judge Jerold Murphy late Friday, restrains the board from shutting the bar down until the court makes a review of the dispute Monday morning.

Chester Costello, the town's outspoken chairman, said the board's legal counsel would be ready to answer the court order obtained by Porath.

Slap State

Undersheriff Harry Rozek served the court summons on Costello at his farm Saturday morning. "We expected it and the board will be ready to present its case in court," Costello said.

The board's revocation of the club's class B beer and liquor licenses Thursday night, following a special hearing for Porath last Monday, also represented a slap at the attorney general's office and state beverage and tax division.

State officials have issued an informal opinion that if liquor is removed from the premises, the license is considered inactive, and the establishment can be operated as a minor bar with persons under 21 permitted on the premises.

The opinion gets around the state law that no one under 21

Thousands of Valley Area People To Receive Sabin Vaccine Today

Waupaca, Shawano Counties, Twin Cities
Clinics to Start; Outagamie Final April 19

Thousands of Fox Valley area residents will receive Sabin oral vaccine at public clinics today and next Sunday.

Residents of Neenah-Menasha and Waupaca and Shawano counties, will get doses of anti-polio vaccine today.

An estimated 94,000 persons are expected to receive their final doses of vaccine in Outagamie County on Sunday, April 19.

Last month when the Outagamie County Medical Society conducted the first phase of the "Sabin on Sunday" program, it drew 94,000 persons to the 10 clinics and doctors' offices a few days later.

Dr. George Behnke, Kaukauna, medical director for the county's mass immunization program, said Saturday that next Sunday's clinics will be at the following sites in Outagamie County:

Outagamie Sites

— Morgan, Madison Junior High, St. Pius, Jefferson and Huntley schools in Appleton.

— J. R. Gerrits Junior High at Kimberly, and Kaukauna, Seymour, New London and Hortonville High schools.

Clinics will be open from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. This time there will be no "makeup period," as there was following the first "Sabin on Sunday" when residents who were unable to attend the clinics had an opportunity to obtain vaccine from their family physician during the following week.

At the first clinics, Outagamie residents received Type I vaccine and made a 25-cent donation.

200,000 Drops

Next Sunday, residents attending clinics will get one dose, combining Types II and III vaccine, with a small cube of sugar. A 25-cent donation will be requested.

However, anyone unable to make a contribution still will receive the vaccine and no questions will be asked, Dr. Behnke said.

Because two types of vaccine will be administered at once, it has been estimated the Outagamie County pharmacists and other medical volunteers will prepare close to 200,000 drops of vaccine.

The center for the countywide medical operation will again be conduct Sabin clinics in the Twin Cities today under the sponsorship of Neenah-Menasha doctors and pharmacists.

Clinics will be open from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. in both cities. At Neenah the clinics will be at Neenah High and Taft Grade schools. The centers at Menasha will be at Menasha High and Jefferson grade schools.

Seven Centers

In Waupaca County today, seven centers will be in operation from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. to dispense vaccine. The Waupaca County Medical Society is sponsoring the mass immunization program.

Waupaca County clinics will be at Clintonville High, Tola High, Manawa High, Marion High, Weyauwega Grade and Waupaca Central Grade schools.

Shawano County Sabin vaccine clinics will also be operating today at Wittenberg and Tigerton.

On April 19, the Fond du Lac County Medical Society will conduct Sabin clinics in that county.

Vote Recount Decides Race In Neenah

Incumbent Alderman
Harold Young Retains Win

NEENAH — Harold Young, incumbent alderman in the 10th Ward election contest here April 7, Saturday was declared officially the winner of the aldermanic post following a recount of ballots as requested by Young's opponent Ronald Lange.

It was only the third vote recount in the history of Neenah, according to one candidate who ran in the Second Ward race. A recount was called in 1960 when only one vote difference was recorded in the race for mayor.

Poll workers counted 227 votes for Harold Young and 212 for Lange following the election. Lange on Friday petitioned for a recount because of the small majority of votes and because 42 of the ballots cast in the ward election were blank in the aldermanic columns.

Same Rules

Neenah Council, called to a special session at 11 a.m. Saturday, used the same rules as in previous recounts.

Ald. Warren Anders was named judge of the recount; Ald. Harry Miller was named clerk and Ald. Peter Fara was named teller. Ald. Sidney Donaldson also served in the recount. Neenah City Clerk R. V. Hauser and Neenah Mayor Carl Loehning, along with others, served as witnesses.

The final count was unchanged from the original balloting: Lange, 212 votes and Young, 227 votes.

One vote was disputed because a mark had been made beside both candidates names. Council ruled the ballot would go to Young, giving him the total of 227.

Following the final count, council officially named Young as the new Tenth Ward alderman.

Kaukauna Youth Hurt When Car Crashes Into Tree

KAUKAUNA — Jerome Coffey, 16, 1600 Oakridge Ave., suffered a bump on the head when the car in which he was a passenger left the road and struck a tree on Crooks Avenue about 12:20 a.m. Saturday.

According to police, the car driven by Charles S. Carr, 16, 107 Idlewild St., Kaukauna, left the road as Carr was attempting to locate hot cigarette ashes which blew into the vehicle when he attempted to throw out a cigarette.

Three cars were damaged in a chain reaction mishap on Main Avenue about 2:45 p.m. Friday. Cars driven by Edward Corth, 52, 591 Grove St., Fond du Lac, and Jerome Fox, 18, route 3, Kaukauna, stopped in the lane of traffic as Corth waited to turn right into a parking lot.

A car driven by James Kiffe, 18, 816 Grignon St., Kaukauna, struck the Fox vehicle pushing it forward into the Corth car. There were no injuries involved.

Atty. Peter Porath, Fond du Lac, president of the corporation which defied Town of Fond du Lac Board policy and converted the Starlite tavern into a minor bar, was summoned before the board this week to defend his action. About 70 persons attended the meeting. The license was revoked. (Tom Brunet Photo)

Welfare Workers Are Truant Officers

Some Are Women, Many Have Master's Degrees in Social Work

You'd never recognize the truant officer.

Some of them are women and many of them have masters degrees in social work. They work around the clock associating with health authorities, people of the medical and legal professions.

In many cases they have degrees in education and their pay is slightly above that of school teachers.

They're called pupil personnel workers.

Theodore J. Kummerlein, the top "truant" officer in the state as director of pupil personnel in Milwaukee County's school system, told attendance directors meeting at the semi-annual meeting of the Association of Pupil Personnel Workers that the new, professional truant officers must be alert to accept all responsibilities of their new jobs.

Do Parents Job

Kummerlein said that social workers in the school have taken over functions once reserved to the parents and other agencies "because of the impatience of the school boards at trying to get the job done properly."

Other members of the panel discussion included Alvin Altmayer, welfare supervisor for the Milwaukee Vocational and Adult School; Charles W. Cook, dean of boys at Appleton High School; and Donald Hoefft, director of personnel services at Sheboygan High School.

Milwaukee's complex personnel services department will be bolstered to include two lay staff members who will work parttime in neighborhoods at which professional people find difficult to cope with, Kummerlein said.

Enlarged Staff

He said the nominally educated staff workers will be a liaison between the school, the person-

A short time later, a second complaint was filed by Erling Jansen, 44 Ramlen Court, saying his mailbox was badly damaged, apparently in an attempt to remove it from its post. Jansen said the attempted theft also occurred overnight.

Crackdown Ordered On Litter Law Violators

Contractors, Others Urged to Cooperate In Keeping Streets, Sidewalks Clean

With the construction season about to shift into high gear, Public Works Director Robert W. Bues today warned the city will crack down on litter ordinance violators.

Two ordinances have been on the books for sometime but there has been little enforcement.

Contractors and others going to city hall for permits are receiving a memorandum spelling out terms of the ordinances and pleading to, "Please help us keep our city clean."

Those convicted of the first offense will be subject to a $1 to $100 fine, plus court costs. The penalty for the second violation is $10 to $200 and costs.

Ordinance

The ordinances specifically say it is unlawful to:

- Operate construction machinery or vehicles over any curbs, sidewalk, boulevard, or terrace, except at authorized driveways, unless duly authorized.
- Place or cause to be placed any glass, refuse, bottles, cans, paper, debris, waste or filth on streets, alleys, highways, public parks, other city property, private property owned by someone else, or on the surface of any body of water within the city limits.

The law also says if anyone should violate the provisions and damage or litter any property, the City of Appleton will correct the damage and assess the cost to the offender.

Contractors, including those working on city projects, will be prohibited from cluttering streets with mud or clay from the wheels of trucks and other heavy equipment.

Bues said anyone having questions concerning the ordinances should contact his office at the city hall.

30 to be Invested In St. Joseph Boys' Choir

Thirty boys will be invested into the St. Joseph Catholic Church boys' choir in a special ceremony at 4 p.m. today in the church.

A supper in the school cafeteria for the boys and their families will follow.

The investiture ceremony, conducted by a priest, is a recent church ceremony planned to make choir service more meaningful, according to choir director Francis Scholtz. Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament will follow.

The St. Joseph boys' choir, well-known in the area, is affiliated with the Pueri Cantores ("little singers") of Paris, an international association of boys' choirs. Association members wear white choir robes.

The choir sings Sunday and daily masses and in conjunction with the men's choir for liturgical services.

Seventeen regular members and 13 reserve members will be invested.

Rezoning Hearing Set

Town of Menasha Clerk Announces Three Petitions

MENASHA — Robert Jacobs, clerk for the Town of Menasha, said a public hearing will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the town offices to consider seeking amendments to the Winnebago County zoning ordinances.

Three petitions are asking for rezoning of six parcels of land from residential and agriculture to commercial and industrial.

They include a request for rezoning of lots three and four of block four of the Grove subdivision from residential "A" to commercial "B". The property is owned by J. H. Kolberg and is located on State 47 between Ninth Street and Airport Road.

A petition to rezone from agriculture to commercial "B" by Harry Fredrickson for property north of the Little Butte plat, a parcel east of Wheeler Road and a parcel west and north of U. S. 41 in Section Nine.

The Badger Oil Co. is seeking rezoning from commercial "A" and "B" to industrial property as follows: part of the southwest of the northwest of Section 11, lying easterly of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad except the south 300 feet.

Projects planned for the properties was not revealed.

Also considered at the hearing will be highway setback lines and grades, and revision of already existing ordinances, according to Jacobs.

Impact of Tourist Dollar on Local Economy Is Outlined

Conference Speakers Discuss Ways to Attract Visitors to Area

BY DICK McDANIEL
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

FREMONT — Impact of the tourist dollar on local economy and what is being done to attract more people to the area were outlined at the touristy conference in the Grandview Supper club Thursday.

Prof. Lawrence Montney, University of Wisconsin extension specialist and commerce instructor, told the 52 resort and motel owners, association of commerce represent a t i v e s campground operators and real estate dealers that tourist money affects the entire area.

He said only 27 per cent of the tourist dollar is spent on accommodations and the rest is "spent up and down the business district."

He said everyone benefits by having more tourists in the area. "If you realize it or not, they are helping to build schools," he added.

Develop Plan

The speaker urged every community to develop a five to 10-year plan which would be designed to improve the attraction powers of an area.

He said there are a variety of visitors, from seasonal or summer residents to day vis-

OSC Citizens Council Head Re-Elected

Oshkosh Banker Voted Chairman for Additional Term

OSHKOSH — Members of the Citizens Council of Wisconsin State College-Oshkosh Saturday night re-elected Boyd Jordan, Oshkosh banker, to another year's term as chairman.

Re-elected vice chairman was John C. Miller, Berlin industrialist, while Dr. Charles Goff of the college's political science department, was returned to another year as secretary-treasurer.

The Citizens Council, in the afternoon, heard a panel discussion on "Implications of Halsey Science Center Facilities for Future College Programs" which was led by Dr. R. E. Guiles, college president, Dr. Max Bowman, chemistry department chairman, Dr. Richard Netzel, physics department chairman, and Dr. James Unger, biology department chairman.

A tour of the new science center followed their talks.

Committee Discussions

Council members then divided into committees to discuss alumni association liaison, distinguished civic achievement awards, gifts and grants, legislative matters and membership.

These committees then reported their findings at the Saturday evening supper.

The legislative committee, reported by Judge Lester Burr of Ripon, planned to contact various legislators in the committee members' areas to have them advise about matters affecting the state colleges. One of these matters is the proposal for additional four-year college and two-year college centers in the area now served by Wisconsin State College-Oshkosh.

The committee plans another meeting on May 16 at 10:30 a.m.

Al Broehm, Winneconne, gave the membership committee report which suggested an increase in the number of council members.

Alumni Committee

A paid alumni director and a reunion date, possibly in connection with dedication of the new addition to the Reeve Union, were suggested by the alumni liaison committee.

The gifts and grants committee suggested council members make persons aware of the need for gifts and grants for the college program and the Oshkosh State College foundation program.

The committee indicated it planned to meet in May with a person who is considering donation of his vast library to the college.

George Tipler, Winneconne, in reporting for the distinguished service award committee, said the committee was recommending no award be given this year but deferred until the following year. He outlined the procedure which is being suggested for the award presentation.

itors. "Each contributes to the economic welfare of a community by making purchases," he said.

Tourist money last year amounted to about $4 million income in Waupaca County, $3.6 million in Outagamie County and $7.5 million in Winnebago County.

Gordon Bubolz, Appleton, chairman of the Wolf River Basin Regional Planning Commission, outlined what is being done in the area to have the counties work together for greater appraisals of the water, forest and land uses.

Exchange of Ideas

After mentioning the commission is serving in an advisory capacity, Bubolz said it is giving momentum to counties through an exchange of ideas under a regional program.

He said the commission will recommend compatible land use developments for separate industrial, residential and commercial sites so communities will remain attractive for the next 30 years or more.

The commission, he said, recognizes the need for protecting the sources of water supply by stopping the destruction of swamps, spring heads and forests.

The commission also plans to accelerate the forest effort to have more trees planted where lands are barren.

From an economy point of view, he said, the commission feels there can be no population increases without more job opportunities.

He stressed the need to improve present products and facilities for the general improvement of the region. "The problem is to organize it," he added.

"We have not done enough to sell the opportunities of the Wolf River," he said.

Bubolz said the state wants a regional effort in preserving wildlife habitat. The commission also is attempting to preserve the cultural and historical assets of the region.

He said that for the first time in the history of Wisconsin, the county highway committees in the Wolf River region sat down with state highway department officials to talk about establishing a series of roads which would make the scenic region more accessible to sightseeing drivers.

All of the speakers at the conference contended their recommendations would be of no value unless they are accepted by the people.

If the people want to make a success of the tourist business, the farmer, the merchant, resort owner and neighbor are going to have to work together to keep the area attractive, they said.

An attractive area, however, is not sufficient to hold the interest of the visitor. A little "old time friendliness" like a shake of the hand or a pat on the back can do much to make the visitor feel he is a part of the community, they said.

It would be nice to be metropolitan enough to offer all of the facilities of a tourist area and still be friendly enough to convince the visitor that he will want to return again, they concluded.

'West Side Story' Highlight

Nero's 'Flawless' Performance Captivates Capacity Audience

BY DICK LYNEIS

Just before Peter Nero sat down at the piano in the Lawrence College Chapel Friday night, he said his left hand would play "Tea For Two," his right hand would play Tschalkovsky's "Fifth Symphony," his left foot would tap a Tahitian "fertility dance," and his right foot would just get excited.

The capacity crowd laughed. Then, much to everyone's surprise, he did just what he said he would do. And even more surprising, it sounded good.

Peter Nero was good; in fact, he was flawless. And, if the audience had its way, Nero would still be playing encores.

Nero showed an exciting style and a unique form of musical expression that brought appreciative smiles, toe-tapping and twangs of nostalgia to everyone seated in the Lawrence Chapel. Never before has this writer seen an Appleton audience so completely captivated by a performer in any entertainment medium.

"West Side Story"

It's difficult to pinpoint the highlight of the night, since everything Nero did was so well-received, but it must have been his playing of the score from "West Side Story."

Anyone familiar with the beautiful Leonard Bernstein show felt the piano actually sang the lyrics of "Maria," "Tonight," "One Hand, One Heart" and "I Feel Pretty." And he captured the pulsating terror of a New York gang when he played "Cool."

His warm, soulful touch came through in his playing of "Funeral Valentine," "When the World Was Young" and perhaps more than in any other number, "More in Love," the love theme from the movie "Sunday in New York." Nero composed the musical score for the movie.

In swing numbers, it's difficult not to compare Nero with the great jazz artist from the late 30's and early 40's — Teddy Wilson. This came through, with some excellent bass accompaniment, in "Don't Get Around Much Anymore," by Duke Ellington, and in George Gershwin's "I Got Plenty of Nothin'."

He ran the gamut of piano styles, using classical composers' styles as lead-ins to popular numbers. One of the best was his own composition, "Scratch My Back," and one of the funniest was his "Hurray, Hurray for the CIA," a number he said he did at a one-night stand at the "Bay of Pigs invasion."

He played a thoroughly imaginative and flawless "concerto" based on a popular theme, "The Yellow Rose of Texas." It can be said without doubt that Peter Nero and his trio were a smash hit.

cus — a point to which they do not agree.

Winnebago County Republicans also are questioning whether any district funds should be used in the support of Van Pelt at this time since there is a disagreement as to whether the endorsement by resolution was in order, particularly after a roll call vote had opposed endorsement.

Ahrold Huibretgse of Sheboygan County, Sixth District chairman, at last week's executive committee meeting, indicated each county could decide how it wanted the money spent.

The Winnebago County district attorney has indicated that since the caucus hassle he has been assured of support, mainly as the result of the endorsement dispute. Since that caucus, he said, he has been called upon for numerous speaking engagements.

years of age can be in a place licensed to sell liquor.

However, what the Starlite management neglected was another portion of the statutes that gives the municipal licensing body complete control to regulate the type of businesses. The Town of Fond du Lac Board says the state, Starlite management nor anyone else can circumvent the authority of the town.

Other Cases

There are other places in Wisconsin, including the Fox Cities area, where some tavernkeepers take liquor off the backbar and change their places into minor bars just on Saturdays to attract the teen-age business. However, it is presumed they do this with consent of the local licensing body.

Porath and Costello conferred with their attorneys Saturday afternoon in preparation for the pending legal showdown.

In a bill of particulars as to why it was revoking the club's licenses, the town board stated the Starlite owners had violated the board orders by not ceasing the minor bar operation.

No Agent

Also cited were several allegations concerning State Board of Health orders to the club, traffic and noise problems, and the fact there is no licensed agent on the club premises. Michael Porath, the attorney's brother, was the original agent but moved out of the city.

Last week after the board called this to Porath's attention, David Pappenfuss of North Fond du Lac made application to be licensed agent. His application was not acted on.

Atty. Porath also sent a letter to the town board authorizing several things the corporation intended to do to correct any problems that might exist, including the purchase of additional property for parking. The present lot holds about 40 to 50 cars, according to authorities.

Traffic Complaint

Police say cars are parked in the lot, on nearby private property and along both sides of the highway on Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights and sometimes during the week.

The town board received a petition from 26 property owners in the Starlite Club area objecting to noise and traffic and asking the place be closed.

A special hearing for town residents on whether they still want a policy of having no minor bars in the township has been set for April 27.

"This minor bar controversy has more city and town people interested than when we had the $6 million annexation dispute," Costello says. Recently, the Town of Fond du Lac beat the City of Fond du Lac in the Supreme Court and won back three industries and considerable land the city had annexed.

Costello and board members agree young people should have a place to go but the town had unfortunate experiences with a few minor bars about five years ago.

Although there have been no complaints about the operation of the club, which has a rule that patrons must be in "dress up" attire, there have been problems outside the establishment. The club hires two deputies for inside.

Porath's corporation purchased the Starlite Club on a land contract paying $10,000 down on the $55,000 asking price. It is required to pay $500 on a month on the contract.

Porath's group intends to defend the club in the courts, and the town board is equally determined on "fighting it out."

In Spite of Crises, Spats, Reverses, Khrushchev Remains in Full Power

BY PRESTON GROVER

MOSCOW (AP) — Nikita S. Khrushchev reaches his 70th birthday Thursday still the dominant figure of the Soviet Union. Problems at home and abroad besiege him but he acts as if hardly a cloud troubles him in the approaching winter of his life.

Three weeks before his birthday, he gaily boarded a train, his wife Nina beside him, to join in an anniversary celebration of a wartime victory in Budapest and to deal with the conflict with Communist China for world party leadership.

The China problem was blown to fever heat with the publication of a reply drafted by Khrushchev's ideological spokesman, Mikhail Suslov. This had been held up six weeks while party leaders decided whether to publish it.

It was largely a defensive declaration but proposed, clearly over much opposition in the Communist camp, a showdown meeting of Communist parties of the world. This conflict with China carries far more potential dynamite, both for Russia and the world Communist movement, than the West faces in the peculiar conflict between the United States and De Gaulle's France.

Other Troubles
Khrushchev has other troubles, such as agriculture, the nagging problem of Soviet treatment of Jews and some unhappy Armenians, his own writers and painters, a labor slowdown. These discolor the picture he would like to paint for the world about the good life under communism.

There are more whisperings of discontent than there were even a year ago. In the past year, the Chinese crisis has grown worse, and the near-failure of the wheat crop turned a glaring spotlight on the agricultural program he has managed almost on a personal basis for 11 years.

Not in a number of years have more disagreeable persons al jokes circulated about him—by Russians, not by foreigners.

Production
Despite the criticism of his agricultural policies, Khrushchev can always say—and he does say it—that production is ahead of 10 years ago. But it is not as far ahead as it ought to be. Khrushchev's bright forecasts have bounced back.

It is almost impossible to buy flour in Moscow, a favored city. While Khrushchev is older than most of his associates, he is still by far the most dynamic governmental figure in the Soviet Union, and perhaps in the world. He has been in power, or at the side of power, longer than any living leader of a top-level nation. His rival for Communist influence, Mao Tse-tung, has shaken off most of his governmental duties. Since 1957, Khrushchev has been pretty much the undisputed boss in the Soviet Union, both government and party.

Many Crises
Western diplomats often comment that any Western executive with as many successive crises would surely be shaken out of his job. In addition to the China crisis, there is the Cuba affair of the rockets, which boiled over in October-November of 1962.

The year 1962-63 saw the artists and writers crisis that had to be quieted by the sternest kind of orders—so stern that many artists and writers are largely out of action, or working under cover.

Industrial production continues to grow, but at a slowing pace.

Crop Failure
Hardest to bear was the crop crisis. About one million tons of wheat had to be bought, part of it from the overflowing bins of the American Middle West, which Khrushchev has so often said he would leave behind.

That has drained hundreds of millions of dollars in gold and foreign exchange out of Soviet coffers, which are not overloaded with money.

Foreign businessmen and businessmen who have seen him lately marvel at his calm. There are debates in the party councils. The wavering course of agricultural and industrial policy has demonstrated the faulting and hauling first of one faction, then another. Reports trickle out that the debate over China has been difficult, perhaps acrid.

No Challenge
Yet Khrushchev conducts himself in public with the ease of a man who acknowledged no worth in any enemy, and no challenge to his own power. On

Power, Light Company Asks to Abandon Dam

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
MADISON — Abandonment of its Madison Falls dam across the Embarras River in the town of Pella, Shawano County, has been proposed by the Wisconsin Power and Light Co. of Madison.

The Public Service Commission will hold a hearing at the courthouse in Shawano Thursday to determine whether public interest will support the proposal.

PSC Okays Enlarging Winnebago Channel

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
MADISON — The Public Service Commission has authorized the enlargement of a channel connecting with Lake Winnebago in the Town of Winnebago, Winnebago County.

The permit was granted to Richard A. Paulsen, guardian for the owner of the lands involved, who proposes to develop the property for real estate that will have lake access.

any stage others seem colorless beside him.

He has mapped out a program that would tax a much younger man. He is going to Cairo to face the blazing heat of the deserts in May while he helps inaugurate the first stage of the Aswan Dam. In June he tours the three Scandinavian countries.

He looks after himself more than he did. He takes long rests. He likes Moscow when it is biting cold. When it begins to get slushy, he wants none of it. He goes to the Black Sea in the late winter and early spring.

Lost Weight
He has trimmed his diet and has lost weight. Eight years ago he admitted he was having kidney trouble. He was a heavy drinking man in those days. Now he nurses a glass of champagne through a two-hour reception.

He has seen a lot in his time, from the coal mines to the highest level of diplomatic exchange at summit conferences. He came up the tough way. The guess is he won't fade away. No one can say whether he will die quietly in bed or in the heat of political battle.

Suit Filed Against Sheriff for Damages

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP)—Homer Lee Castleberry, 46, of McAlester, Okla., filed a suit for $50,000 damages in District Court Thursday against Sheriff Vernon L. Robinson, the Shawnee County Commissioners and the sheriff's bonding agency.

During 37 days in jail, Castleberry alleges, he was denied the right of talking to an attorney and of making bail.

He finally was arraigned March 12 on charges of burglary and larceny and forgery. Castleberry was released under $1,000 bond.

Fallen Leaders Form World's Oddest Club

Goulart Joining Rest of Deposed Rulers in Exile

BY FRED GOLDEN

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—When Brazil's ousted President Joao Goulart flew to neighboring Uruguay he joined one of the world's most unusual clubs. It elects no officers and never meets. Although fashionably exclusive, most of its members would rather not belong.

It is made up of national leaders tumbled unwillingly from power and cast into exile. The roster includes kings, presidents, prime ministers and even an emperor.

What do these men do after the acclaim dies down? Do they dream of the day when their nations will recall them?

Peron Dreams
Juan Domingo Peron still cherishes the dream, even though he has been a political refugee since Argentina turned its back on his dictatorship nine years ago.

A resident of Spain, Peron, 68, says, "I am very happy here, but I will never give up hope of returning some day to Argentina."

Peron remains undisturbed by Argentina's recent effort to extradite him on criminal charges, confident that Spain will reject the request.

The man driven out of Cuba by Fidel Castro lives in neighboring Portugal in exclusive Estoril, home of many royal and political exiles. Cuba's ex-president Fulgencio Batista, 61, disdains social activities of the posh European playground, but has become a great tourist. He emerges often from his guarded villa for car trips to Spain. At home he writes profusely to justify his much-criticized regime but refrains from public pronouncements, on orders from the Portuguese government.

Italy's former King Umberto lives in almost regal splendor in a great mansion in Cascas, another Lisbon suburb. His "Villa Italia" is set in a pine grove and has a fine library in which Umberto reads history. His wealth enables him to maintain a large household, including his personal physician, Count Aldo Castellano, who runs a clinic with the monarch's support for Cascas' poor fishermen.

Umberto's friends describe him as a lonely man. His wife, former Princess Marie Jose, lives in Switzerland, and his son and three daughters are rarely with him.

Farouk's Exile
Egypt's ex-King Farouk seeks solace in exile by drifting among the resorts of France, Italy and Switzerland, but diminished funds and perhaps boredom have curtailed his free-spending habits.

Still fat and now 44, the monarch of the Nile sank into almost complete obscurity 12 years after his flight.

Farouk drifts almost unnoticed from an apartment in Rome to an apartment in Naples, hometown of aspiring opera singer Irma Capece Min-otolo, his companion for the past decade. He also visits his son, Ahmed Faud, 12, at a Swiss boarding school.

Isolated Naguib
Maj. Gen. Mohamed Naguib, who became a victim of the Egyptian revolution he helped create, was once sentenced to death by his old associates but has been allowed to live in "permanent isolation" under guard at a suburban Cairo villa.

With speckled gray hair and a kindly smile, Naguib, 63, is still regarded with nostalgic affection by many Egyptians. He was their first president after Farouk was driven out of Egypt.

By title, Bao Dai, Viet Nam's former emperor, must be considered the ranking member of the exiles' club. Once noted for his playboy ways, Bao Dai now lives quietly in France, avoids the public eye and refuses to make any statements about the war in his homeland. He seems to have plenty of money.

Arrested U Nu
Burma's ousted prime minister, U Nu, lives under arrest in a military rest camp 25 miles from Rangoon at the order of Gen. Ne Win, who deposed him in 1962. He is 54 and a deeply religious Buddhist.

Syngman Rhee, once one of the strongest of Asian leaders, is too ill to carry out his wish to return to South Korea. He has been in a self-imposed exile in Hawaii since he was toppled from the presidency in 1960. He is 89.

Plans for Freeway Through Forest Cause for Protests

EUREKA, Calif. (AP)—Plans for a four-lane freeway through a redwoods state park have touched off a nationwide protest. "There's no doubt this is a nationwide issue. We're being deluged with letters and newspaper editorials to 'save our redwoods.'"

"And they're coming from all over the country," Sam Helwer, division of highways engineer, said Thursday.

The division plans a freeway through Prairie Creek Redwoods State Park, about 20 miles north of Eureka.

Ike Calls Brother Good Man for Presidency

NEW YORK (AP) — "The best qualified man to be president of the United States," says former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, is his brother Milton.

But, Eisenhower added, his brother "is not seeking the job and the presidency is something I wouldn't wish on him."

Eisenhower's remarks were reported Thursday night on the "Huntley-Brinkley Report," a television news show.

Dr. Milton Eisenhower is president of Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore.

These Men, Once the Leaders of Nations, have a common bond. They have all been thrown out of office and cast into exile. They are: King Farouk of Egypt; Joao Goulart of Brazil; Fulgencio Batista of Cuba; U Nu of Burma; Mohamed Naguib of Egypt; Bao Dai of Viet Nam; Juan Peron of Argentina and King Umberto of Italy. Urge Sewer Hookup at Stockbridge

Utility Commission Claims Connecting Early Saves Costs

STOCKBRIDGE — Village residents are being urged by the utility commission to connect their homes with new sewer mains before June 1.
Reasons for the early hookup would be a saving in sewage service charge from now to June 1. Billing will begin July 1 for the previous month.
If residents hook up now, no charge will be made for service until that date, Mrs. Elizabeth Fisher, commission member said.

The official deadline for connecting has been set for Sept. 1. Engineer Robert E. Lee, Green Bay, has assured the commission that the plant is ready for operation.
Already Connected
A few homes have already connected and are utilizing the sewage treatment service, Mrs. Fisher said.
Storage Facilities
Storage facilities at the plant are presently being filled and when capacity has been reached, the treatment plant will be put into operation, Mrs. Fisher said.
The schedule of charges set by the village board before the start of construction will be used, Mrs. Fisher said there may be some adjustments when the plant goes into operation Sept. 1. Changes would be made by the commission.

At present the charge for a one-family household is $6 per month and $9 per month for a two-family household. Special rates also have been established for commercial subscribers.

BY TOM RICHARDS

The other night we dropped in at a meeting of the Fox Valley Cliche Collectors (FVCC) just to see what goes on.

"I'll be very frank with you . . ." one fellow was heard to say. He was interrupted by another who said, "We are grown people. Certainly we can sit down and talk about this like adults."

Off in another corner, someone was saying something like, "A stitch in time can save our Sunday punch."

Then there was a rap of a gavel, and the chairman said, "Let's get this show on the road. You know, a rolling stone gathers no moss. He who hesitates is lost. . ."

His voice was drowned out by cheers of the members. We know why. Finally, the cheering died down.

"We've got a good thing going for us here," he said. "Just as sure as God made little green apples."

I couldn't resist. Raising my hand, I said, "Mr. Chairman, is that the whole ball of wax?"

"Seize him," shouted the chairman. "Our rules strictly forbid Madison Avenue cliches. Throw him out."

"It takes one to know one," I shouted as I was sent tumbling out into the street.

Teen of the Week This 'Preacher's Kid' Is Truly Useful Contributor to Society

BY HENRY SIMON

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

"Doctors' kids are good to get their ills cured for nothing; dentists' kids are good to get their teeth fixed for nothing; and preachers' kids are good for nothing."

There probably were some rambunctious "Preacher's Kids" in the home church of the sage who penned this proverb, but the seer might have expressed a different view of "PK's" if he had met Miss Jane Pankow of Fox Valley Lutheran High School.

Jane, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Walter C. Pankow, 203 East Quincy, New London, is "good" for quite a few things, members of her senior class at FVL will tell you.

For instance, students at Lutheran High thought enough of the personable brunette to elect her homecoming queen for last fall's festivities. It was the second year that Jane had served on the court, as she was chosen princess by the Class of 1964 in her sophomore year.

Council Treasurer

Then there's Jane's job as treasurer of the FVL Student Council. The New London miss has been a member of the Lutheran High governing body for the past three years.

Jane has also put her musical talents to good use. She has played in the FVL Band, of which she is currently secretary, for three years and sandwiched in between them a year of singing in the Concert Choir during her sophomore year.

The "PK" sings in her church choir at Emanuel Evangelical Lutheran Church, New London; takes piano lessons, and enjoys listening to and collecting stereo phonograph records.

Jane also served as class treasurer during her freshman year, homeroom secretary as a sophomore, and class secretary in her junior year.

The favorite extracurricular activity of Jane is writing for the "Carrousel," Lutheran High School student newspaper. Last year she served as copy-reader and this year doubles as a staff writer and head morgue librarian.

Although she enjoys all her classes, her favorites are College Preparatory English IV and German II. Naturally enough, she enjoys English composition most.

Listing iceskating and tennis as her favorite sports, the sports-minded senior has spent two years in the FVL Judo Club and three years in the girls' intramural bowling league. Jane served as treasurer of the Lutheran High Pep Club in her soph' year and secretary last year, but does not hold an office this year because of her position in Student Council.

Future Teacher

A member of the Future Teachers Club for four years, Jane filled the post of vice president. She also has been accepted at Milwaukee Lutheran Teachers College for next year's term.

Besides her activity at school, Jane also finds time to dabble in numerous hobbies. These include Sunday School teaching, sewing, knitting, flower arranging, sketching and painting. She enjoys making knick-knack decorations as gifts for other people, and also has started art lessons.

Jane writes to a pen pal in Fukuoka City, Japan, and would love to travel.

How does the senior feel about being a PK? She realizes that she has to live up to expectations of others, but is "sincerely thankful" and considers her position a blessing and privilege.

She cites the advantages of a sound Christian training, well-rounded education, close family ties, the opportunity to help in church organizations, and the opportunity to meet many types of people.

For Jane Pankow, being a "preacher's kid" is good for a great deal more than nothing.

Fox Cities Farmers In a Modern World

Post-Crescent Farm Editor

One day a few weeks ago Wilmer Petit looked out over his land and he didn't like what he saw.

A dry March wind was blowing away some of his fertile though sandy Waupaca County topsoil. The superfine granules, propelled by arid winds, sift through everything. They find their way through invisible cracks. They grate underfoot on clean tile kitchen floors and they grate on the nerves of men who work the land.

Petit didn't like seeing the soil he painstakingly nursed back to health with more than two decades of hard work swirling off into the next county. But he is a diligent custodian of the soil and his 280 acres of rural Fremont farmland will not fare too badly, unless conditions deteriorate drastically.

Arid Wind

The same arid wind was blowing across a 69-acre farm five miles down the road. It buffeted a faded sign announcing "Fresh Eggs For Sale" and sent the signboard rattling on its mailbox post hinges. But this farm owner, Harvey Hartfiel, the man who sells fresh eggs to Fremont villagers, wasn't concerned. And for two reasons. The wind wasn't abrading his red clay soil: but even more important, Harvey Hartfiel isn't the "worrying kind."

Hartfiel and Petit have common ground. They are in the same general age group. Hartfiel, 49, and Petit, 42; both have teenage sons; both live in rural Fremont, and both look to the land for their livelihood.

The latter is the paradox.

Their approaches to agriculture point in opposite directions.

Amiable, ruddy complexioned, with a thick shock of chestnut brown hair, Hartfiel farms the way his father did, and apparently wouldn't have it any other way.

His farm implements are powered by genuine horsepower, a beloved team of greys. His farm buildings lean a little but will weather many more storms. His 19 Holstein milk cows are about all his 69 acres will keep in feed, he says, and he has little hope of acquiring more land to change his operation. "There just isn't any for sale in the neighborhood," he explained.

Seeks Expansion

Petit has a big farm and is still looking for ways to expand. To him farming is more than a livelihood, it is a keenly competitive business and he strives constantly to stay ahead of the competition.

He bought his first 96 acres of farmland in 1941.

Harvey Hartfield and Skippy Are Inseparable

This is the business end of the automatic "chow line" on the Wilmer Petit farm. He usually keeps about 125 head of dairy cattle, the majority of which are yard-fed by a bunk system.

Skippy, Harvey Hartfiel's faithful collie, keeps an eye on cattle roaming loose in the barn. Hartfiel keeps a herd of some 19 head of Holsteins, about all his 69-acre farm can support.

Fox Cities Farmer In a Modern World

The soil was dry and listless, sapped of its moisture and productive vitality by a long period of misuse, and now erosion by wind and water was eating away at the top soil that remained.

The big acreage, the productive 80-head milking herd, the fleet of modern machines and equipment did not come overnight for Petit.

A New London area native, Petit and his young wife bought their first 96 acres with borrowed money in 1941. Ramshackle buildings and run down soil confronted the couple.

"I couldn't raise a good crop for the first four or five years," he said. He told of having to buy extra feed to sustain a meager herd of 14 milk cows during those first bleak years.

Ineffectual Battle

He wanted to improve the land but, at the time, didn't quite know how to go about it. Petit recalled waging an aimless and ineffectual battle with the sickly soil and with weather that seemed either too wet or too dry.

Attempts to nourish the starved soil with commercial fertilizers and generous applications of barnyard manure met with only limited success at the outset. This he attributes to lack of knowledge.

"I didn't know much about soil testing and modern fertilizers and as a result, I wasted a few years." His early efforts, he says, were sometimes successful and sometimes misguided.

During those first nine years of farming, things picked up gradually for the Petits. They still had 96 acres of land, more productive than it had ever been, and they were investing some money in remodeling the old barn.

Then in 1950, the tornado hit. It leveled every building on the place but the house.

The misfortune seems, in retrospect, to have been the catalyst to success.

They rebuilt but it was a modern farm building complex—a new barn, three silos and a shed. Petit was an area pioneer in green chopping of forage, getting the herd off the pasture and feeding them in a yard. He was ahead of his times, and frankly admits that other farmers now have better bunk feeding systems, but only because he had his so long ago that what was new then is now old.

Stainless steel and chrome glisten in the milkhouse at Petit's main farm, where his milking herd is housed. Milk is carried from the milker units in the barn to the stainless steel storage tank by a system of more than 200 feet of glass piping. It winds up in a new $4,000 bulk cooler before being hauled off to a Fox Cities dairy processing plant.

Once the rebuilding hurdle had been cleared, Petit took a long, hard look at his farming operation and decided that as long as he was milking 30 cows he might as well milk 60. It didn't take much more equipment and only a little more time.

Added Land

To support more cows, he needed more land. He bought one neighboring farm in 1953 or 1954, he doesn't remember which, and another in 1958, swelling his land holdings to 280 acres. He manages to rent a few more acres whenever possible.

"Things really started to roll after the tornado," Petit recalls. He took advantage of every educational program that the extension service had to offer, sought help from the Soil Conservation Service (SCS) and from the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

He limed his land and after ACP soil tests told him the most beneficial formula, inaugurated a non-organic fertilization program that he claims boosted his land's productivity.

Petit waged war on erosion with a 1,500 foot system of waterways to cut soil loss to water runoff and employs cover crops or an organic cover on the sandy soil to reduce losses to the winds. The open winter this year is something he hadn't bargained for. A snow cover and the resultant moisture had

Wilmer Petit flips a switch to feed his huge herd. Silage, removed from storage by an automatic silo unloader, skids down a chute into an auger conveyor and out to the barnyard bunk feeder.

Silage feeding on the Hartfiel farm takes on a different approach. Hartfiel's son, Edmund, uses a metal basket to lug the fodder from the silo and dump it into the small barn's feed manger.

Fox Cities Farmer In a Modern World

been counted on to keep the soil in place during early spring but the snow was ill-timed. It came too late, leaving the soil exposed for months.

Lost Topsoil

Wind whipped away some topsoil from a field or two in early March but it was nothing compared with the sandstorm he experienced in 1950, the year of the tornado. "For three days the wind howled and you couldn't see 50 feet," Petit said.

When it was over, sand had drifted like snow, two feet deep along fence lines, bushes or anything that would catch it.

Now Petit has 75 or 80 milk cows, about 50 head of heifers and some beef cattle. When he has corn left over, he buys young pigs and feeds them to market weight. Last year he had more than 50 hogs, but dairying is his specialty and he intends to concentrate on it. Hay and corn are the essential crops to dairying, and Petit has eyes for none other. If he had the acreage, he would raise corn as a cash crop, but now it all goes back into the dairy cattle.

He was a pioneer in hay silage and a few years ago showed how he could easily feed 80 head of milk cows on 200 acres where he was once unable to feed 20 head on 100 acres.

Petit has six tractors. Harvey Hartfiel has one, and it is a small one. Its only purpose is to handle the heavy land tilling work on the red clay farm just east of Fremont.

Horses, the two greys, do the rest. "I've got all horse-drawn machinery, except for the plows and harrows," Hartfiel said.

Loves Animals

Hartfiel frankly confesses he loves animals in general and horses in particular. A rich coated collie, Skippy, is a prominent member of the household.

"I raised those greys from colt on. We, my brother and I, used to ride them bareback when we were young," Hartfiel said. Later he harness-broke the team and they have been his faithful servants ever since.

The small tractor parked in the shed is only the second on the Hartfiel farm. Before that it was strictly a horse farming operation. Mechanization is too impersonal, Hartfiel feels. "You can't talk to a tractor," he observed.

Hartfiel has no intentions of changing his "horse farming" methods, and his major concern now is finding replacement animals for his aging team. "A fellow from Marion promised me a team of colts

The curious collie eyes the camera while Edward Hartfiel feeds a young calf. The dog is important on a farm like Hartfiel's, saving the farmer many steps.

Splinters were about all that remained of Petit's newly remodeled barn after the tornado struck in 1950. The young Woupaca County farmer refused to let the setback hold him down. He built a new and bigger barn, expanded his dairying operation and was soon buying more land to feed his growing herd. Looking back, Petit feels that his farming "really started to roll" after the disaster.

a while ago but I haven't heard from him since," Hartfiel said. Draft horses are scarce.

The team from Marion were to have been four-year-olds and broken, but if they weren't, it would be no problem. Hartfiel enjoys harness breaking a team.

He is no agricultural specialist. His farming operation, he says, has "a little bit of everything."

There are the 19 Holstein milk cows, a flock of chickens which entice a steady flow of fresh egg customers from nearby Fremont, four brood sows and some cash crops.

Farming Philosophy

"If you don't make any money on one thing, you make a little on another," is his professed farming philosophy.

Three of the four sows are Hartfiel's and the other he has given to his son, Billy, 16. The boy cares for the animal and is allowed to keep the proceeds from sale of its litters.

Hartfiel is an organic farmer. He doesn't believe in the concentrated commercial plant foods and soil nutrients, and none has ever touched the soil of his farm. "I've still got my first pound of fertilizer to buy. Give me good barnyard manure any time and I'll raise a good crop," he said, and supported his viewpoint by citing some impressive small grain yields.

The grain is cut, shocked and bundle threshed, not combined. He and a neighbor, Len Klein, own a threshing machine Klein doesn't own a grain binder so Hartfiel cuts his neighbor's cut for him.

They still shock their grain in the old tradition.

When hay making season rolls around, there are no choppers or balers rolling over the neat windrows. Hartfiel puts up loose hay and doesn't even use slings to unload the hay. His hay is still plucked off the wagon with a horse-pulled hay fork.

Barn fires are the result of putting up hay when it is too green or young, Hartfiel says.

He doesn't follow the trend of cutting hay early to get three or possibly even more crops and his cows still roam over the pastures. He cuts hay when his alfalfa is in bloom.

Corn gets the same treatment. He frequently lets his crop stand until ripe, then snaps out the ears and cuts the stalks into silage, a practice unheard of in the latest forage handling systems.

Milker Installed

It has not been too many years that the Hartfiel herd was milked by hand. He had a milker installed three years ago. Hartfiel is one of the few farmers in the area not taking advantage of commercial milk truckers. He still carts his milk off to the nearby cheese factory in a small pickup truck.

At the Petit farm a big bulk tank truck rolls in daily to haul away the day's milk yield.

Hartfiel has nothing against modern farming, but he professes no particular desire to become a part of it. His farm is small, and 10 acres of this is

Former Peninsula Players Actress Wins Role in Broadway 'Marathon'

BY WILLIAM WOLF

NEW YORK—Did someone say it was a small world?

Look what happened to actress Pat Randall, who was known last summer for her performances with the Peninsula Players at Fish Creek.

Theatergoers may remember the performance she gave in the leading role of "A Shot in the Dark." The same part was created on Broadway previously by none other than star Julie Harris.

On arriving back in New York this season, Pat was tapped for her first Broadway show, "Marathon '33," written by June Havoc about those gruelling dance marathons of the 1930s. Coincidentally, Julie Harris was with the show as the star.

With unusual modesty for a profession in which tooting one's own horn is accepted, Pat still hasn't told the noted actress that she had done her role in Wisconsin.

Pat, who hails from North Carolina, now looks back on her summer season with great nostalgia. Almost sheepishly, she confesses that she cried when she left.

Why? Performers frequently regard summer shows as something they just do to mark time between trying to make it big on Broadway. But Pat says:

"I loved the country. It was just marvelous—like a vacation to me. And the people were all so wonderful to work with, so responsive."

Then, of course, there were all those varied parts, as Peggy in "Come Blow Your Horn," Sally in "Take Her, She's Mine," and a variety of roles in "Sunday in New York."

Pat is a woman with diverse ability. In addition to acting, she has been an airline stewardess and has played pro and semi-pro softball in Virginia, where she completed high school.

Getting into the Actor's Studio production gave her a chance to ensemble acting that produced what many called one of the most realistic productions Broadway has ever seen.

Those who didn't live through the period of the dance marathons in the depression find it hard to believe that people could have danced for months at a time with only brief rest periods at intervals during the day. They did it to make some money so hard to come by on those lean years.

Endurance Bouts

At the ANTA Theater, the performers, including Pat, managed to re-create the flavor of those long endurance bouts with such fervor that many theatergoers remarked that they felt like they had been through the marathon themselves.

There were some rave reviews, but others less than enthusiastic. In the present Broadway economy, a show usually has to be a smash hit or it can't survive too long. The dedicated cast of "Marathon '33" found tremendous audience response. So Pat and the others paraded around New York in costume to spread the word and hope for the best.

And even if the show didn't turn out to have a marathon run itself, for Pat it meant the first opening on Broadway. And although an actress may star in Julie Harris' part, it isn't every day one gets a chance to work with her.

Fox Cities Farmers Differ on Methods

in comparatively useless marshland. There is little hope of acquiring the kind of acreage necessary to make mechanized farming practical and economically feasible.

Even if there were more land available, Hartfiel has no burning desire to acquire more. He likes his way of farming, and doesn't want to change. "To farm the way the county agent wants you to takes money," he said.

He likes handling his team of horses, wrestling with the tangled "ropes" of rolled loose hay, his well-trained herd dog and the fresh egg buyer "company" his flock of leghorns attract.

Petit and Hartfiel are neighbors and colleagues, but they cope with life in different ways. Petit attacks his problems by seeking solutions, and his rewards are apparent. Hartfiel has learned to live with problems and at this facet of life he too is an obvious success.

Pajama Party Favorites

Teen-agers are busy once more on themes, outside reading and other academic chores in a last lap toward June grades. But with the first real warm day, the perennial spring fever will start with its call to the outdoors and for parties. Young people will long for good old-fashioned gabfests, an afternoon outdoor safari topped with an informal supper at someone's house or that teen-age favorite . . . the pajama party at the home of one of the gang.

These get-togethers will help make springtime sparkle and the long road to semester's end will seem shorter with a party along the way to break it up. The wise parent will favor the work week with the weekend free for relaxation, adventures and partying. And one of the best ways to start the spring season off socially is the pajama overnight . . . for Johnny and all his pals or Susy and her girl chums.

The cardinal rule of any teen-age get-together . . . whether it's an evening or overnight party . . . is to serve lots of food at frequent intervals. And here's where our recipes for today come in handy.

Raisin Bread Bundles are a new way to serve frankfurters and mustard . . . rolled up in raisin bread slices and wrapped with bacon, then baked to a golden crispness. These are perfect for suppers with beans served in individual pots. The Pizza pie is made from biscuit dough and topped first with a savory tomato sauce to which browned ground beef has been added and then grated Mozzarella cheese. Serve these piping hot with favorite soft drinks and a bowl full of fresh fruit. . .

Hamburger Pizza Pies

$\frac{1}{2}$ pound sliced mushrooms
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup minced onion
 3 tablespoons butter
 $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon Tabasco sauce
 8 ounces canned tomato sauce

8 ounces canned tomato paste
 $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon oregano
 $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon salt
 $1\frac{1}{2}$ pounds ground chuck
 $\frac{1}{2}$ pound Mozzarella cheese, grated

1 pkg active dry yeast
 $\frac{3}{4}$ cup warm water

2 $\frac{1}{2}$ cups biscuit mix

To make pizza topping: Saute mushrooms and onion in butter until tender but not brown. Add Tabasco, tomato sauce, tomato paste, oregano and salt. Brown ground meat in heavy skillet; add to tomato mixture. Arrange one-quarter of cheese on top of each round of two 12-inch pizzas in dough form. Spread with tomato and meat mixture, dividing evenly between two pizzas. Top with remaining cheese. Bake in 450-degree oven 15 to 20 minutes or until dough is golden brown.

To make the pizza dough: Dissolve yeast in warm water, add biscuit mix and beat vigorously. Turn dough onto surface that's well dusted with biscuit mix. Knead until smooth, about 20 times. Divide dough into two portions; roll each part into 12-inch circle to fit ungreased pizza pans. Recipe makes two pizzas.

Quick Individual Pizzas

Individual pizzas may be preferred for young fry eating and there are many variations from good old fashioned toast points to oversized biscuits made from mix. One variation enjoyed at our house for occasional Sunday night suppers is the use of English muffins. These make excellent bases for the pizza filling and they become toasty brown in the oven while the above topping is cooking. Canned rolls from those refrigerated cases also make fine pizza bases; if these are used, flatten a bit with a floured rolling pin to make large and thin individual pizza crusts. They are delicious.

Raisin Bread Supper Bundles

8 slices lean bacon
 8 frankfurters
 Boiling water

8 slices raisin bread
 $\frac{1}{3}$ cup pickle relish
 2 tablespoons prepared mustard

Arrange bacon in shallow pan. Precook in 375-degree oven until bacon begins to cook but not brown, about five minutes. Remove and drain. Pour boiling water over frankfurters; let stand five minutes, then drain.

Mix pickle relish and prepared mustard together; spread mixture on raisin bread slices. Place frankfurter in center of each slice. Bring two sides of bread together; wrap in bacon strip; skewer bacon in place and keep sandwich roll closed with wooden pick. Place these bundles on rack in shallow pan. Bake in 375-degree oven about 10 minutes or until bacon begins to crisp. Turn rolls once while cooking. Serve hot. Recipe makes four to eight servings, depending on appetites.

hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

What can be done with old warped 78 RPM records? They are so scratched they are no good as is.

DEAR M.M.

These records make darling little wall vases or patio vases or containers for potted plants. Here's how:

Bring a big pot of water to the boiling point. Dip your old record in the water and leave it for a minute or two until it becomes soft. Remove from the pan and place on the drainboard.

While it's still warm and pliable, you can fold each side over like an ice-cream cone and hold until slightly cool. (If it's too hot, use pliers). When dry, it may be painted.

By inserting a small bottle and plugging some ivy in it you have a darling wall vase. The little hole in the back will serve for the hanger. Place on a nail. These are most attractive in groups of three.

Records may also be molded over a shallow pan to make a flat shallow planter for cactus and small house plants.

The little hole will serve as a drain for the plant.

Old records also make adorable little window boxes for parsley. And did you know that bird seed will grow? I don't know who would eat it, but then we don't eat flowers either!

Fill the container with earth, sprinkle bird seed on top of it, scratch the dirt gently with a fork, add a little water, and in a short time you will have a beautiful miniature garden. Children love to watch it grow. Little dolls and glass animals may be inserted in the garden to make a most attractive scene.

EASY COOKING OIL

DEAR HELOISE: When I buy a bottle of vegetable oil I pour it into a soft plastic dispenser such as used for mustard and catsup. The oil pours just beautifully, and I get the right amount I need every time.

YARN DEPARTMENT

DEAR HELOISE: I discovered that when knitting or crocheting with light yarn, a dark skirt gives contrast and allows me to see the stitches easier.

Consequently I made a reversible "knitting" apron. One side is made of dark material, so when I work with light yarns it is easy to see the stitches.

The other side is light-colored, so when I work with dark yarns they are easy to see, also.

I sewed large pockets on both sides of this apron. These pockets hold my yarn while knitting and also serve as a knitting bag!

When through knitting, I just hang the apron up, and all the paraphernalia is in one place.

FOR BABY'S BATH

DEAR HELOISE: I keep my baby's plastic-lined bibs and panties soft and pliable by putting them in an old, damp pillowcase after they have been washed. I close the pillowcase with a big safety pin and throw the whole kit and kaboodle, right along with the other clothes, into my dryer.

Before the clothes are completely dry I remove this filled pillowcase, and the plastic on my baby's clothing is soft and pliable again.

CLEANS SCREENS

DEAR HELOISE: It is quite well known that a cup of kerosene per gallon of warm water is excellent for washing windows. You can use the same method on the window screens! Especially if you live near salt water. We find this puts a protective coating on our screens and prevents rust.

SILVERWARE CARE

DEAR HELOISE: A one-quart-size plastic bottle, such as bleach comes in, can be a wonderful timesaver when washing silverware the old-fashioned way.

Cut off the top part of the bottle, leaving a six or seven-inch container. Poke the bottom full of holes with an ice pick or scissor point.

When you wash and rinse your silverware, stand it upright in this container and pour scalding water over it all, and it will drain and dry in minutes.

Also, for the next meal, you can bring the silverware to the table in the same container while you set the table. For picnics take your silverware along in the container and set it right on the table.

FLAT BACON

When I have bacon and pancakes for breakfast I have found that I can roll up a few slices of bacon and use them as a "pad" to grease my grill before I put the pancake batter on it. This will not burn your hands.

Then I unroll the pieces of bacon and lay them in a separate skillet and fry them.

The little heat that is absorbed into the bacon strips melts the bacon thoroughly so that it lies flat in the frying pan.

DRY-MOP WINDOWS

DEAR HELOISE: My home has large picture windows about 10 feet high. To dust these, I simply use a long-handled dry dust mop—the type one uses to dry-mop floors.

To clean the windows I use a window spray and then dry-mop them. Presto! my windows are sparkling... finished in nothing flat.

X. Y. Z.

CORDUROY LINT

DEAR HELOISE: For women who wash black corduroy trousers and have trouble keeping lint off them in the washing machine:

Wash the trousers inside out after you have closed the end of each leg and the waist with heavy rubber bands. I do this with all my boys' school trousers. They never have any lint on them.

'Passenger Pigeon' Publication Full of New Material About Birds

BY CLARA HUSSONG

My "Passenger Pigeon" came in the mail this noon, and I've spent the whole afternoon reading it. It's full of new and interesting material about birds. The magazine is the quarterly publication of the Wisconsin Society for Ornithology.

Fran and Fred Hammerstrom of Plainfield report on the range of the red-bellied woodpecker in Wisconsin. Their report is based on information sent them by 128 cooperators from 51 counties.

This bird, with the neo-red head and nape, and the "zebra" striped back, has now spread to such northern counties, as Door, Marinette, Oconto, Vilas, Lincoln and Marathon. It is found in Kewaunee, Brown, Menominee, Shawano and Outagamie Counties too, but not as a nesting bird. The nearest county with a nesting record is Waupaca.

Killed in Nest

In a letter to the editor in the same issue Mrs. Helen Caldwell of Grantsburg tells of the killing of four young catbirds in their nest along a roadside. In late June a spraying machine came along to spray the bushes at the sides of the road. In a week the young birds were dead in their nests, evidently from eating sprayed insects.

Two pictures of cliff swallows are included in the magazine. These birds, uncommon in this area, formerly built their colony nests on cliffs, but now they are packed closely together on the outside of barns and other farm buildings. Hundreds of nests are shown below the eaves of one barn (no mention of where this Wisconsin Conservation Dept.

picture was taken), and in this colony it is believed that there are over a thousand birds. The nests are made of mud, with a narrow neck at the side of the "cup" for the opening.

A summary of the May Bird Counts of 1963 is included. Green Bay and Racine were tied for first place in the number of species seen, 157. Milwaukee was next with 153. Appleton had 135 species; Antigo, 62, and Clintonville, 59.

Bird of Plains

A long-billed curlew, a bird of western plains, was observed at Cedar Grove. In another recent issue of this magazine, the curlew was reported as seen last spring in Wausau. At one time it was a breeding bird in the state, but is seen very rarely now.

Other unusual or rare birds reported as seen There's a picture too of one of two young hawk owls hatched in Douglas County last spring. Hawk owls nest in coniferous forests of Alaska and Canada, and are rarely seen here even in winters when they make their occasional flights to the south. This is, of course, a "first" for Wisconsin.

There's news too of the WSO 25th anniversary convention to be held in Madison May 22-24. Roger Tory Peterson will be the banquet speaker, and Muri Deusing will show movies too. The sessions will be held in the University of Wisconsin Memorial Union.

are the whimbrel (formerly called Hudsonian curlew), seen at Ashland; a Townsend's solitaire, observed in Chippewa Falls; a yellow-throated warbler, in Madison; and blue grosbeaks, seen in Peshtigo.

"If You Can't Stop . . . Smile When You Go By!"

Air of Anacreontick Group Became Our National Anthem

BY MARSHALL GRANROS

To some, it may seem ironic that the air of the Anacreontick Society should have become the National Anthem of the United States of America. But not to those familiar with the processes of folk music, where borrowing and adapting are accepted and contribute to its vitality.

The words of the "Star Spangled Banner" were set to this tune by Francis Scott Key during the War of 1812. It was officially adopted as our nation's anthem by act of congress on March 3, 1931.

The composer of the melody was John Stafford Smith, though it is sometimes erroneously attributed to Samuel Arnold. With words by Ralph Tomlinson it became the "Anthem" of the Anacreontic Society of London, a drinking and singing club.

Sung in Colonies

It was sung at the opening of each meeting of this outstanding club, one of many that abounded in England during the reigns of George III and George IV. The song became very popular in the Colonies, where Key probably heard it, though it would never be sung in the presence of ladies.

It was originally titled "To Anacreon in Heaven". Anacreon, of course, was the Greek Poet (B.C. 563-468) whose writings were, in the main, about love and wine. He is said to have died at the age of 85 by choking on a grape seed. The song is sung here in its original form.

This recording is a veritable treasure-trove of songs that have lived on in the true folk tradition. All are songs that had great popularity in English drinking clubs, taverns and music halls. The patriotic song, "Britannia, the Pride of the Ocean," became popular here as "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean". "Work Boys Work" was set to the tune of "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp the Boys Are Marching", and in that form, became as popular in England as was the United States version.

Cowboy Song

"The Ballad of Sam Hall" kept its melody and words when it moved westward to become the famous American cowboy song about the hanging of a desperado. The wonderfully funny American song "Kemo Kimo" was probably the first American song ever to become popular in the English Music halls, probably in much the same form as it is sung on this disk by Rita Williams.

The liner notes emphasize that wherever the people went to hear popular music in England, from the singing societies of the blue-blooded to the common man's music halls, the songs were the drawing cards. Drinking was a secondary pursuit, to help loosen tongues and ease the spirits. In the pleasure gardens there were many other attractions, from exhibitions of art and flower arranging to circus acts. But—above all—there was music.

This love of music is brilliantly captured by the various artists represented here, whether they are singing patriotic songs, tear-jerking Cockney songs, or nonsense tunes that have always appealed to us simple folk. Of course, really to get in the mood, you might pour yourself a glass of dark ale and have some cold beef, sliced paper thin, while you're listening.

It All Depends On What You Mean

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Archie Moore, the ageless ex-light-heavyweight champ, is working as an actor now in movies and television.

The other day Lee J. Cobb was complimenting the old mongoose on his fine physical condition.

"You know," said Cobb, "you look like you could go five or six rounds with Sonny Liston right now."

"Well, that depends," said Archie "Whether you mean in a bar—or in the ring. If you mean the ring, never."

Guest Violinist Is Concerto Soloist

A guest conductor and a guest violinist will be headliners on today's broadcast of the New York Philharmonic concert from Lincoln Center of Performing Arts. Today's concert is a taped rebroadcast of the Friday, Jan. 31, program. WAPL Radio presents the New York Philharmonic from 2 to 4 p.m. each Sunday.

Charles Treger, 29 year old native of Detroit, in 1962 won first place in the Wieniawski violin competition in Poland, the first American to win this distinction. He is now head of the string department of the University of Iowa in Iowa City. For Sunday's concert he has chosen the Mozart Concerto for Violin and Orchestra, No. 3, G major, K 216.

Sunday's guest conductor, Claudio Abbado, is a 30-year old Milanese who, this June, opens a tour with the Radio Symphony of Berlin. He was the 1958 winner of the Koussevitzky prize for conductors.

Sunday's concert also includes Mozart's Overture to "Der Schauspieldirektor," ("The Impresario"), and the Prokofiev "Suite from the Ballet 'Chout,'" ("The Buffoon"). The program concludes with the Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 2, C minor, Opus 17 ("Little Russian.")

Young Musicians Invade Fond du Lac

Getting Last Minute instructions for festival judging at Fond du Lac Saturday were, standing from the left, Sharon Hilbert, Mary Andrews and Searl Pickett, festival chairman, and, seated, Mrs. Paul Kremer and Mrs. George Hoopman, all of Fond du Lac.

Among the hundreds of musicians who poured in to Fond du Lac Saturday for the 1964 East Central District Music Festival were these caught in sundry poses and activities by Post-Crescent Photographer Ralph Acker. The soloists and ensemble members were competing for berths in the state festival which will be held in Oshkosh on May 2.

Records in Re-VIEW

BY JACK RUDOLPH
HANDEL

"Israel in Egypt" (complete oratorio); Musica Aeterna Orchestra and Chorus with John McCullom, tenor; Adele Addison, soprano, and Florence Kopleff, alto. Frederic Waldman conducting Decca DXS 7178 (Mono DX 178). Two records.

The release of this album makes "Israel in Egypt" Handel's second most recorded oratorio, although it still runs a very poor second to "The Messiah." What is more significant, however, the Decca version is rated by those who have heard them all as the best of the lot.

Largely a choral work, with 24 ensemble numbers among its 39 set pieces, "Israel" is a lovely thing but not easy to listen to on a recording. Unless you're a Handel expert or a confirmed choral enthusiast, the work gets a bit tedious before it's over. Like "The Messiah" it is probably more fun to sing than to hear.

Not that it isn't a beautiful work and that this recording isn't beautifully performed. The excellent Musica Aeterna chorus sing superbly and the soloists are splendid, notably the ringing tenor of John McCullom, who appeared at Fish Creek last summer.

As the narrator McCullom is first class and so is soprano Adele Addison. The choral descriptions of the plagues visited upon Egypt in the first half of the oratorio are vividly dramatic, and the soprano duet with which the second side concludes is extremely beautiful and exciting.

MOZART

"Marriage of Figaro" (complete); Rita Streich, Teresa Stich-Randall, Rolando Panerai, Heinz Rehfuss and others, with Paris Conservatory Orchestra and Aix-en-Provence Festival Chorus, Hans Rosbaud conducting. Vox OPBX 165 (No stereo). Three records.

If you're one of those who believe that opera is more than music—that it isn't opera unless the theatrical elements are also carried through—here is your proof. A recording of an actual performance of "Figaro" at the Aix-en-Provence Festival, this recording carries the drive, the excitement and the building to a dramatic climax that no studio recording could possibly duplicate.

Since it also happens to have been a very fine show in its own right, the album constitutes a double dividend. In fact, it has three. At least two of the singers, relatively unknown in this country at the time, have since made it big at the Met.

The two in question are Teresa Stich-Randall and Rita Streich. Listening to them here it isn't hard to figure why they went all the way. Both carry a major load of the performance, the former as the Countess and the latter as Susanna.

Since the album is a recording of an operatic performance in 1955, both were nearly a decade younger, their voices show the freshness of youth, and in their scenes together the singing is absolutely ravishing. Not that they have the whole things to themselves by any means—everyone else in the cast was putting out that night.

Being a live performance recording of nearly 10 years ago, the sound is not up to the most perfect of modern standards and certainly not up to the technical perfection now being attained by studio recording. It doesn't make the slightest difference. Sound is highly satisfactory and the life of the performance more than compensates for any technical defects.

Admiration, Hatred Mixed In Feelings About F. D. R.

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Not since the time of our 16th president, A. Lincoln, had there been an American head of government about whom contrasted feelings were so strong as Franklin D. Roosevelt. Admiration or hatred, the reactions could be found intensely present in different groups, and even within the same family.

However one felt about him, no one could deny that he was a dynamic man, a President with a remarkable number of firsts stemming from his urgent desire to do things himself.

April 12 is something of an F.D.R. day. Considering his prominence in stamps as a collector and the subject of so many stamp issues all over the world, it seems an appropriate time to recall some of the highlights of his career.

Afflicted With Polio

In August, 1921, when he was afflicted by paralytic polio, it looked as though his political career was ended. But by April, 1922, his will to recover had brought him to where he could "walk a little." His visits to Warm Springs, Ga., which began in 1924, led to his purchase of the springs and acreage surrounding them so that others afflicted by polio could receive low-cost treatment. This and other F.D.R. efforts to combat the crippling disease, led to a thrilling medical announcement made on April 12, 1955—the 10th anniversary of his death.

The announcement told the world about the success and effectiveness of Salk vaccine, proved by tests conducted at the University of Michigan Polio Vaccine Evaluation Center. It was timed as a tribute to his fight against poliomyelitis.

After Roosevelt's resumption of political activities, there was a parade of "firsts." The more significant firsts occurred after his defeat of Herbert Hoover er for the country's top job. His "bank holiday," providing time for evaluation and assistance for well-operated banks before resuming business, was one such first.

His fireside chats via radio, were another. In November, 1942, after North Africa was invaded by Allied troops, he became the first President to give a radio address in a foreign language. The French heard his message on the importance of driving the Germans out of North Africa—in their own language.

Third Term

His third term as President was a first, to say nothing of his fourth term, which really smashed precedent. His overwhelming election victories used up opponents like no other political figure. The roster of men and women serving in various cabinet posts grew longer by the year, but still the name of the man at the helm stayed the same.

The tenacity of F.D.R. is well revealed in his remark made in 1924 while swim-exercising at Warm Springs. "The water put me where I am and the water has to bring me back." He referred to his accidental fall into chill waters while sailing near his family's Canadian summer place in 1921 the day before his ordeal with polio began.

Many a person would have been licked by the setback, but not Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Miss Appleton -- Who V

Pageant for 1964
April 19

The quest by the Appleton Junior Chamber of Commerce for the 1964 Miss Appleton candidate for the June 19 Miss Wisconsin contest in Oshkosh will come to a climax next Sunday when the Miss Appleton Pageant is staged at Appleton High School starting at 8 p.m.

But since the first of March when entries were filed by contestants things have been happening in preparation for the big night. First there was the informal get-together to explain the contest to the aspirants. Being briefed by Pageant Chairman James Murphy in the picture at the top are, from the left, Ginny Seipel, Chilton; Lynn Kellogg, Appleton, and Barbara Schubert, Berlin.

Before the girls could start on their path to the red roses and crown, they were faced with an elimination try-out. Posing in a summary of activities that faced all of the girls is contestant Ellen Larson. She plays her oboe in the try-out with Jack Burroughs, who acted as master of ceremonies, standing by and the judges—judging.

The judges deciding on the three contestants who had to be eliminated are, from the left, Dennis Herrling, Joseph Burns, Jerry Schoepke and Charles Bodmar.

Having passed the eliminations, each of the contestants met her special chaperone. Here Floyd Strelow, Pageant publicity chairman, introduces Ellen to Mrs. Jerry Schoepke. Mrs. Beverly Lemke assisted all of the girls in the intricacies of graceful movement and (color) right, Burroughs supervised a rehearsal on the Appleton High stage.

One of the girls will be presented late Sunday with a bouquet of red roses, a crown and the coveted Miss Appleton sash.

Then she starts worrying about the big contest in Oshkosh in June—and starts dreaming of that trip to Atlantic City in September.

Fox Cities Beagle Fanciers Enter Trials

BY BUD LARIMER

The local Beaglers made another trip to lend support, enjoy good company and maintain local prestige by entering several dogs in the Badger Beagle Club's Beagle trials at Newfane, near Kewaskum.

Bill Russell, Neenah, brought home a first in the bench class with his Russell's Mandy and Bob Kosh-er, Neenah, received a fourth in the same class with his Kosh-er's Shaggy. That Birr guy was there again and his Winnebago Land Boogy Flip ran down a first in the 15-inch class, while hot on his heels, Jack Wydeven's Fox Valley Toby tracked down a third in that same class.

Birr may give some small token of appreciation soon to our Doxies, Tart and Bawdy for their contributions in demonstrating to his Flip the proper direction to take when starting on a rabbit trail!

Miss Carol Warner was escorted to the Dubuque, Iowa, show by her rough sable Collie male, Iben, and her young tri-smooth collie bitch, Bonnie. All three are presently beaming from ear to ear for Bonnie took a four-point major, and Iben went re-

The smooth collie deserves more popularity and recognition than he presently has. The Smooths are striking looking, we believe, tend to have more stable dispositions than the roughs, and have made a very enviable name for themselves as seeing eye

Little Things May Deflate an Actor

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Every now and then, some little thing happens that keeps an actor from getting too big an ego.

Carlton Heston says: "Even if you win the Oscar for your performance, there's always someone who thought you stunk." Bob Mitchum's comment: "My pictures always do great in theaters where they give away free dishes."

And just the other night, two boys stopped at Tony Curtis' house. Obviously autograph seekers, one asked Curtis if he lived there.

Tony answered yes and the boys walked away dejectedly. One of them muttered:

"I told you, Leroy of the Three Stooges didn't live there."

dogs. From a utility angle they are certainly easier to care for and maintain in show shape.

Miss Warner and Mrs. Mary VanderWalker, Fremont, deserve credit for their presentations of good specimens of this variety to the general public. We will be most interested to hear how the brace class fares, if not the first in smooths, at least a definite rarity, according to Miss Warner.

Mrs. John Bengtson, Neenah, took her husband and her red parti-color cocker, Lance, to Dubuque. The dog was shown in conformation and chalked up a point. Mrs. Bengtson handled Lance herself in the obedience class and he made his first C. D. Dog with a score of 193½. To date we have received no authentic information as to the husband's activities or achievements at said show.

Mrs. William Pryor's cocker, Cleo, recently had dalliance with Ch. Clarkdale's Capitol stock and Mrs.

Pryor describes her as "expecting." Mrs. Connie Shilobrit and Mrs. Vera Schultz have also gone the "maternity way" with their respective black and tan cocker and black and tan doxie. The cocker was bred to a near champion black and tan at the Valley-lo Kennels near Milwaukee, and Lolly-Pop Schultz to an outstanding stud at Harry Sharp's Badger Hill kennels in Madison. What a population explosion all this bids fare to be! Our cat is also "expecting!" The sire is outstanding for his regularity and perseverance! !

Legend of Foreign Legion Re-Told in Two Histories

Legion of Strangers: A Vivid History of a Unique Military Tradition—The French Foreign Legion. By Charles Mercer. 342 pp. Bibliog. Index. Holt, Rinehart & Winston. $5.95.

La Legion. The French Foreign Legion and the Men Who Made It Glorious. By Geoffrey Bocca. 307 pp. Bibliog. Index. Illus. Crowell. $5.95.

The band that Kipling called "the legion of the lost and cohorts of the damned," that unique military tradition—The French Foreign Legion—has again attracted world-wide attention as it begins the newest (perhaps the last) chapter in its history.

On April 30, 1963, the Legion established its new headquarters near Marseilles, leaving Algeria where it had been based for over a hundred years. This romantic band of fighting men has had its strength broken, has been reduced to a few companies, but its glory lives on.

The vivid history of the Foreign Legion, the legendary popularity of the romantic Legionnaire as portrayed in "Under Two Flags" and in "Beau Geste" have made the Legion an ever-popular subject.

History of Empire

In a sense, the history of the Legion is a history of the French Empire. Legionnaires have fought from Spain to the Sahara, from Mexico to Madagascar, from Indo-China to Dien Bien Phu. During World War I, the Legion was used to crack the Hindenburg Line; and Legionnaires died in the Crimean War.

Charles Mercer has written a well-researched history of the Legion, starting with its founding by Louis Philippe in 1831, and continuing in chronological order.

What makes a crack-fighting force out of a band of strangers? Its men have been credited with thousands of heroic acts and scores of military victories. Using the techniques of a novelist, Mercer writes a bold history of brave men. He was formerly a newspaperman associated with the Washington Post and the AP. He is the author of "Pilgrim Strangers" and "Rachel Cade."

Written in narrative form with human interest, "Legion of Strangers" is the concise and detailed heroic saga of the French Foreign Legion, yet spiced with anecdotes—some humorous, others horrifying.

Algerian Tragedy

Geoffrey Bocca concerns himself more with the 20th century. He covered the tragedy in Algeria as a war correspondent and gives a more complete accounting of the battle at Dien Bien Phu and the general's revolt in Algeria. He was a correspondent in World War II and has interviewed and corresponded with scores of Legionnaires.

Bocca's "Le Legion!" is filled with little-known anecdotes and is written in a faster pace, appealing more to the general reader. It manages to cover most of the Legion's history, while being more concerned with personalities than with the Legion as a whole. This entirely fresh view of the Legion evolves from the author's observations, from unpublished letters and personal memories.

As a definitive history, Mercer's book is more detailed except for Dien Bien Phu and the "putsch" at Algiers; while Bocca has the advantage of on-the-spot reporting, larger print, popular style, and 40 illustrations.

Both authors grip and hold the reader's attention. Both books are worth reading, well-written and cover the material competently. They may be the fore-runners of many books on the Foreign Legion.

Boston to Observe Anniversary of Ride

used Paul Revere as his hero. Most school children learned, or read the poem, thereby perpetuating Revere's name. And well his name should be known for his contributions to the free states and a nation in North America.

Patriotic Observance

Each year, on the night of April 18, Bostonians gather in Old North Church for the Annual Patriotic Observance of the midnight ride of Paul Revere. This year, for the 189th ceremony, members of the Lexington Minutemen in colorful Colonial tricorner hats and uniforms; members of Boston's Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, oldest military group in America; members of the National Lancers; and men from the staff of the U.S.S. Constitution will gather at Old North Church. Music of the 18th century will echo in the church and an address will be given by The Honorable Ephraim Martin, Postmaster of Boston.

Sharp on the stroke of nine, a boy who is a descendant of Paul Revere or of Robert Newman (his name is not known until the last moment), will rise from where he sits silently in a pew. He will stride down the aisle, receive two lanterns and carry them up into the steeple. This will signal the lantern parade through the narrow streets of the area, ending at Paul Revere Mall where a child will read Longfellow's poem, and another will read the Proclamation of the Governor of Massachusetts.

On April 19 another parade will begin at the Paul Revere statue, located to the rear of Old North Church. The processions will wend through the North End of Boston and, at a gun salute, "Paul Revere" on a horse will cut out of the parade and make the famous horseback ride to Concord.

In contrast to the tense night in 1775, this year's celebration will be loud and cheerful. Guns will crackle, cannons will boom—in recognition of men who helped give us the freedom we have today.

WORLD OF BOOKS

Father's Betrayal by Son Is Theme of Jameson Tale

The Blind Heart. By Storm Jameson. Harper & Row. $3.95.

In this, her 23rd novel, Britain's Storm Jameson brings her incisive wit and keen moral sensitivity to bear on a complex and challenging tale of parental trauma, filial ingratitude and the disintegration of traditional values in a changing world.

At 60, Aristide Michel is the proprietor of a fine, if small, restaurant in the South of France. A Greek immigrant, he is almost as proud of his culinary skill as he is of the woman who lives with him as his wife, and of their 19-year-old foster son, whom they adopted after he was abandoned by refugees in the last days of World War II.

Rules of Success

According to all the conventional rules of success, Michel would seem to be heading toward a golden period in which domestic happiness and financial security crown a lifetime of hard work. But Miss Jameson tells it otherwise.

Just before Michel is to pay five million francs in cash for title to his restaurant, he agrees to travel to another city in behalf of a woman who is seeking custody of a child she bore while a slave laborer in Germany.

Michel returns home to find that his wife has been tied up, and his entire life's savings stolen by two mysterious young men who had taken a room at the hotel. But this is only the beginning of his ordeal.

Police investigation determines that one of the participants in the crime was his own son, whom he adores, and who, it turns out, has been putting his good looks to use, catering to the whims of elderly, but rich, English and American women.

When at last the boy is brought back to St. Loup-de-Grace, Michel discovers that he is not only unrepentant, but furious with his foster father for not having been able to give him even more. Then the son and his foster mother are linked in a fashion that brings Michel's misery to a humiliating peak.

Emerges Intact

But out of this holocaust, which challenges his every value, Michel emerges with his personality and his sense of humor intact. His triumph is, indeed, an affirmation of the indestructibility of the human spirit, its resiliency and its capacity for survival.

In "The Blind Heart" Miss Jameson has written a novel of power and purpose which—after a slow start—cannot help but intrigue the perceptive reader.

If it lacks the verve and pungency of "A Cup of Tea for Mr. Thorgill," this may perhaps be attributed to the fact that Miss Jameson, an English writer, is dealing this time with a Gallic theme, and trying very hard to evoke atmosphere as well as emotion.

The attempt is not entirely successful.

Caidin's Tale of Marooned U. S. Astronaut Puts Reader in Orbit

Marooned. By Martin Caidin. Dutton. $4.95.

An astronaut is stuck in orbit, and will die as his oxygen supply runs out. As the Americans race to put a rescue craft into space, they find a Russian vehicle already orbiting.

That is the gist of the hair-curling story Caidin tells. It is fiction with all the realistic urgency of the broadcast format, "We interrupt this program to bring you . . ."

The author has created a situation in which the Mercury program has been extended for one more flight, and the fifth American to go into orbit is an Air Force test pilot, Maj. Richard J. Pruett.

Rockets Fail

Pruett and his Mercury Seven complete their mission in fine fashion. Then comes the time for the retrorockets to fire, slowing the capsule so that it descends to earth. The rockets fail to fire. This means Pruett will continue to orbit at 300 miles a minute until the gradual pull of gravity brings him down. But by that time his oxygen will be gone. He has a scant two days to live.

Technicians, working frantically, pull a Gemini (two-man) capsule out of a test installation and gamble on sending it up with Jim Dougherty, Pruett's friend and back-up pilot, aboard.

Meanwhile their instruments pick up the trail of a huge Russian capsule, which proves to be Vostok IX, manned by cosmonaut Andrie Yakovlev. Having been launched from the other side of the world, the cosmonaut has the tricky task of maneuvering the Vostok into the same orbit pattern as the Mercury Seven.

Dazzling Display

There is a dazzling display of technical information in this story; in fact there are times when the scientific details threaten to get in the way of the suspense-filled narrative. But the technical data also have the effect of making the drama more vivid.

Few writers could match Caidin's expertise. He has published two score books on aviation and space subjects, and this is his first venture into fiction. As an interesting sidelight, he has woven into his story some behind-the-scenes observations on the whole Mercury program.

You're advised to strap yourself into your armchair while reading this book. It will put you into orbit.

Miles A. Smith

Novelist Wilder Offers Dramatic Saga of Bahamas

Wind From the Carolinas. By Robert Wilder. Putnam. $6.95.

Intertwining fiction with over a hundred years of history, the author has written a major novel set in the Bahama Islands.

"I'm afraid nothing will ever be the same," Martha Cameron closed her eyes and leaned her head back against the seat of the carriage. She felt a tight constriction of her heart. Everything familiar was being left behind. . . From the familiar scene they were moving into a world which must be completely strange; a place of furious hurricanes, surrounded by an alien sea. . .

Although the Revolutionary War had ended 10 years before, old angers, hatreds and suspicions remained. Loyalists abandoned their plantations, some families returning to England, others looking to the Bahamas where vast tracts of land were offered to men with influence.

Loyal to Crown

Ronald Cameron, who had remained loyal to the Crown, decided to make the move. "All he owned—slaves, cattle, seed cotton, overseers and even the bricks of his manor would be carried to this new home by a ship of the British flag . . . a cotton plantation would be laid out, the manor rebuilt, the slaves put to work in the new fields. . ."

This is a story of grief and heartbreak, for the Bahamas would not produce cotton on the scale necessary for financial success, and with the failure of the plantations came poverty and ruin. Many of the planters returned to Carolina or Virginia, but Cameron had every pound he owned staked on his island. There was no turning back now.

It is also a story of violence, adventure, passion and romance over a period of more than a century. This vivid chronicle of the Cameron family down through six generations, captures in fictional form a little-known era in the history of the Bahamas.

Brilliant Chronology

The Cameron's Scots blood would not admit defeat. The chronology of the family brilliantly depicts how each generation in turn meets adversity and weathers the storm. Through blight, insects, crop failures, human failings, and hurricane damage they clung to their island.

Robert Wilder, author of "The Wine of Youth" and "The Sun Is My Shadow," has produced memorable characters. The patriarch Ronald; his wilful daughter Caroline; Caroline's colorful island-bred husband; David, Ronald's illegitimate son; and the succeeding generations of Camerons, each determined to hang onto their birthright.

Though filled with unexpected trials and dangers, this novel is more than a tale of adventure, as the skeins of many lives weave in and out to form the final pattern.

A multitude of characters move throughout the pages of this lengthy chronicle, and events are never as important as people. The author is a smooth storyteller and his narrative style provides a continually interesting tale in spite of its length. He shows a deep understanding of the ways of life and human beings.

$105,000 Estate Left in Trust for Mrs. C. D. Smith

FOND DU LAC — An estate of more than $105,000 was left in trust to his widow by the late Charles D. Smith, head of a Fond du Lac contracting firm. Smith died Feb. 22.

According to terms of the will filed in the court of County Judge Jerold E. Murphy, the estate is to be divided into two trusts, income from which is to go to his wife.

Assets of the first trust, to be equal to 40 per cent of the gross adjusted value of the estate, are to be distributed by his wife upon her death under terms of her will. Ray Neveau pounded two home runs over the left field wall to pace the 9-hit Titan attack.

St. Norbert's Pete Schneck escaped unscathed in the seventh inning of the nightcap after the Titans had loaded the bases with one out. Schneck forced his mound opponent, Dick McDermid, to hit into a double play.

McDermid held the Knights to four hits while striking out four. Schneck gave up nine hits and whiffed seven.

The invaders garnered a pair of runs in the second inning on two hits. A scratch single by Bill Koenan and Tom Jilbert's survival on an error were followed by a 2-base hit by Schneck for two runs. The Knights added their other run in the third.

OSC's Gunnar Voltz Won College Title With Borrowed Bowling Ball

OSHKOSH — A borrowed bowling ball carried Oshkosh State College's Gunnar Voltz to the ABC-sanctioned Intercollegiate Bowling Tournament All-Events crown last weekend at Oakland, Calif.

The 18-year old freshman from Milwaukee Bay View had a 1,820 total on scores of 659 in the team event, 620 in doubles and 541 in singles.

Voltz bowls on the Oshkosh State College Reeve Memorial Union team in a Midwest Student Union Bowling league. The Titan bowlers won the conference crown and then competed at Purdue University with a team being selected to represent the region at Oakland.

Voltz was named to this team. Gunnar said he had started using a friend's ball because he did not want to carry his back and forth from Oshkosh to Milwaukee. He had such success that he used the borrowed ball at Purdue and again at Oakland. "It's a finger-tip ball with a slightly wider span than my own," the slender youth said. "I'm now having one drilled like it."

As most good bowlers, Voltz bid the bowlers from doing any outside league bowling while in school and as a result Gunnar said he bowls only about six games a week compared to about six games a day when he bowled in Milwaukee.

As an education major, Voltz maintains just under a B average.

Right now the team, which consists of Dave Schneckenberg, Ripon; Pat Bork, Oshkosh, Jon Laehn, Shawano; Ted Triphan, Oostburg, and Ron Bosin, Appleton, in addition to Voltz is seeking to qualify for a berth in the NAIA Bowling Tournament at Kansas City, Mo., April 24-25.

Oshkosh Kite Derby Slated Next Sunday

OSHKOSH — The third annual Oshkosh Kiwanis - Recreation kite derby will be held next Sunday starting at 1:30 p.m. at Menominee Park.

About 500 entries are expected, according to Neil Koenan, program supervisor.

There will be three divisions for boys and girls, grades 1-3, 4-6 and 7-9, plus a senior division. Prizes will be given in each division for highest flying, smoothest flying and best decorated kites. In addition, there will be an open judging in various categories for all kites.

Materials for building the kites, along with instruction sheets will be available at all the schools this week and at the recreation department office.

Oshoksh High Golfers Move Outside Soon

OSHKOSH — Warm weather is expected to send Oshkosh High School golfers onto the fairways this week and give Coach Don Erickson a chance for a better look at his material.

About 20 candidates have been working indoors but have been limited to hitting practice balls off the tee.

Three lettermen are back from the team which finished fourth in the conference last year. They are juniors Mike Malone and Bob Schabolski and senior Dick Stromske. Three others, seniors Bob Langlitz and Craig Friedrich and junior Rick Schabolski, saw some action but did not letter. Two of the promising sophomores are Jim Stromske and Dave Tellock.

Home matches are played on the Lake Shore Golf Course.

OSC Softball Managers Set Monday Meeting

OSHKOSH — Ten teams have entered the Oshkosh State College Intramural Program Slow Pitch Softball Division and 11 teams have entered for fast pitch, Warren Goehrs, director, has announced.

A managers' meeting will be held at 6:45 p.m. Monday in Albee Hall to set up leagues and schedules.

OSHKOSH — Veteran Coach Ken Hansen will attempt to pick up the pieces of what is left of last year's Oshkosh High School tennis team and with a group of newcomers attempt to mould another winning combination.

Now in his 22nd year as Oshkosh tennis coach, Hansen's teams have not finished lower than second in the Fox Valley Conference in the last five years.

Last year's second place team was hard hit by graduation, losing Jim Werner, Jeff Gunz and Dave Hirschberg, the number 2, 3, and 4 men. But the biggest blow was the announced suspension of state high school singles champion Dan Bleckinger by the WIAA.

His departure leaves only Jim Wagner, a senior, last year's number 5 man, to carry the load.

After a week of workouts, Hansen said some of the more promising looking players are Dave Borsuk and Jim Luedtke, both seniors, and a pair of juniors, Jim Gunz and Wayne Loots.

The Indians open match play April 30 against Beaver Dam.

OSHKOSH — Lanky Bill Gogolewski has received the starting nod from Coach Harlan Quandt for the Oshkosh Indians' opener Tuesday at Neenah. The 6-4 righthander was "very impressive" in an intrasquad game Friday, Quandt said.

The OHS mentor said he would use at least three pitchers against the Rockets and would probably go with Greg Wood behind Gogolewski, with the third hurler coming from the group of Greg Seibold, Hal Malnory, Lynn Peterson or Jeff Harwood.

A big blow to Indian hopes was the loss of hard hitting third baseman Pat Schrage through scholastic difficulties. Schrage, a junior, was one of only five lettermen returning from last season, and had been counted upon to supply much of Oshkosh's power.

The remainder of the lineup for Tuesday will probably be Bruce Erickson at shortstop, Bruce Berrell at third, Greg Gaiter at second, Tom Ambrose or Greg Wood at first, Hall Malnory catching, John Parker in left, Jim Jischke in center and Dave Raddatz in right.

In the intrasquad contest, the Chiefs beat the Indians, 14-1, mainly because of 11 Indian errors and 8 walks. Gogolewski struck out 7 straight in his 3 inning stint for the Chiefs. Peterson and Harwood also looked impressive on the mound, Quandt said.

Raddatz and Berrell were the only two to get more than one hit, each getting two. Erickson, who is only a sophomore, also received praise from Quandt for his work at shortstop.

OSHKOSH — Guarded optimism was expressed by Oshkosh State College tennis Coach Joe Bleckinger over the development of his Titan tennis team, defending WSCC champions but hard hit by ineligibilities. Only two lettermen are on the squad, sophomores Dick Diedrich and Ken Peterson, both of Neenah.

"We will have some depth, but nothing outstanding like last year," the veteran coach remarked after watching his candidates in action for about two weeks.

The team opens Wednesday at Ripon against a strong Ripon College team featuring the Ankerson brothers, Jack and Doug, also of Neenah.

Bleckinger has whittled the team to about eight and the final selection of his 6 singles players and 3 doubles teams will probably not be made until shortly before the match.

Intersociety Track Meet Slated at OSC

2-Day Competition Begins Tuesday; Marks in Danger

OSHKOSH — Oshkosh State College trackmen and other students alike will get a chance to show their wares Tuesday and Wednesday in the annual OSC Intersociety track and field meet at the college athletic field on New York Ave. starting at 4 p. m. each day.

Any student is eligible to compete, athletic director Robert Kolf said. Students belonging to organizations must compete for their club. Other students will compete as independents. Running events will be on Tuesday and the field events on Wednesday.

Some of the marks set in the Intersociety meet stood for many years as school records and in several cases, records were set by students not out for track.

Brunet Holds Record

The record most in danger is the pole vault standard of 11 feet, 8 inches set in 1960 by Larry Brunet of Fond du Lac. Jerry Race, Peshtigo freshman, has gone 12-9 in practice and Bob "Gus" Oaks, Oshkosh freshman, has cleared 12-4. Both are track team candidates. Two other vaulters, Bill Steinhilber and Dave Emerich, also are capable of beating the old mark. Neither is eligible for varsity competition this semester.

The oldest Intersociety mark is the 220-yard dash time of 22.8 seconds set by Bogucki of Thorp in 1927.

The Intersociety records:

100-Yd. — Montague, 1932, and Fenrich, 1941.
220-Yd. — 22.8, Bogucki, 1927.
440-Yd. — 49, Meyer, 1940.
880-Yd. — 2:28.8, Becker, 1939.
1-Mile — 4:39.8, Leaman, 1939.
Two-Mile — 10:19, Leaman, 1940.
High Hurdles — 16, Schmitz, 1960.
Low Hurdles — 24.1, Schmitz, 1959.
Discus — 136-feet, Zoch, 1940.
Shot Put — 44-9/16, Boch, 1951.
Javelin — 177-4, Pennwell, 1961.
High Jump — 6-5, Wittig, 1934.
Pole Vault — 11-8, Brunet, 1960.

What Kind of Four-Year College?

Now that the board of regents of the University of Wisconsin has given its blessing, a new four-year state institution of higher learning in this area is in the planning stage.

The report now goes back to the Coordinating Committee for Higher Education for which it was prepared. Approval at this level seems assured.

The only remaining major hurdle then will be the legislature, which must appropriate the money. But faced with the cold hard figures of the number of students who will be demanding admittance at state colleges and universities in the next decade the legislature knows already that the funds will be required whether they are to be spent for such a new and separate facility or for additions to present institutions.

It appears probable too that the new institution will be a third campus for the University of Wisconsin rather than a new state college. The University has been active in the Fox Valley area for a number of years through its extension centers. Its staff has been studying the problem for some time. The state college board of regents has made no concrete move to indicate interest in administering such a school.

It is also certain even at this date that the institution will not be located in Appleton or in the Neenah-Menasha area. This would impinge too closely on the rapidly-growing state college at Oshkosh.

One form the institution could take would be a third and fourth year addition to the present freshman-sophomore center in Green Bay. There is some thinking at the University and in the Coordinating Committee staff in this direction. Parochial interests in Green Bay can be expected to exploit this proposal.

But there is also a broader viewpoint supporting the idea of a completely new four-year institution located on the size acreage which would allow for future expansion and situated somewhere between Green Bay and Appleton where it could conveniently serve commuting students from the Fox Cities, Green Bay, Manitowoc and the sparser areas north of here. The potent factor in favor of this viewpoint is that it looks ahead 50 years rather than 10.

The Fox Cities should swing their support in behind this longer-range viewpoint.

Are Rights Protests Morally Right?

The continued sit-ins in southern states to publicize local segregation laws or segregation enforced by laws about disturbing the peace have brought a number of northerners to the south to join the protests. Quite a few students and movie stars have marched in demonstrations or sat on the sidewalks. For some of the younger demonstrators this is the rebellion of youth, something like picketing was during the 1930's. Movie stars may be simply after publicity. But there are others, obviously sincere, who have traveled south with the simple intention of violating a law. The most notable case was the mother of the governor of Massachusetts, and the wife of an Episcopal bishop who joined other proper persons in going to jail.

Of course Mrs. Peabody didn't really run much of a risk. Southern police may be rough with Negroes or college students but they are not going to shove around a gentle looking white-haired lady who has been preceded by a lot of publicity about who she is. But exactly what business did Mrs. Peabody have in Florida?

It has long been the opinion of many religious people, most especially the New England transcendentalists, that individual moral law takes precedence over civil law. Thus Henry Thoreau refused to pay taxes because they would help support the Mexican War, or so he argued. Thus the state of Wisconsin declared null and void the Fugitive Slave Act. Thus hundreds of northerners violated that act in helping the underground railway before the Civil War. And this idea has been recognized and upheld by the United States government and the Supreme Court in holding that conscientious objectors are exempt from combat military service.

But we have criticized the school boards and other arms of government who have defied the Supreme Court decision that authorizing prayers in the public schools is a violation of the First Amendment. Presumably at least some of the advocates of such prayers sincerely are concerned with a moral problem and not merely a political one. If this defiance is wrong, are not the efforts to break southern segregation laws?

There may be a fine line of distinction here. Southern segregation laws actively contribute to discrimination. Prohibitions against ordered school prayers are not aimed at preventing prayer itself and there is neither a social discrimination nor lack of equal protection of the laws as required in the Fourteenth Amendment. But disobeying a law one believes to be morally wrong is different from seeking out such a law to violate in protest. There is also here some difference between basic liberties as interpreted by the Supreme Court and laws involving police power which are expected to change with the times.

It may be that the south will change its segregation laws only when such protests get too hot to handle or when the federal government steps in. At least this is in part the reasoning behind the civil rights bill now before the Senate. But those who disobey laws intentionally must take care to realize the threat, not to themselves, but to the whole structure of government.

We agree that civil order is not the ultimate loyalty. But the democratic processes of representative government are the best ways men have yet found for establishing civil order without offending the moral precepts of deeply religious people. They can be defied only at great peril. At this point in efforts to wipe out official discrimination it appears that there are more dangers in the breaking of southern laws than in accepting them until changes are made.

Contradictions in Our Foreign Policy

The debate over United States foreign policy, sparked by Senator Fulbright's speech a couple of weeks ago, has brought forth some contradictions both in our present policies and proposed remedies. The continued unrest in Latin America with the threats of civil war, military coups and Communist take-overs is a major reason why our attitudes and decisions should be more clearly formulated.

A letter from a former president of the United Nations Security Council and a leading Cuban in exile in this country, Emilio Nunez Portuondo, points out that "Senator Fulbright has two diametrically opposed theses regarding Cuba and Viet Nam. He says that Cuba must be abandoned to swim for itself, while Viet Nam must be defended at all costs. The peculiar thing about this position is that as yet the right of the United States to intervene in Viet Nam has not been clarified. As for the Cuban case, the United States has at least 12 international treaties, doctrines, agreements, and resolutions that obligate it to prevent extracontinental Communist forces from taking possession of the island."

Of course the government of South Viet Nam, when Diem was president, requested our help. Castro was in control in Cuba before dissidents other than obvious Batista supporters began to flee and asked for help. He was in control before he sought the assistance from Russia and Red China, at least openly. The difference here is that the opponents to Castro are not primarily in Cuba while Ho Chi Minh has not overrun South Viet Nam—yet.

But this is a distinction that is difficult to maintain in the fast changing situations in so many countries. In effect it gives aid to those left wing elements in an unsettled country which are able to conceal their allegiance to communism until they have taken over the country. We must wonder exactly what would have been the United States attitude if the Viet Cong had not been so openly Communist at the time of the United States official disillusionment with President Diem last fall.

There is every chance that we will have to face such a situation again. The continued—perhaps even the growing—unrest in Latin America indicates that there may be left wing coups as well as military ones in some of the nations. We have noted that our policy of non-recognition for a little while is virtually impotent. Will we dare to go back to a policy we once had and use our own troops to help restore more representative regimes?

Senor Portuondo is understandably bitter about the failure of the United States to back the invasion by Cuban exiles at the Bay of Pigs. Indeed this was the place of major United States failure and appalling indecision. If there is now a firm belief that we can't do much about Castro without undue risk of a large war, the least we can do is make sound plans to see that it does not happen again elsewhere.

Perhaps, after all, the mere possession of the means of government and control in a nation is not enough. Certainly our policies over the last few years have not produced notable successes in either Cuba or Southeast Asia.

Government Must Learn To Live Within Budget

Editor, Post-Crescent:

Upon reading the Sunday, March 29 paper, I feel it is time for some opinions of the average individual.

The story of a congressman who considers himself a candidate for President Johnson's poverty program because he has 13 children and makes less than $32,500 a year really tugged at my heartstrings.

How many families, having more than 13 children, do not make this salary in six or more years?

Some congressmen say their salary of $22,500 a year is not enough as they must maintain two homes in order to keep their children in their home towns. When the average man is employed or transferred elsewhere there is no question but his family must go along. What makes these people any different?

There are many things that

Allen-Scott Report

Possible Grand Jury Proceeding Against Baker Real Hot Potato

BY ROBERT S. ALLEN AND PAUL SCOTT

Attorney General Robert Kennedy is facing what could be the most critical decision of his career — whether to authorize the convening of a grand jury to consider charges against "Bobby" Baker.

Assistant Attorney General Herbert Miller, head of the Criminal Division, has indicated he will be ready to present such a case around mid-May.

Justice Department insiders credit Miller as favoring taking such action. But before he can proceed, it will be necessary for him — in the highly politics-charged Baker affair — to get the approval of his boss, the Attorney General.

With no formal recommendations yet before him, Kennedy is portrayed as having "an open mind" on initiating legal action against the one-time influential $19,500-a-year secretary of the Senate Democrats. But Justice Department authorities are taking it for granted that if Miller advocates grand jury action, Kennedy will okay it.

It has long been an open secret that no love was lost between the young Attorney General and the equally youthful Baker.

However, the backstage our families could do with the money that we are paying to give our public (servants??) the (necessities??) of life.

To our husbands a wage increase of 10-30 cents a year is tops. These people try to grant themselves a $10,000 a year raise. This is much more than the average man makes in a year.

Our state, it is said, is in need of more roads. I would like to know why. One can drive nowhere but they run into a "Detour, Road under Construction" sign.

The Medicare program is another plan which will do little to help the average man. Not all doctors will subscribe to the plan thereby restricting a person's choice of doctors. Also in these programs anyone who owns anything is unable to participate. Therefore any family man who has worked, contributed to this plan through Social Security, but maintains his home will be the one who can not receive any of its benefits. The man who has liquidated or transferred his holdings or has never earned anything, (thereby in the latter case, never contributing) will be the ones to receive the Medicare aid.

Our taxes are already beyond realistic logic. It is time the state and federal government made a budget such as we families have. It would be wonderful indeed if a man with an $8,000 yearly salary could say he needed $10,000 and make out his budget accordingly.

The government must learn to live within its budget, not bring its income up after it makes out a budget.

Mrs. Harlin Spiegel
Route 3,
Appleton

word is that Deputy Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach is reputedly "dragging his feet." He is said to be counseling a "go slow" policy.

Behind the scenes, the question also is being raised of possible intense White House interest.

Walter Jenkins, among President Johnson's closest assistants and until recently an official of the LBJ (radio-TV) Co., was involved in the stormy Senate investigation of Baker. Republicans made repeated efforts to have Jenkins summoned for direct interrogation, but were voted down by the Democratic majority.

Whether a grand jury probe of Baker would affect Jenkins or others close to the President is not known. But this point is being avidly discussed by politicians in both parties.

Privately apprized of the possible grand jury proceedings, they are intently watching what happens in both the Justice Department and the White House.

OTHER PUZZLERS — Involved in the issue of taking charges against Baker to a special federal grand jury is where that should be done — in the District of Columbia or the adjoining state of Maryland.

The former potent Senate official's activities covered both jurisdictions, and a decision would have to be made where to proceed against him.

Another potential problem is the report of the Senate investigating committee. This is now slated for some time in May, and is certain to be as furiously partisan as the probe has been.

The six Democratic committeemen will have a so-called majority report, and the three Republicans will have their own report. The two are certain to differ widely — with the Democrats soft-pedaling, and the Republicans castigating and excoriating right to the doorstep of the White House.

What effect, if any, these clashing findings would have on a grand jury investigation is conjectural. They are sure to have loud political impact.

Also still to be heard from are two other potentially decisive forces.

One is the Internal Revenue Service which is probing Baker's tax returns. It is understood the IRS expects to submit its findings to the Justice Department in a few weeks in ample time for Assistant Attorney General Miller to consider them in making his recommendation to the Attorney General.

The other factor is Senator John Williams, R-Del., the veteran "one-man investigating committee," who precipitated the Baker investigation.

Williams is telling colleagues he has considerably more to say about the Baker case, and will make a series of Senate speeches. He will also make public correspondence he has had with various government agencies on the matter.

Individual Has Right, Duty To Do His Own Censoring

Editor, Post-Crescent:

After having read the People's Forum columns for the last few weeks, censorship seems to be a big issue in Appleton. Please allow me to submit the opinions of one who belongs to the group that this affects most.

Assuming that "obscene literature" degenerates the minds of my generation, people say ban it. I feel that this is the easy, although not the efficient, way out. Prohibition showed us that you can't completely eliminate an element that a particular group of people considered undesirable. We must try a different approach.

The mind is an amazing thing. It can provide us with a sense of right and wrong, but much like the computer that I work with, it needs some sort of programming. This programming of the mind is accomplished by our parents, instructors, and our environment. Once this process is accomplished properly, the mind recognizes the wrong and knows the relative value of it. A person who is presented with two situations and can choose the proper one is of much more value than one who has no choice to make.

Let's increase our ability to make our individual decisions more closely match the mores of our civilization through a more active instructional program. For those parents who don't want to accept this responsibility, why not give the "New Generation" of Appleton a place to sublimate their frustrations and anxieties?

In Appleton you have "Attic Theatre," one-act plays at A.H.S., Lawrence recitals, etc., but how many parents suggest going to these?

Here in Boston I can go to a concert any night of the week, go to the museum of fine arts, the museum of science, or to any number of clubs where fine (and I use the term with respect to my own standards) entertainment can be found.

I object to group censorship for it will get out of hand. You know as well as I do that if this is the answer, you will have to censor the attendance of "drive-in" theatres, city parks, "bull sessions", and even some of the records being broadcast over the radio stations.

Give us the freedom to read what we want and to see what we want, but most important of all give the foundation for us, as individuals to recognize the material for what it is.

Ann Landers Descends On Fox Cities Like The Bombshell She Is

BY JOHN TORINUS

The author of one of the greatest success stories ever written in the newspaper business was our guest here this week. Mrs. Frances Lederer, better known as Ann Landers. Her story is one to rival Horatio Alger.

Torinus

Ten years ago the Chicago Sun-Times was running a conventional advice column written by a woman known as Ann Landers. It was syndicated with indifferent success, having some 26 newspaper clients.

Mrs. Landers died suddenly, and the Sun-Times hit upon the idea of conducting a contest to find a successor.

Mrs. Lederer had recently moved to Chicago from Eau Claire, where her husband had been vice president of National Presto Industries. In Chicago he became president of a large ball point pen concern. Mrs. Lederer entered the Sun-Times contest, conceived the idea of a totally new format for an advice column, and was chosen to be the new Ann Landers.

'Eppie,' as she is known to her intimate friends, had no previous experience in the newspaper business. She had always been an active, dynamic person. In Eau Claire she took over the job of secretary of the Democratic Party and helped infuse such vitality into the organization that Lester Johnson was elected as the first Democratic Congressman ever chosen from that area.

But this was a totally new career for her, and she hit the syndicate business like a bombshell.

I recall vividly how I bought the new column soon after it came out and was so undecided about it that I didn't run it in the paper for several months. I read each weekly batch when they came in and couldn't make up my mind how our readers would react to this lively, witty format. I actually cancelled it after several months.

In the meantime Victor Minahan here at the Post-Crescent had also purchased it and started running the column. He reported it was meeting with so much success that I reversed my field again, bought it the second time, and started it in the Press-Gazette. It's been in both papers ever since.

Sales of the Landers column skyrocketed. From 26 papers it was up over 300 in about a year. This week Ann cracked the Omaha World-Telegram after working on them for nine years. That brought her total to 565 papers, by far the largest list enjoyed by any newspaper feature.

The scale of the Landers operation staggers the imagination. She receives some 25,000 letters per month. She employs a staff of nine secretaries, one of whom does nothing but open the mail. The others help her answer the letters (every request for advice receives a personal answer in addition to those selected for publication in the column), help with research, etc.

Her bill for stamps, stationery, telegrams and long distance telephone calls goes $25,000 per year. She puts in 10 to 12 hours every day at the office except when she is off on frequent lecture tours like the one in this area this week.

'Eppie' brings two vital talents to her work. The first is her absolute sincerity. She believes that she is performing a most valuable service to the people who write to her. She is completely dedicated about trying to help them. As she remarked in her talk to the Chamber of Commerce Wednesday night, "I don't write to roll 'em in the aisles."

On the other hand her ready wit is her other main asset. She explained her belief that humor makes her advice less pompous, and that many times helping people to laugh at their own problems is good medicine.

Her speeches are filled with the same kind of quips which you readers are familiar with in her column. She remarks that we are living in an age "when it is fashionable to be down and talk things over," and that "the davenport no longer is a piece of furniture."

Speaking about how we spoil our children today she told the story about the boy who left his mother this note: "I'm going to run away from home tonight. Who's going to drive me?" Speaking of the necessity for sex education among our youth she remarks that she is a firm believer that reading never hurt anybody. "Did you ever hear of a girl getting into trouble in a library?"

It was wonderful to see 'Eppie' again this week. Her vibrant personality gives everyone who meets her a new shot of adrenaline. It is difficult to conceive when you meet her that she is a grandmother. She hasn't acquired an additional line in the nine years of high-speed living that I have known her.

Council for Retarded Children Seeks Help

Editor, Post-Crescent:

There's a job to be done in behalf of the mentally retarded in this community. If each resident of the area carries his share of responsibility for doing the job, it shall be done effectively.

The late President Kennedy made it clear that mental retardation is no longer a problem to be faced by parents of retarded children alone — it is everybody's problem. The Outagamie County Council for Retarded Children in the light of this fact is conducting a membership drive to enlist the active cooperation of citizens representing a cross-section of doctors, lawyers, social workers, business people, nurses.

Qualifications for membership in the association are a genuine concern for the mentally retarded, faith in their capabilities, and a determination to create an environment in which they can develop fully those capabilities.

Children in our community have certain inalienable rights — and that includes all children. Youngsters carrying the handicap of mental retardation, to whatever degree, have a right to the kind of education that will best equip them for a good life. . . they have a right to recreation activities geared to their needs. . . they have a right to proper training for the type of gainful employment for which they qualify.

The Outagamie County Council for Retarded Children is dedicated to the task of guaranteeing those rights. In truth, our democratic society is dedicated to the same task. If you are asked to become a member of the association, to work for a cause that is today a major national concern, you are being given an opportunity to make a significant contribution to the life of your community — indeed, of your country.

Bard of Avon Saluted by 20th Century Club

BY JUDY RUSSELL
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

OSHKOSH — The Bard of Stratford-on-Avon would have been proud to see the recognition paid him Saturday at the 61st annual breakfast of the 20th Century Club. William Shakespeare's 400th anniversary and his Elizabethan England combined to transform the clubhouse into a medieval masterpiece.

The outside resembled the Globe Theatre, scene of the literary master's plays. When productions were given a flag was flown outside the theatre; so it was at the clubhouse. A flag representing King Lear flew at half-mast below the American flag donated to the club by Rep. William K. Van Pelt. Members had written Washington, D. C., to find out how the flags should be displayed, as the funeral of Gen. Douglas MacArthur was Saturday and flags were to be at half-mast.

Horizon Club girls, dressed as pages, greeted guests outside the door. The porch was decorated with authentic crests and the flower box held eight flags displaying authentic crests of committee members, some of whom did research on the subject.

'Stained Glass'
The windows and doors represented stained-glass windows, with "panes" of red, blue, green and yellow. A bust of Shakespeare and his crest filled one corner of the entrance hall and mannikins dressed as Queen Elizabeth and her lord graced the hallway. They were surrounded by English tapestries and crests. A knight, resplendent in purple, gold and silver costume, stood at the top of the stairs. The medieval apparel was obtained from a Milwaukee costume company.

A cardboard castle outline held quotations from Shakespeare's works while a table displayed a miniature castle and warriors. Also shown was a display of books on Shakespeare and his plays. A small table presented a scene from "Julius Caesar."

Posters heralded scenes from such dramas as "King Richard III," "As You Like It," "Macbeth," "Anthony and Cleopatra," and "Romeo and Juliet." The punch bowl setting depicted a wooden wine cellar, with the wooden structure covered with imitation grapes.

Red and Pink

Red and pink formed the color scheme and committee members, who wore jeweled crowns, were dressed in either color. Large, imitation carnation centerpieces, arranged with gold jeweled crowns and the traditional masks of tragedy and comedy lined the tables. Crown nuptials and red and pink programs were at each place. Two jesters perched on either side of the stage and a beautiful gold crest on a red velvet background was hung above the fireplace in the main hall. The crest was donated by Mrs. J. L. Rusk, a past president.

The programs told of the "61st Performance" of the event, inaugurated by Mrs. Edgar P. Sawyer, first president of the organization. Committee chairmen and members were listed as producers, directors, costumes, art work, properties, pages, culinary artists, punchinello, punch line prologue, and members of the ensemble. The program, "Theater of Great Characters" was presented by The Carradines.

Tremendous Research

The masterful job of decorating was handled by Mrs. George Anderson. Her co-chairmen were Mrs. Richard Audiss and Mrs. Frank Eisch. "A big amount of research went into this," Mrs. Anderson commented.

The ladies were treated to an "English" menu that included beef stroganoff and rice, tea, jello salad, buttered parsley bread, pimento asparagus, spiced apple ring, English punch, English pudding and sauce, and coffee. The culinary artists were Miss Lucille Konrad and Mrs. Homer Pratt.

Pages' costumes were the work of Mrs. John Morton. She was assisted by Mrs. Willis Kistner, Mrs. Carl Mueller and Mrs. Rusk. Properties chairmen were Mrs. William Shepard and Mrs. M. P. Kelly.

Committee Members

Co-chairmen of the breakfast were Mrs. Clifford P. Fischer and Mrs. Louis Villwock; members of the social committee, Mrs. George L. Anderson, Mrs. Richard M. Audiss, Miss Marion Behlendorf, Mrs. Robert Conlee, Mrs. Frank Eisch, Mrs. G. G. Ellerbrock, Mrs. Josephine Felie, Mrs. Emerson Fluor, Mrs. Ed. R. Friedrich, Mrs. R. C. Geary, Mrs. R. S. Gronowski, Miss Jeanette Hebblewhite, Mrs. Henry Johnston, Mrs. M. P. Kelly, Mrs. Willis Kistner, Miss Lucille Konrad, Mrs. A. L. Kuebler, Miss Marie Labudde, Mrs. Thomas Marquardt, Mrs. W. P. Mertz, Mrs. Dorothy Meyer, Mrs. Alma F. Monahan, Mrs. John B. Morton, Mrs. Homer L. Pratt, Mrs. William G. Shepard, Mrs. Ray Toner, Mrs. Nancy Wagenhals and Mrs. Arthur Ziegenhagen. Ticket sales were handled by Mrs. Melvin Pfaffenroth, Mrs. Paul Salzieder and Mrs. Ralph Louts.

Pages, in the Persons of Horizon Club girls, greeted guests attending the 20th Century Club's 61st annual breakfast Saturday. The jester seated in front, above, is Barbara Hable. Holding flags are Marcia Bocher and Sally Klix. The herald, in back, is Judy Spanbauer. Below, Mrs. John Morton, who did the pages, costumes, inspects the outfit of Wendy Plotz. With Mrs. Morton is Mrs. Millis Kistner, who assisted with costume designing. Miss Marie Labudde had charge of the Horizon Club girls who served the breakfast.

Listed on the Program as 'Punchinello's', Mrs. A. A. Ziegenhagen and Mrs. Thomas Marquardt were ready to perform serving duties. A wooden wine cellar decorated with green, deep red and purple grapes formed the serving table centerpiece. Below are the women who carried out the expert task of medieval and Shakespearian decorating. Mrs. Frank Eisch and Mrs. Richard Audiss, assisting co-chairmen, and Mrs. George Anderson, chairman, examine the Shakespearian lore and miniature castle on a table in front of a cardboard castle outline. Keep Food Value With Tight Lids

Keep the lid on—your family's food will retain more nutrients if cooking is done in a pan with a tight-fitting lid. Government nutritionists who give this advice add that the lid should also be heavy enough to prevent steam escape. The tight lid means a minimum of added water in the cooking process. Today's utensil materials do not affect the nutritive values of foods cooked in them. Impact of Tourist Dollar on Local Economy Is Outlined

Conference Speakers Discuss Ways to Attract Visitors to Area

BY DICK McDANIEL
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

FREMONT — Impact of the tourist dollar on local economy and what is being done to attract more people to the area were outlined at the touristy conference in the Grandview Supper club Thursday.

Prof. Lawrence Monthey, University of Wisconsin extension specialist and commerce instructor, told the 52 resort and motel owners, association of commerce representatives, campground operators and real estate dealers that tourist money affects the entire area.

He said only 27 per cent of the tourist dollar is spent on accommodations and the rest is "spent up and down the business district."

He said everyone benefits by having more tourists in the area. "If you realize it or not, they are helping to build schools," he added.

Develop Plan

The speaker urged every community to develop a five to 10-year plan which would be designed to improve the attraction powers of an area.

He said there are a variety of visitors, from seasonal or summer residents to day visitors. "Each contributes to the economic welfare of a community by making purchases," he said.

Tourist money last year amounted to about $4 million in responsible for the working program of the church.

Included under the local conference are the committees on public relations, personnel, stewardship and finance, pastoral relations and trustees. The program council will have working under its jurisdiction the children, youth and adult work councils and the commissions on worship and preaching, Christian education, evangelism and missions, Christian citizenship and Christian fellowship.

Local Conference

The local conference membership is made up of the chairman and secretary of each committee, financial secretary, church treasurers, lay leader, delegate to the annual conference, program council members and one delegate-at-large for each 50 church members. The annual congregation meeting is equal in authority to the local conference. Church membership totals about 525.

Quarterly meetings are held by the local conference and three times a year by the program council. Individual committees have more frequent meetings. Serving as lay leader now is Dr. Ray Elbing with the assistant lay leader being Arthur Frederick.

The Rev. Mr. Retzlaff came to Oshkosh in 1962 after serving churches at Clarno and the Sauk City area. He is a 1945 graduate of North Central College and a 1948 graduate of Evangelical Theological Seminary, both at Naperville, Ill.

He is the son of a minister and met his wife at Juda, Wis., where his father at one time served as pastor. They have six children, Peter, 18, James, 17, June, 13, Yvonne, 11, John, 5, and Joy, 2. His sister is married to the Rev. Russell E. Miller of Appleton.

On the local level, the Rev. Mr. Retzlaff is on the executive board of the Oshkosh Council of Churches and chairman of its committee on self-autonomous bodies and also its Citizens committee for Decent Literature. He is a member of the Oshkosh Ministerial Council, Oshkosh Downtown Kiwanis Club and Washington School PTA, of which he is vice president.

In the state EUB conference he is secretary of its committee on Christian education and evangelism, for nine years was registration secretary of the conference and for four years on its ways and means committee. A recent undertaking by the church is a Christian scholarship ship program to aid a young member of the church planning to enter the ministry or full-time Christian service. come in Waupaca County, $3.6 million in Outagamie County and $7.5 million in Winnebago County.

Gordon Bubolz, Appleton, chairman of the Wolf River Basin Regional Planning Commission, outlined what is being done in the area to have the counties work together for greater appraisals of the water, forest and land uses.

Exchange of Ideas

After mentioning the commission is serving in an advisory capacity, Bubolz said it is giving momentum to counties through an exchange of ideas under a regional program.

He said the commission will recommend compatible land use developments for separate industrial, residential and commercial sites so communities will remain attractive for the next 30 years or more.

The commission, he said, recognizes the need for protecting the sources of water supply by stopping the destruction of swamps, spring heads and forests.

The commission also plans to accelerate the forest effort to have more trees planted where lands are barren.

From an economy point of view, he said, the commission feels there can be no population increases without more job opportunities.

He stressed the need to improve present products and facilities for the general improvement of the region. "The problem is to organize it," he added.

"We have not done enough to sell the opportunities of the Wolf River," he said.

Bubolz said the state wants a regional effort in preserving wildlife habitat. The commission also is attempting to preserve the cultural and historical assets of the region.

First Time Cooperation

He said that for the first time in the history of Wisconsin, the county highway committees in the Wolf River region sat down with state highway department officials to talk about establishing a series of roads which would make the scenic region more accessible to sightseeing drivers.

All of the speakers at the conference contended their recommendations would be of no value unless they are accepted by the people.

If the people want to make a success of the tourist business, the farmer, the merchant, resort owner and neighbor are going to have to work together to keep the area attractive, they said.

An attractive area, however, is not sufficient to hold the interest of the visitor. A little "old time friendliness" like a shake of the hand or a pat on the back can do much to make the visitor feel he is a part of the community, they said.

It would be nice to be metropolitan enough to offer all of the facilities of a tourist area and still be friendly enough to convince the visitor that he will want to return again, they concluded.

Winnebago Board May Revise Meeting Basis

OSHKOSH — Winnebago County Board meetings may be held on a monthly basis instead of the present schedule.

Supv. E. G. Steinhilber, Oshkosh, told the sheriff and coroner's committee Friday afternoon that the question of having regular county board meetings on the second Tuesday of each month will be presented at the April 21 organization meeting.

Under the present plan, meetings may be from six to eight weeks apart.

Sewage Treatment Plant Obeys Order At Fond du Lac

FOND DU LAC — Deodorizing equipment, including a chemical spray process, was installed at the city sewage treatment plant this past week in keeping with a Circuit Court order.

In another development concerning the plant, which has been the source of community odors, the council okayed preparation of plans for installation of a new digester system at a cost of about $400,000.

Public Works Director Elmer Bray said the deodorant spray project will cost $10,500. He said the city was negotiating with companies for a drip chemical to combat sewage odors.

Bray said the process would be expensive because the city would have to use "a terrific amount of chemicals."

Several months ago a local businessman took the city to court because of the plant odors. The city was given until June to abate the odor, and the court said it should carry out the plant renovation as soon as possible. City officials are complying with the order.

Building Permits Issued at Oshkosh

Home, Apartment Building Booms in Oshkosh in 1963

OSHKOSH — New home construction and apartment building boomed in Oshkosh in 1963, compared to 1962 totals, according to the annual building survey compiled by inspector Edward Reimer.

The result was an overall increase in value of all types of building permits of about $55,000 over the previous year.

There were 154 new home permits issued during 1963 with an estimated value of $1,671,877. This compares with 97 permits with a value of $1,049,814 for 1962. Added to this are 12 new apartment buildings with a value of $269,300 compared to five apartments with a value of $70,100 the previous year.

The result is a total construction estimate of $4,397,263 for 1963 as compared to an estimate of $4,342,132 in 1962.

Other areas to show a substantial increase are church and benevolent properties, new and remodeled, $460,000 in 1963 and $69,750 in 1962.

Construction totals dropped in home repairs and commercial building, new and remodeled. However, Copps Department Store was on the 1962 total.

OSC Citizens Council Head Re-Elected

Oshkosh Banker Voted Chairman for Additional Term

OSHKOSH — Members of the Citizens Council of Wisconsin State College-Oshkosh Saturday night re-elected Boyd Jordan, Oshkosh banker, to another year's term as chairman.

Re-elected vice chairman was John C. Miller, Berlin industrialist, while Dr. Charles Goff of the college's political science department, was returned to another year as secretary-treasurer.

The Citizens Council, in the afternoon, heard a panel discussion on "Implications of Halsey Science Center Facilities for Future College Programs" which was led by Dr. R. E. Guiles, college president, Dr. Max Bowman, chemistry department chairman, Dr. Richard Netzel, physics department chairman, and Dr. James Unger, biology department chairman.

A tour of the new science center followed their talks.

Committee Discussions
Council members then divided into committees to discuss alumni association liaison, distinguished civic achievement awards, gifts and grants, legislative matters and membership. These committees then reported their findings at the Saturday evening supper.

The legislative committee, reported by Judge Lester Burr of Ripon, planned to contact various legislators in the committee members' areas to have them advise about matters affecting the state colleges. One of these matters is the proposal for additional four-year college and two-year college centers in the area now served by Wisconsin State College-Oshkosh.

The committee plans another meeting on May 16 at 10:30 a.m.

Al Broehm, Winnebago, gave the membership committee report which suggested an increase in the number of council members.

Alumni Committee
A paid alumni director and a reunion date, possibly in connection with dedication of the new addition to the Reeve Union, were suggested by the alumni liaison committee.

The gifts and grants committee suggested council members make persons aware of the need for gifts and grants for the college program and the Oshkosh State College foundation program. The committee indicated it planned to meet in May with a person who is considering donation of his vast library to the college.

George Tipler, Winnebago, in reporting for the distinguished service award committee said the committee was recommending no award be given this year but deferred until the following year. He outlined the procedure which is being suggested for the award presentation.

cus — a point to which they do not agree.

Winnebago County Republicans also are questioning whether any district funds should be used in the support of Van Pel at this time since there is a disagreement as to whether the endorsement by resolution was in order, particularly after a roll call vote had opposed endorsement.

Ahrold Huibretgse of Sheboygan County, Sixth District chairman, at last week's executive committee meeting, indicated each county could decide how it wanted the money spent.

The Winnebago County district attorney has indicated that since the caucus hassle he has been assured of support, mainly as the result of the endorsement dispute. Since that caucus, he said, he has been called upon for numerous speaking engagements.

Hubbard-Peterson VFW Post to Elect

NEENAH — Officers of Hubbard-Peterson Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will be elected at the post meeting at 8 p.m. Tuesday at Whiting Boathouse, according to James Singer, commander. Winnebago GOP In Quandary on Backing Van Pelt

Contradictory Action at Sixth District Caucus May Cause Rift

OSHKOSH — Republicans in Winnebago County are wondering whether Congressman William K. Van Pelt's request for endorsement at the Sixth District caucus meeting more than a week ago may have precipitated a wound within the party that may not easily be healed.

Winnebago County Republicans pleaded for a "no endorsement" policy at that caucus since Jack Steinhilber, Winnebago County district attorney, had announced that he too was seeking the Congressional post held by Rep. Van Pelt for seven terms.

H. R. Moore, Neenah industrialist, pleaded at the meeting that no candidate be endorsed and that the people should decide at the September primary which candidate shall go on to the general election to combat the candidate being presented by the Democrats.

Endorsement Battle

"Let's not repeat the 1962 endorsement battle," Moore requested, referring obviously to the battle for endorsement at the state convention between Philip Kuehn, who won that endorsement, and Warren Knowles.

Wilbur Renk did not seek the convention endorsement, announcing in advance he would not seek it and that he would seek the nomination in the primary. He lost that nomination and Kuehn lost the governor race to the Democratic candidate, John Reynolds.

This year both Knowles and Renk seem to have the party's blessing with Knowles as the only announced candidate for governor and Renk as the only announced candidate for U. S. senator. Both seem likely to get the state convention endorsement for those offices in May.

Caucus Confusion

Confusion seemed to reign at the Sixth District caucus a week ago as to whether the delegates from the seven counties did or did not endorse Van Pelt for an eighth term. Winnebago county's motion not to endorse a candidate had carried on a roll call vote of county delegates.

However, later in the meeting and after some delegates had left the room, the resolutions committee presented a resolution endorsing Van Pelt and this was declared to have been approved by those present on a voice vote. Winnebago County delegates thought the strength of voices on each side had been about equal if not a bit louder in favor of their viewpoint.

The executive committee of the Winnebago County Republican party is scheduled to meet Wednesday night. One of the issues coming up at that meeting is whether Winnebago County funds should be sent to the district for use in promoting the candidacy of Van Pelt as the candidate endorsed by the caucus.

Fond du Lac Teen Bar Club Controversy Builds Up Steam

'Beer Bar' License Fight To Come Before Court Monday

BY WILLIAM C. CAREY

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

FOND DU LAC—The beer bar battle is brewing hot and heavy in the nearby Town of Fond du Lac.

Members of the town board have revoked the license of the Starlite Club, a tavern recently converted to a teen bar in defiance of town policy banning minor bars.

The dispute between the Starlite management and board will wind up in court Monday at 10 a.m. as result of developments over the weekend in the controversy which has attracted statewide attention.

Atty. Peter Porath, president of the corporation which runs the club on State 175 just outside the city's S. Main Street limits, obtained a restraining order and had it served on the board Saturday.

The temporary order, issued by County Judge Jerold Murphy late Friday, restrains the board from shutting the bar down until the court makes a review of the dispute Monday morning.

Chester Costello, the town's outspoken chairman, said the board's legal counsel would be ready to answer the court order obtained by Porath.

Undersheriff Harry Rozek served the court summons on Costello at his farm Saturday morning. "We expected it and the board will be ready to present its case in court," Costello said.

Slap State

The board's revocation of the club's class B beer and liquor licenses Thursday night, following a special hearing for Porath last Monday, also represented a slap at the attorney general's office and state beverage and tax division.

State officials have issued an informal opinion that if liquor is removed from the premises, the license is considered inactive, and the establishment can be operated as a minor bar with persons under 21 permitted on the premises.

The opinion gets around the state law that no one under 21

Accident Rates Drop In Oshkosh

OSHKOSH—Accidents in Oshkosh have dropped for the first three months of this year as compared with the same period last year, but there has been an increase in the number of persons injured.

Lt. Frank Burgert of the Oshkosh Police Department Saturday reported accidents this year total 179, in which 31 persons were injured, compared with 215 accidents and 28 injuries for the same period last year. There were no traffic deaths either year during this period.

March accidents totalled 59, with 10 persons injured. The same month last year had 65 accidents, but only eight injured.

Of the 10 injured last month, one was from 15 to 19 years of age, three were from 25 to 34. Four were from 35 to 44 and one each in the 45 to 54 and 55 to 64 year age groups.

In last month's accidents, 86 of the drivers involved were men and 86 of these same 102 drivers were local residents.

Rev. Homer H. Retzlaff

sideration by the First EUB Church would be about $125,000. Property already has been secured south of the church building.

The congregation several weeks ago saw completion of a $5,000 program to remodel the foyer, women's lounge and install new doors. Last year a $5,000 program was completed which included a completely new ceiling for the sanctuary, painting of the interior, a new reredos with an indirectly lighted cross.

New Administrative Setup
New this year is the administrative structure of the church and the congregation is in its "growing pains" to adapt to the new program set up by the denomination's general conference. The change sets up a local conference charged with providing facilities and a program council, subordinate to the local conference, which is responsible for the church's operation.

Judge Sitter to Speak To Bar Association

OSHKOSH—Winnebago County Bar Association members will meet at the Town House here at noon Monday, according to County Judge James V. Sitter, president. Judge Sitter will outline his court's procedure on jury trial requests.

Preceding the meeting, County Judge James Sarre will have a meeting of attorneys especially interested in small claims matters in the Juvenile Court Room at the Courthouse at 11:30 a.m. Monday.

This meeting will be in respect to adjournments, defaults and dismissals of small claims matters.

Guest conductor for this concert will be Stanley Nosal, associate conductor of the Kenosha Symphony Orchestra. He will share the baton with Harold W. Arentsen, founder and conductor of the Oshkosh Civic Symphony since its beginning.

His background also includes study with the finest violin teachers in Turkey, England and the United States. He has performed as soloist with the British Broadcasting Co. in London. Nosal will conduct the Oshkosh Civic Symphony for the violin solo by Kopuz and also will appear with him in the Bach "Double Violin Concerto in D Minor."

Beethoven's "Romance in F," one of two written for the violin, will be the solo selection for Kopuz.

Opening the concert by the 87-piece orchestra will be the "Overture to the Marriage of Figaro" by Mozart which has long been a concert favorite.

After the violin solo and preceding the intermission will be one of the best known works of Franz Schubert, his "Symphony No. 8 in B Minor," best known as the "Unfinished Symphony."

The "Double Violin Concerto in D Minor" by Bach which will feature Kopuz and Nosal will be after the intermission. The closing selection will be another favorite of concert-goers, Borodin's "Polovetsian Dances" from his opera "Prince Igor."

Tonight's concert is the fifth of the season for the symphony and its major program of the season.

Race Will be 6th District Candidate

FOND DU LAC—John Race, an unsuccessful candidate for Congress in 1962 when he was defeated by Republican incumbent William K. Van Pelt, today announced his candidacy for Congress in the Sixth Congressional district on the Democratic ticket.

He won the Democratic nomination last year in a contest with Dr. Gordon Drake of the Oshkosh State College faculty.

Race, a member of the state Coordinating Committee for Higher Education, has been active in many local, state and political issues for many years. He is a member of the Wisconsin State Board of Vocational and Adult Education and has served as a Fond du Lac County Board supervisor since 1958.

He also is a member of the Fond du Lac District Comprehensive Mental Health Planning Committee and a director of Sheltered Workshop, Inc., Fond du Lac.

In party activities he has been chairman of the Fond du Lac County Democratic Party for seven years, vice chairman of the Sixth District Democratic Party for four years and served as a platform and elections committee member at state Democratic conventions for the last five years.

In announcing his candidacy, Race criticized Van Pelt. He charged Van Pelt's "68 per cent participation in roll call voting in the last session of Congress was the poorest of the 10 Congressmen from Wisconsin."

Race is married and has three daughters. He is employed at Giddings & Lewis Machine Tool Co.

Sheriff, Coroner Committee to Talk On Salaries

OSHKOSH—Sheriff and Coroner Committee members will meet at 2 p.m. Tuesday to come to agreement on the salary and meal schedule for the office of sheriff while County Park, Fair and Conservation Committee members plan to meet at 7 p.m. Thursday and again at 8:30 a.m. Saturday.

The Sheriff and Coroner Committee discussed the salary matter Friday but postponed action until Tuesday afternoon. It also then will award bids for three new squad cars.

Thursday night's meeting of the Park, Fair and Conservation Committee will concern the bids for the produce and 4-H building at the fairgrounds. The committee is asking Fair Association officers to meet with them that night since bids for the building exceeded the budget by $6,500. Where the additional money will come from is the question to be discussed.

The committee also will discuss whether certain parts of the building should be eliminated or the building size reduced to cut the cost back to under the $50,000 placed in the budget for that structure.

Saturday morning's meeting will be on the purchase of additional land adjoining the county's campsite near Lake Poygan west of Winnebago. Members will view the land proposed for purchase.

OSC Prom Theme to be 'Austrian'

OSHKOSH — Prom goes at Oshkosh State College will find themselves in an "Austrian Ballroom," replete with an eight-foot crystal chandelier, at this year's college prom in Albee Hall on April 25.

Les Elgard's Orchestra will provide the music.

According to James W. Hook, Oshkosh, general co-chairman, gauze and crystal will be featured in the decorations and unusual lighting techniques will be used to create mood.

Voting for prom royalty will be April 20 and 21. The king and queen will be chosen from the senior class. One man from each class and his escort will be featured in the court.

Pre-Prom Picnic

Opening the festivities will be a pre-prom picnic at South Park in Oshkosh on April 24.

Sharing the general chairmanship with Hook is Donald Van Ert of Gleason. Co-chairmen of promotions for the prom are Anne Moore, Oshkosh, and Mary Jo Perk, Dubuque, Iowa. All committed chairmen will be honored guests at the dance.

Two Interior Remodeling Programs costing $5,000 each were undertaken last year and this year by First Evangelical United Brethren Church. A new ceiling for the sanctuary plus redecorating was carried out last year while this year's project included new windows and doors leading into the sanctuary and a remodeling of the church foyer. The church has one of the largest auditoriums for seating capacity in the city. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Atty. Peter Porath, Fond du Lac, president of the corporation which defied Town of Fond du Lac Board policy and converted the Starlite tavern into a minor bar, was summoned before the board this week to defend his action. St. Norbert Chamber Singers to Give Concert at Oshkosh Thursday

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

OSHKOSH — The singing ambassadors from the land of the Green Knight, the St. Norbert College Chamber Singers, will appear at Lourdes High School Thursday, under the sponsorship of the Lourdes Band Parents organization.

The 23-member group, under the direction of Dudley Birder, will present its "Baroque to Broadway — 1964" show at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Lourdes High School gymnasium. The singers tentatively are scheduled to give an afternoon program for Lourdes students.

The first part of the program will feature choral works, including "Ave Maria," "Black is the Color of My True Love's Hair," and "Mary's Little Boy Chide." The second half of the performance is devoted to Broadway show tunes such as "Nothing Like A Dame," "Climb Every Mountain," "Young and Foolish," and "There's No Business Like Show Business." During the second part of the show the collegiate musicians are required to sing, dance and play musical instruments.

Many Appearances
The chamber singers, organized five years ago by Birder, an associate professor of music at St. Norbert, make an annual spring tour with their show. This year the group has appeared in Chicago, South Bend, Ind., Detroit, and numerous Wisconsin cities. They have traveled over 1,600 miles and performed before over 6,500 people.

The collegians entered the recording ranks last year when they cut a 33 1/3 rpm long play album of songs from the show and a 45 rpm disc of "The Twelve Days of Christmas." "Birder, demanding in his selection of talent, holds auditions for the group each fall. The turnover of personnel is kept to a minimum. Thousands of Valley Area People To Receive Sabin Vaccine Today

Clinics to Start; Outagamie Final April 19

Thousands of Fox Valley area residents will receive Sabin oral vaccine at public clinics today and next Sunday.

Residents of Neenah-Menasha and Waupaca and Shawano counties, will get doses of anti-polio vaccine today.

An estimated 94,000 persons are expected to receive their final doses of vaccine in Outagamie County on Sunday, April 19.

Last month when the Outagamie County Medical Society conducted the first phase of the "Sabin on Sunday" program, it drew 94,000 persons to the 10 clinics and doctors' offices a few days later.

Dr. George Behnke, Kaukauna, medical director for the county's mass immunization program, said Saturday that next Sunday's clinics will be at the following sites in Outagamie County:

Outagamie Sites
— Morgan, Madison Junior High, St. Pius, Jefferson and Huntley schools in Appleton.

— J. R. Gerrits Junior High at Kimberly, and Kaukauna, Seymour, New London and Hortonville High schools.

Clinics will be open from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. This time there will be no "makeup period," as there was following the first "Sabin on Sunday" when residents who were unable to attend the clinics had an opportunity to obtain vaccine from their family physician during the following week.

At the first clinics, Outagamie residents received Type I vaccine and made a 25-cent donation.

200,000 Drops

Next Sunday, residents attending clinics will get one dose, combining Types II and III vaccine, with a small cube of sugar. A 25-cent donation will be requested.

However, anyone unable to make a contribution still will receive the vaccine and no questions will be asked, Dr. Behnke said.

Because two types of vaccine will be administered at once, it has been estimated the Outagamie County pharmacists and other medical volunteers will prepare close to 200,000 drops of vaccine.

The center for the countywide medical operation will again be Doctors' Park on Appleton's northeast side. Doctors, nurses, pharmacists and many others are contributing their services.

Dr. Behnke announced that county residents who did not attend the clinics last month and failed to receive Type I vaccine should still turn out next Sunday and get Types II and III.

He said after June 1 these same people could go to their family physician and get a dose of Type I, completing the immunization cycle.

Names or addresses of persons receiving vaccine will not be required, Dr. Behnke added.

County Authorities
However, county medical authorities stressed that persons must receive the three types to gain full immunity against polio. There should be no after or side effects from the vaccine, they said.

More than 100 volunteers will conduct Sabin clinics in the Twin Cities today under the sponsorship of Neenah-Menasha doctors and pharmacists.

Clinics will be open from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. in both cities. At Neenah the clinics will be at Neenah High and Taft Grade schools. The centers at Menasha will be at Menasha High and Jefferson grade schools.

Seven Centers
In Waupaca County today, seven centers will be in operation from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. to Rothe, Fond du Lac, third, and Bryan Volp, a 16-year-old from Marinette, who won honorable mention for his 1910 vintage coal mine.

Second place in the locomotive class went to S. K. Sindahl, North Fond du Lac, with a mountain locomotive. Stan Bye, 404 1/2 Nicolet Blvd., Menasha, took third with an "O" gauge steam locomotive.

First place in the car division went to Art Kaufman, Fond du Lac, for a gondola, and third place was won by Robert Wildcut, Oshkosh, for a box car.

Model Hobbyist From Menasha Is Triple Winner

OSHKOSH — John Franzen, route 1, Menasha, won three prizes in the seventh annual Oshkosh Model Railroad Association contest at Oshkosh.

His Denver, South Park & Pacific locomotive won the best locomotive award and an ash car took second place in the railroad car category. Both are HO scale models.

Franzen also won the "best of show" award for his 1884 model hand built locomotive.

Bob Wildish, Oshkosh, also was a triple winner. He received the Wollin Cup, a special award, for an oil derrick in the structures division. The derrick received first place in the division. Wildish also won an honorable mention for another structures entry.

Other structures winners are Keith Sindahl, North Fond du Lac, second place; Jeronette to Rothe, Fond du Lac, third; and Bryan Volp, a 16-year-old from Marinette, who won honorable mention for his 1910 vintage coal mine.

Second place in the locomotive class went to S. K. Sindahl, North Fond du Lac, with a mountain locomotive. Stan Bye, 404 1/2 Nicolet Blvd., Menasha, took third with an "O" gauge steam locomotive.

First place in the car division went to Art Kaufman, Fond du Lac, for a gondola, and third place was won by Robert Wildcut, Oshkosh, for a box car.

21 Foreign Students Observe Town Meeting

Oshkosh Service Clubs Take Youths on Tour Of Industries, Facilities in Winnebagoland

OSHKOSH — Democracy in action — the town meeting — was observed by 21 foreign students attending the University of Wisconsin as they visited the Town of Algoma annual meeting Saturday afternoon, hearing budgets discussed and town projects debated.

The 21 foreign students plus three children, ranging in age from six months to six years, are guests in the homes of Oshkosh Lakeshore Kiwanis Club and Oshkosh Downtown Kiwanis Club members as part of the second annual international weekend sponsored by the Oshkosh Lakeshore Kiwanis Club.

The group of students arrived by private car Friday night and began their weekend with a dinner at the Oshkosh Community YMCA. Each student spoke on his own country and of current problems in those countries.

Countries represented were Cyprus, Brazil, Indonesia, Portugal, Turkey, British West Indies, India, Germany, Nigeria, Argentina and Japan.

Saturday morning's program included a visit to the Seven-Up Bottling Co. to view an industry, to the Fahrwald farms to view a dairy operation and to the dairy farm of Paul Fowler. Most of the foreign students are studying various agricultural fields such as dairying, agricultural engineering and agricultural journalism. Some are teaching at the university.

Noon Luncheon
A luncheon supplied by various local firms was held at noon at the YMCA and then the group visited the Town of Algoma meeting, the Paine Art Center and Oshkosh High School in the afternoon.

After dinner Saturday night in the homes of their hosts, they were guests of the town and gown association at the concert Saturday night by Pianist Ralph Votapek. Today's plans call for attending church with their host and dinner at the host's home prior to leaving at 3 p.m. today for Madison. Co-chairmen for the international weekend are Robert Meyer and Russell Williams. Sherman Anderson was in charge of transporting the students. They were taken on their tours in the bus of Scout Troop 8 of Washington School, with Scoutmaster George Wilcox and Assistant Scoutmaster Jerry Pratch in charge of the project. The foreign students stayed in the homes of Paul Fergot, Nile Friday, Hugh Hinderacher, Starr Clark, Courtland Carrier, Dr. E. B. Pfefferkorn, Homer Pratt, Dr. Quintin Metzger, the Rev. Roy Deming, W. E. Schneider, Paul Fowler, Richard Mueller, Floyd Miller and Russell Williams.

Clarence Westfahl, county 4-H director, will speak to the Lakeside 4-H Club at its meeting at 8 p.m. Monday at the Town and Gown Association at the Grange School.

Many Problems Trouble U.S. in Southwest Asia

BY ROBERT EUNSON

TOKYO (AP)—If Communist expansion is to be stopped in the Far East, Americans are going to have to pay more, and do more, throughout Southeast Asia.

This conclusion is the result of a survey conducted among United States and local government officials in South Viet Nam, Indonesia, Malaysia and Thailand.

The dilemma the United States faces in Asia can be glimpsed in two areas of action—South Viet Nam and Malaysia.

South Viet Nam

The South Viet Nam war, dragging on for years, has cost millions of dollars and the lives of nearly 200 Americans. It has required four missions in two years by U.S. Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, and the prescription is still the same—more men, more money.

Officials on the scene who think the United States should pull out of Viet Nam are in the minority.

Most are divided between two schools of thought, those who favor a buildup similar to Korea, with at least five U.S. divisions hunting the Communist Viet Cong guerrillas in the swamps, or those who believe U.S. support should continue along present lines, with increased air attacks on the Viet Cong supply routes and a blockade of North Vietnamese seaports.

Lodge View

There are Vietnamese who believe that the "more" the United States should do includes taking over the government in Saigon. U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge is not among them. He is reported to feel that direct leadership by America could prove disastrous, even possibly ending in world war.

But there are Vietnamese who believe they are incapable of governing themselves. Two coups in three months haven't encouraged the feeling of national solidarity.

Viet Cong elements have bombed an American theater and a crowded stadium, where GI's were playing baseball. However, neither the U.S. Embassy nor the U.S. Information Agency have been attacked in recent months.

Great Promise

Ambassador Lodge doesn't like talking on the record, but his thoughts are said to be these:

Maj. Gen. Nguyen Khanh has shown great promise since he took over the government in its latest explosion. In the past few weeks he has taken long strides in trying to bring order and get on with the war. He should be given a fair chance, and the United States should support him to the hilt.

Unlike South Viet Nam, Malaysia doesn't need more money nor more guns at present. What these former British colonies—Singapore, Sarawak and North Borneo—seem to need at the moment is stronger moral support from Washington.

All-Out War

Some experts believe all-out war could be sparked sooner in the jungles of Borneo than in the rice paddies of South Viet Nam. That may be part of the reason President Johnson sent Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy to Asia in January.

British troops already are defending North Borneo from Indonesian forces, regulars and guerrillas. Should it become necessary for Malaysia to call upon Australia and New Zealand for help, and should a shooting war develop, the United States could become entangled.

The Anzus Pact, signed between Australia, New Zealand and the United States after World War II, could propel America into a full scale war against Indonesia, some fear. The brother of the late President John F. Kennedy was able to effect a cease-fire in Borneo and lay the groundwork for a conference involving Indonesia, Malaysia and the Philippines.

But the conference couldn't agree on continuing the cease-fire. Indonesian troops already were across the line and Indonesian Foreign Minister Subandrio refused to pull them back.

The area is rich in natural resources and promises much if the free world can preserve this toddler among nations long enough to get its economy going. But the collapse of the Borneo truce and the peace talks have disenchanted Malaysia government leaders in Kuala Lumpur with the United States.

U.S. diplomats in Kuala Lumpur are reluctant to discuss their government's role in the Malaysia crisis, which they insist began and ended with Kennedy's mission. The Malaysians feel it hasn't ended yet, and should extend to an open warning to President Sukarno of Indonesia.

Doing Well

In the Indonesian capital of Jakarta, where they burned the British Embassy but haven't yet put the torch to American property, the American ambassador feels the United States is doing as well as can be expected.

"We have our ups and downs," Howard P. Jones said recently, "but in terms of the over-all U.S. position in this country, I find there has been no major shift in our welcome here."

The unhappiness in Cambodia is disconcerting. The U.S. Embassy was plundered and the American flag torn from its staff recently, petulant antics which pleased Prince Norodom Sihanouk's countrymen. Sihanouk seems determined to prove his hate for America is sincere.

No Right

He has been telling six million Cambodians that Americans had no right to end their aid program when he told them to end it.

This kind of instability led to the burning of the embassy and may lead to an alliance between Peking and Phnom Penh unless neutrality of some kind can be reached.

The trouble is that the kind of neutrality France, China's new friend in Asia, suggests and Peking accepts are not the same.

DeGaulle

President Charles de Gaulle is suggesting that Viet Nam, Cambodia and Laos, all former French colonies known once as Indochina, get together and form a neutral existence. That's fine with China, so long as all the neutrals are Communists.

The two million inhabitants of Laos have been living under a neutrality system for nearly two years, but Prince Souvanna Phouma, their premier, has been unable to impress the Pathet Lao with the meaning of the word neutral.

As for Burma, they won't let any foreigner into Burma for more than 24 hours while Prime Minister Ne Win tries to control the six or eight leftist elements struggling to sack his government.

Thailand

That leaves Thailand, and up to now the Thais remain friends of Uncle Sam. Gen. Thanom Kittikachorn took over the government reins in Bangkok last December when Premier Sarit Thanarat died.

The late premier had been America's friend during the five years he ruled, and since his successor was No. 2 man in that government it is expected that the status quo will hold.

Are You Helping Coin Shortage?

BY DOLORES E. HOFFMAN

IOLA — If, when you learn that your 1942 to 1945 nickels now have an intrinsic value of 6 or 7 cents, you decide to become a numismatist, you are a part of the cause of the coin crisis in the United States, according to the view of Chester L. Krause, publisher of the Numismatic News and Coins Magazine and a member of the President's Assay Commission.

"Collectors and hoarders have been attracted to numismatics in the last two years because of the skyrocketing of silver was forced to dip into its reserve.

This reserve included some rare and semi-rare dates such as the 1903-O (New Orleans) mintage which was valued by collectors at $1,500. The reappearance of this rare date poured fuel on the rising silver dollar temperature, long lines of people seeking bags of silver dollars to scan for the magic dates besieged the treasury last month until the reserve supply fell from 100 million dollars in January, 1963, to a mere three million.

Gold Backing

The Assay Office in New York, faced with this rapid depletion, began redeeming silver certificates with silver granuals.

Earlier, on June 4, 1963, President Kennedy signed a bill changing the backing of one dollar and two dollar bills from silver to gold which prompted the new issue of Federal Reserve Notes in one dollar denomination backed by 25 per cent gold reserve deposit. This eventually may mean the end of silver certificates.

These actions, however, did not attack the economic fact that the silver in circulating coins — such as the World War II nickels — was mounting in value beyond the face value of the coins.

Melted Coins

The wartime nickels, among other coins, are being melted down for their silver content. The nickels were of an alloy composed of 35 per cent silver. Krause feels that the metal in our coins will soon be made of an alloy of base metals to prevent their destruction for the silver.

While the silver fever was removing coins from circulation, the treasury introduced the Kennedy half-dollar to replace the Franklin piece in circulation for the last 15 years. Because of the publicity about this issue and the sentimental value people placed on the memorial, the first coins rapidly disappeared from circulation into old and new coin collections.

Complimented

Krause, however, said the treasury should be complimented on its distribution program

Coin Expert Chester L. Krause

prices after the ceiling price of silver was lifted in July, 1962," he explained.

Numismatics is the art of coin collecting and a numismatist, hence, is a coin collector.

However, there are more reasons behind the coin crisis than taking the tokens out of circulation and the results of the crisis are likely to be far reaching.

Cartwheels

The most spectacular, recent development in the crisis involved the rush on silver dollars last month.

When the minting of silver dollars was discontinued in 1935, the United States Treasury held several million "cartwheels" in reserve to back silver certificates in circulation. As the free price of silver started to climb, the demand for silver dollars followed suit and the treasury for the coin. All banks received an allotted quota which discouraged hoarding.

He does not think the Kennedy coin will ever gain any appreciable numismatic value and that it will be of a relatively short issuance because of the possible change in coin alloy.

With the rush on the rare New Orleans silver dollar and the speedy disappearance of the first Kennedy halves, accusing fingers have been poked at the numismatists as the blame for the coin crisis.

Other Factors

However, Krause contends the accusations can not stand up since not more than 5 per cent of the shortage can be laid at the true coin collector's feet. He does not believe that with the increase of leisure time more people will be attracted to coin collecting as a hobby.

The ever-growing number of coin operated vending machines in the country and the attraction of the increasing intrinsic value of silver coins to money hoarders are at least two more major reasons for the shortage, he says.

Perhaps a more basic reason for the shortage is the overburdened facilities at the U. S. mints. As a member of the Assay Commission, Krause watched the averted production of coins at the Philadelphia mint in December of last year. He said every nook and cranny of the building was being used to try to meet the increasing demand for coins. Vaults designed to hold silver dollar reserves were being removed in December to make room for more machinery to increase production.

Congress also must take its share of the blame, he says. A $30 million appropriation has been authorized to erect a building to handle the minting demands, but Congress has failed, so far, to raise money for planning such a building and the plans can precede building by from two to three years.

Historian Looks at World on Eve of 75th Birthday

BY MILTON MARMOR

LONDON (AP) — Arnold J. Toynbee, the distinguished historian-philosopher, reaches his 75th birthday convinced that the future will bring East and West together in a new world society.

He said that the mixture of the two civilizations will start mainly on a Western basis.

The eminent English scholar brings an Olympian approach to the study of mankind. He sees history falling into civilization patterns and views them in the whole context of their life spans.

In an interview with The Associated Press as he approached his birthday next Tuesday he foresaw a detente between the Soviet Union and the United States.

Visit Africa

The interview was in his study at the Royal Institute of International Affairs where he has been director for 30 years. Soon after, he left for Africa with his wife. He will be in Benghazi at the University of Libya on his birthday. His wife became 70 while they were in Ethiopia. They also visited Nigeria, Sudan and the United Arab Republic.

"America is becoming a bit of a free enterprise country. I think there will be a compromise between Western civilization and the others.

"There will be mixture, a common world civilization that will start by being on a Western basis. It will be altered as different people come into it.

New Society

"I think that what is most likely to happen is that the West will provide the framework for the new world society which will be mainly Western to start, but as the Chinese become more important—and the Africans to some degree—they'll put their civilizations into this."

Toynbee's monumental "A Study of History" made a great impression on the scholastic world. He began the 12-volume study in 1927 and finished it in 1961—all written in longhand.

The study aroused admiration in many quarters and some antagonism from historians with a different approach. An abridgement of his first six volumes became a best seller in 1947 in the United States.

Toynbee, formerly a professor at the University of London, attacks history from the viewpoint of the patterns that emerge with the rise and fall of civilizations. He looks at their birth, growth and decay.

His view is that the decay usually results from some wrong response to a challenge that confronts the civilization.

In the interview Toynbee was emphatic on the issue of Communist China—an issue that is a sore spot with United States foreign policy makers.

Huge China

"China will overshadow the whole relations of the world," he said. "By the year 2000 she will be pretty well over half the population of the world. The Chinese are just, able, capable and a bit more hard-working than the rest of us.

"We shall all be thinking about China. It will draw us together."

By "us", he said, he meant most people outside China, including the Soviet Union.

"Generally, in the past China has expanded peacefully and not by military force. Certainly, China will be the greatest single power in the world by the year 2000."

The future, he thinks, will see less of a struggle between the United States and the Soviet Union.

"I think we and the Russians will become more and more concerned about China—and this will bring us together," he added. "But I don't think the Chinese will try and conquer the world. On the whole they are moderate and sensible and not bloody minded."

Greatest Power

At 75, Toynbee is a pleasant, good-natured man with a gentle sense of humor. He gives this counsel to the human race.

"Be patient. Don't liquidate the human race. Put up with your troubles, restrain yourselves. Think above all that if you don't liquidate the world now there are 2,000 million years that are still to go. Seventy-seven million generations are waiting to be born; that's a big responsibility."

He also gives this advice to the United States:

For U. S.

"I'd say it's going to be very hard not to recognize the existence of China when she is half the world. I would also say: try not to be fanatical. Dulles (John Foster Dulles, late U.S.

secretary of state) put a kind of religion into America's relations with Russia. Don't feel that your opponent must be the devil. Don't think you are always on the side of the angels. I think it's the Puritan spirit in America that makes Americans so fanatical. The English exported their Puritans to America."

Nevertheless, Toynbee said, he likes Americans because they are "very warm-hearted and sincere. When you go there you have a feeling of friendship and a feeling that they mean it. Then there is a kind of frankness and directness about American life that I like very much. I probably like it because they give you a chance. If I were a Negro I might feel differently."

Frequent Visitor

Toynbee has been a frequent visitor to the United States. He has lectured at many colleges and universities, and has seen more of the country than many of its inhabitants. His next visit will be in September when he goes to the University of Denver for a stay of about three months. In December he will lecture at New Mexico State University. After that he will spend several months at New College in Sarasota, Fla.

Toynbee was asked what men of the 20th century will have a place in history.

"Gandhi, first of all," he answered. "In the past changes generally meant violence. And in the atomic age we can't have violence if we are to survive. Gandhi invented a way to make big changes without violence. He didn't know he was working in the atomic age, but he was. We also must consider his spiritual greatness. He taught his followers to fight the British without hating them."

"Then, Einstein, of course. Einstein didn't know he was a great man. Franklin Roosevelt—Churchill—those names come to my mind first of all."

"I hope Khrushchev will be the man in history who led Russia off the Stalin line. If he succeeds, he will live as a benefactor. We'd better treasure him, I think."

The Smile on the Face of British historian-philosopher Arnold Toynbee is an optimistic one. Toynbee, who will be 75 on April 14, thinks that the world will survive the atomic age and that East and West will come together in a new world society. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Congressman Asserts MacArthur Wanted Ike Showdown With Stalin

Proposed to Rearm Germany, Japan if Refused Freedom

WASHINGTON (AP) — General of the Army Douglas MacArthur's post-Korean plan to end the cold war involved threatening Soviet dictator Joseph Stalin that Germany and Japan would be completely rearm ed unless the people of the European Red satellite countries were granted self-determination, a congressman has said.

Rep. Dorn

Rep. William Jennings Bryan Dorn, D-S.C., said MacArthur freely told him of this plan to bring the Soviet Union into line in an interview at the general's Waldorf-Astoria tower suite in New York. Dorn said he was uncertain of the year, but thought it was 1956.

The gist of MacArthur's news was the missing part of newspaper accounts this week that projected the general into a swirl of posthumous controversy.

Articles Mentioned Plan

In a 10-year-old interview published Wednesday as MacArthur was lying in state in the Capitol rotunda, Bob Considine of the Hearst Headline Service disclosed the existence of the plan and described how MacArthur tried to convince Dwight D. Eisenhower, then the president-elect, to put it into effect.

Considine wrote that MacArthur told him, "I don't feel it would be fair to reveal my plan to you. It would be an unfair burden on you as a reporter."

Dorn said there was no such reluctance when he and two other congressmen visited MacArthur in 1956. He said MacArthur revealed to him "for the first time, and I have kept it confidential, the nature of his conversation with President-elect Eisenhower and John Foster Dulles in December 1952."

Suggested to Ike

"The plan suggested by MacArthur to President-elect Eisenhower and John Foster Dulles was to threaten Russia with a complete rearmament of Germany and Japan, possibly including nuclear power, unless Stalin agreed to live up to his promise of the self-determination of the peoples of Poland, East Germany and Central Europe."

That description was written by Dorn Monday night and inserted in the Congressional Record, as a minor part of a long eulogy of MacArthur. It escaped notice until Friday, when a reporter interviewed Dorn about it and was given details. The printed Dorn account predated the publication of the Considine account.

Description Confirmed

In Mankato, Kan., former Rep. Wint Smith, one of the two congressmen who accompanied Dorn, said he agreed with Dorn's description except that "I don't remember that MacArthur said he had told Eisenhower those things."

Smith said it was his recollection that the interview took place in 1954.

The third congressman, Rep. Lawrence K. Smith, R-Wis., died in 1958.

MacArthur's aide, Maj. Gen. Courtney Whitney, who Dorn said also attended the meeting, declined comment.

The Considine interview and one by Scripps-Howard reporter Jim G. Lucas published this week also after a lapse of 10 years both mentioned the general's plans to win the Korean War by using nuclear bombs across the Yalu in Red China, sowing a five-mile belt of radioactive cobalt along the border, and bringing in Nationalist Chinese troops from Formosa to mop up the Reds.

Visited Tokyo in 1951

Dorn said he visited MacArthur in 1951 in Tokyo just before he was fired as Far East commander by President Harry Truman.

"I didn't know about the cobalt thing," Dorn said. "He didn't mention that to me in no alternative but to accept it.

Considine interviewed him—when he was embittered, I don't know. But to me he made no wild statements about cobalt or atom bombs. He just said with airpower he could lick the Red Chinese in three months."

In the interview about the plan to end the cold war, Dorn said MacArthur emphasized to Eisenhower that Stalin was an old man who might die at any moment, and that Eisenhower should act immediately after taking office.

Stalin Realist

"Stalin is a realist and you could threaten him," Dorn quoted MacArthur as telling the president-elect.

"Stalin is a cold, hard bargainer who understands power, military power. Stalin would have

If he doesn't, then go ahead and rearm Germany and Japan, and put Russia on the defensive and keep Russia on the defensive.

"You are climaxing your career as a great victorious general, as President of the United States. All the Allied world is behind you. No nation would dare to question you. Your prestige is so great you're in a position to sit down with Stalin and meet with him."

Urges Prompt Action

"Today you're a hero, you have a halo around your head. But if you wait six months, you will have a lot of political bickering, the halo will be gone and Stalin will laugh at you."

Considine's story said MacArthur told Eisenhower, "You have the greatest opportunity for good since the birth of Jesus Christ," and that Eisenhower at the end jumped up, his face flushed, and said, "It's magnificent."

But Considine quoted MacArthur as saying the "cool, calculating voice" of Dulles broke in and dissuaded Eisenhower.

Dorn said he did not write out an account of MacArthur's cold war plan after the interview but "that's what he told me in New York. He did say this very distinctly. I remember it as plain as day."

minute Cabinet Room conference when Johnson was asked for a progress report on withdrawal of Soviet troops from Cuba.

"There are still some troops there," he said, "but the number has declined substantially." He said he didn't "want to get in any numbers game."

The President opened the session by reading a statement in which he said emergency White House negotiations aimed at avoiding a national rail strike represented "collective bargaining in the truest sense of the word." He said his aim is "to get consent rather than to get coercion."

Domestic Issues

Asked if he would seek emergency legislation should the rail talks fail, Johnson replied: "I am not here to bury collective bargaining. I am here to preserve it."

Domestic politics also figured in the news conference, with the first major question dealing with the future of Henry Cabot Lodge, U.S. ambassador to South Viet Nam who is regarded as a potential Republican opponent for Johnson in the November presidential balloting.

Johnson said he knows of no possibility of Lodge resigning, that "his services there have been very satisfactory and he has done a very constructive job."

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson was asked at his news conference Saturday about his reaction to the showing of Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace in the Wisconsin Presidential Primary Tuesday.

Mr. Johnson answered: "Gov. Wallace got 25 per cent of the votes and 75 per cent voted against him."

The southern segregationist polled 261,148 votes in the Democratic primary but won no delegates. Wisconsin's Gov. John W. Reynolds, heading a favorite son delegate slate pledged to Johnson, received 508,597.

Asked to speculate on the kind of showing Wallace might make in the Indiana and Maryland primaries next month, the President said he is "a very poor prophet" and suggested waiting for the results.

towed here and later to Sturgeon Bay. He said no attempt would be made to start her main engines.

Mead also said a third buoy tender assigned to assist the Mesquite, the Woodbine, would be released and sent back to her home port at Grand Haven, Mich.

The Coast Guard said unusually low water levels probably were responsible for the Mesquite's grounding. Under ordinary conditions, Coast Guard officials said, the Mesquite could have floated over the shoal.

The Mesquite draws about 13 feet of water. An officer aboard the Mesquite, contacted late last Saturday afternoon by ship to shore telephone, said soundings showed only about 12 feet of water where the vessel ran aground.

There were no injuries to the Mesquite's 45-man crew. No one was injured on the Purves either.

The Mesquite was freed on the third attempt Saturday. Two attempts failed earlier Saturday morning when a 10-inch hawser from the Sundew snapped. Following the first failure, the Woodbine transferred several pumps to the Mesquite which were used to dry the engine room, which at one time was under five feet of water.

After the Mesquite was scheduled to arrive here, crewmen were to reinforce the temporary patch to permit her transfer to Surgeon Bay, her home port. Although there was no official confirmation, an inquiry into the grounding was probable. Such hearings are routine following accidents involving U. S. vessels.

rests for music and description of the sights.

Visit to Moon

The visitor will, in effect, be whisked to the moon to see man and machine at work exploring it. There will be scenes depicting how man will conquer the polar areas, jungles, deserts and live, work and play underneath the seas. The tour lasts 15 minutes and concludes by taking the citizen of today into the city of tomorrow.

General Electric — A multifaceted exhibition called "Progressland" will feature a demonstration of thermonuclear fission, seeing and hearing an atomic blast.

A "Carousel of Progress," witnessed from moving seats, employs lifelike and animated human figures created by Walt Disney. It depicts home living conditions from the 1880s to the present.

Ride Through History

A "skydome spectacular" uses the building's inner dome in planetarium-like fashion for a striking dramatization of the power of nature's energy sources.

Bell Telephone—The keynote of the exhibition will be another chair ride with music and description through the history, present and future, of communications.

Effects employ motion pictures, stage settings, lighting, special scenery, optical illusions and multiple screens.

The building also will feature demonstrations of how computers work, phone-vision of the future, how light waves carry sound, tricks with sound.

4 Different Languages

Ford—One of the most ingenious tours at the fair is a "time tunnel" created by Disney. Visitors will sit in 1964-model automobiles for a trip into the past and future. Music and commentary will flow from radios in the cars. There are pushbuttons for four different languages.

The tour begins in the prehistoric past.

Du Pont—A combination of arts has been devised to dramatize "the wonderful world of chemistry." Live actors will sing, dance and talk on a stage with life-sized figures projected by motion picture. A screen character will hand a rose to a live performer; a live actor blows out candles on a screen cake and splashes frosting on another live performer.

Lunar Landscape

Eastman Kodak—A simulated lunar landscape has been created atop the Kodak building to provide a setting for unusual photographs by visitors. Towering above will be a display of giant photographic color transparencies.

Hall of Science—Audio and visual demonstrations of a variety of scientific subjects: a simulated rendezvous of full-sized manned orbital space vehicles, how the brain works, the molecular activity which creates and sustains life, the science of color, a simulated atomic laboratory for children only to enter and operate, the chemistry of the sea, a modern airport control tower and how it works.

Radio Corp. of America—Color television shows produced on the spot. Visitors can see themselves on color television.

U. S. Space Park—Display of some of the nation's most powerful rockets, an X15 plane, and models of moon exploratory equipment.

Mobs in Attack Upon Policemen In Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Hurting bottles, bricks and taunts of derision, mobs Friday night and Saturday attacked police in outbursts of violence on Los Angeles' teeming South Side.

The incidents occurred as a huge force of sheriff's vice officers were raiding a nearby section where citizens had called a mass meeting to discuss lawlessness they said was out of hand.

In the mob violence two officers were injured, four police vehicles damaged and six persons arrested.

Vice raiders arrested 110 persons on charges ranging from narcotics to armed robbery.

the federally aided programs. Federal insurance and guaranty programs are not covered by this provision.

Rules set up by agencies to carry out the title must be approved by the President.

Any agency cutting off aid must first conduct a hearing and report to Congress on its intentions 30 days before action is taken.

A state or local government authority affected by such a decision may obtain a court review.

Equal Employment Opportunity

Employers and unions with specified numbers of employees and members are prohibited from discriminating against any individual in any phase of employment or union membership.

The provision does not take effect until one year after the bill becomes law. In the first year after this, the title applies to employers and unions with 100 or more workers and members. In the second year, those with 75 or more are covered, in the third year those with 50 or more, and in the fourth year those with 25 or more.

An equal employment commission with five members, not more than three from one political party, is created to administer the program.

The commission may act on a complaint filed by an aggrieved person or by one of its own members.

The commission shall first try to end a discriminatory practice by conciliation, but shall have power to bring injunction suits.

The U. S. agency must work with state or local bodies where it finds they are proceeding effectively to end discrimination in employment.

Registration and voting statistics

The U. S. Census Bureau is required to compile registration and voting statistics on the basis of geographic areas, including a count of persons of voting age by race, color and national origin, as recommended by the Civil Rights Commission.

Appeals in Civil Rights Cases

A defendant who has sought removal of a civil rights suit from a state court to a federal district court may appeal to the U. S. Court of Appeals an order of the federal district court returning the case to the state court.

State Solons Travel To Madison to End Lawmaking Term

Redistricting Question Still High on Record Setting Agenda

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

MADISON — The most durable session of the state legislature in state history will resume its deliberations Monday afternoon. It will be the fourth segment of the biennial legislative session that began in January of 1963 and will take up a package of difficult and controversial matters that its members were unable to resolve in three previous sittings.

Dominating the calendar of unfinished business is the issue of legislative reapportionment, which has agitated the politicians for three years, and which now promises to be concluded only because the two houses are under command of the State Supreme Court to write a redistricting act before May 1.

If the Senate and the Assembly and Gov. John W. Reynolds achieve such an act by that time, the court has declared it will undertake the job—for the first time.

Dozens of other familiar subjects, many of them significant or interesting, will be on the legislators' desks and may be acted upon if the maneuvering on the difficult redistricting issue does not occupy most of the session time.

Because the legislators will be serving in Madison without the extra compensation they were paid earlier on such occasions, there may be a tendency to abbreviate the deliberations. Republican majority party leaders have expressed hopes of ending the session by May 1, on the assumption that the redistricting problem can be resolved by that date.

One of the major incidental subjects will be a reduction in the state sales tax schedule, as a result of improved state revenue collections. Gov. Reynolds and the Democrats will push for the elimination of the 3 per cent sales tax on household electricity bills, as a popular item during an election campaign year. Some of the cautious Republicans believe a more prudent course would be to build a small surplus in the treasury against an inevitable budget deficit next year, but they are privately contending that they probably won't be able to hold the votes for such a proposal. Their rank and file followers will find the idea of tax relief an appealing one in a campaign season also, it is felt.

Resume Quarrel

As in previous segments of the 1963 session, there will be a resumption of quarrelling between the Republican State Senate and Democratic Gov. Reynolds on the confirmation of the governor's appointments to state boards and commissions and other state administrative positions.

Republicans thus far have refused to seat most of the governor's appointments intended to replace hold-over officials, which the governor has denounced as a partisan conspiracy to deprive him of his constitutional rights. But there is no sign that the Republicans intend to budget. If they do not, Reynolds intends to bring the question to the Supreme Court in a new lawsuit after the law-makers close the session.

The redistricting problem involves political and constitutional considerations, but most legislators and other politicians are aware that it has only scanty public interest. The issue is complex and on the face of it not immediately important in changing the balance of political power in the legislature. Redistricting Here is the situation in brief: The Supreme Court has invalidated the existing districting law, so that a new system must be devised. Republicans have already adopted one bill to transfer two up-state Assembly seats to fast growing Waukesha County, but Reynolds declined to sign it.

Reynolds wants two more un-state seats transferred to Milwaukee County, which the Republicans thus far have declined to approve.

The prospect now is for a Republican compromise offer in the way of two additional seats for Waukesha County, and one additional seat for Milwaukee — for a total of 25 in the metropolis. Reynolds will veto that bill, whereupon the Republicans will be unable to muster enough votes to enact it into law in spite of his objections because the Democratic minority will be under strong pressure in a campaign season to back up the governor and titular leader of the state Democratic party.

Thus the issue will be brought to the Supreme Court, in all probability, with uncertain results. The court in an earlier case indicated, according to a widespread interpretation, that it would be agreeable to a 25 seat Milwaukee apportionment. That would have the effect of vindicating the Republican proposal — if it comes to pass — although the Republicans might very well be blamed in the next campaign for their inability to put such a program through the legislature they control.

Suburbia

The redistricting issue is no longer the one of rural versus urban and conservative versus liberal power that it once was. The new Milwaukee seats, for example, are very likely to be held by Republican suburban legislators, according to recent voting trends.

The problem is that from eight to a dozen legislators in any reapportionment must vote to abolish their own seats, or to change the boundaries of their own districts in such a way as to be disadvantageous to themselves, as they see it. Some of the out-state Democrats are equally cool about the redistricting process, for the same reason.

The program the governor wants would reshuffle rural areas in the northeastern counties, in reluctantly, and only if it must

Chilton Firemen Halt Blaze Near City Dump

CHILTON — Firemen were summoned to a fire at 2:50 p.m. Wednesday at the city dump four miles southeast of here. Fire Chief Norbert Sturm stated the fire started at the dump and spread to a nearby field. About two acres of dry grass burned, he said. No damage was done by the blaze, which took about one hour to extinguish, the Chief stated.

In the northwest, southwest, and in far northern Douglas County, to provide four additional lower house seats for Milwaukee and Waukesha counties. Senate districts would automatically be adjusted also, with complications in local party and candidate competition.

In Green County, for example, newly elected Republican Assemblyman Fred Galli as nearly his first official act will be called upon to vote for a bill, to annex his county to LaFayette, almost certainly against the wishes of his constituents.

Veteran Democratic Assemblyman W. W. Ward of St. Croix County, which would be combined with neighboring Pierce County under such a plan, has already announced that his constituents didn't send him to Madison to "liquidate" his district. But unless those men and others can be induced to vote, against their neighborhood interests as they see them, the legislature will be held in default and the job will pass to the Supreme Court which has indicated that it will undertake it.

The Supreme Court which has indicated that it will undertake it in the northeastern counties, in reluctantly, and only if it must tion is to be considered by the young man?

First, however, he must consider the draft, the law, and the terms of his military obligation.

He may decide to sit back and await the call to military service. In point of legal fact, he could be drafted by any of the services. Each has the right, although presently only the Army is drafting servicemen. It is unlikely that this will be changed.

Today, the law provides that every unmarried man between the ages of 18 and 26 has incurred an obligation to serve his country for a total of six years. The proviso is that he be mentally and physically able to pass both a mental and a physical examination.

On a fairly well established average, the young draftee probably will not be called until about six months after his 18th birthday. He is then examined physically in Milwaukee and if he is in acceptable physical condition, it is possible (though unlikely) that he will be immediately impressed into active service.

Little Choice

It is more likely that he will return home and will not be called for as many as six months or as few as three. When called, he goes into two full years of active, full-time duty.

It is also probable that the draftee will have little if any choice in the scope or the training to which he will be assigned. Nor will he have any selection as to the camp to which he will be sent. From the immediate region, however, most draftees go to Fort Riley, Kans., or Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., but there is no assurance that this will be so in the future.

Now in the Army, the draftee will serve two full years on active duty. When discharged, he is obliged to join one of the reserves where he will function as a citizen — soldier, attending once-weekly classes and spending two full weeks (not more than 17 days each year) at camp.

Reserves

He will then be a Reservist and he will remain a Reservist until he has completed his four additional years of training which will then total six and complete his military obligation.

The Reserves and Reserve activities will be considered in a later article.

The Volunteer

When the citizen reaches his 18th year and has graduated from high school, he may find it well in his particular case to anticipate the draft. He may volunteer.

Presuming momentarily that he will choose to volunteer for service in the Army (though the other armed forces are available to him and will be considered later in this series), he gains strong advantages:

(a) He may volunteer for specific technical training and in the Reserves for only three — if he is physically able and his aptitude tests indicate he will do well in the course he has chosen — the chances are good that the volunteer will be assigned.

(b) If he is not apt in the field he has chosen and will not be assigned to it, he may withdraw and await the draft. This is advantageous because a volunteer must enlist for a minimum of three years; a draftee must serve on active duty for two.

Differences

(c) The volunteer picks up the thread of his six-year obligation at an earlier date and completes his duties at an earlier age. The volunteer (for three years) is required to serve

(d) If the volunteer chooses to serve the Army as (1) Infantryman, (2) Armored or (3) Artilleryman he may also choose the foreign area in which he will serve — either Europe or the Far East.

(e) The volunteer may choose the branch of the service he wishes and will be so assigned.

(f) The volunteer may — in some cases — indicate the time he will report for duty on active service.
